Madden Flays Leiserson for Move to Oust NLRB Aide

Chairman Tells House Committee Colleague Made Intemperate Charge

In a calm, even tone that lent emphasis to his words, Chairman J. Warren Madden, of the National Labor Relations Board, yesterday told the Smith committee that certain statements of his colleague, Dr. William M. Leiserson, were "extreme," "intemperate," and "completely unsupported."

Breaking away from the mass of facts and figures which he has been offering the committee during the last two days, Madden declared he was at a loss to understand "the campaign of memoranda" Leiserson has conducted against NLRB Secretary Nathan Witt.

Witt sat quietly at a nearby table as he heard his chief warmly defend him as "an honest, competent public servant," and disavow any effort to drive him from his place.

Leiserson's memoranda attacking Witt and revelation of his attempts to obtain the secretary's dismissal were the sensation of the opening days of the Smith Committee's hearings in December.

'Intemperate Statements'

"Never in my life have I faced anything as difficult to understand as this problem of Mr. Leiserson's relation to the secretary's office," said Madden. The chairman declared that he had Witt and Mrs. Beatrice Stern, assistant secretary, "under the most careful observation for four years and had every reason to suppose that I knew whether they were handling their work efficiently . . . impartially and fairly."

"And then came a new person to the board, who didn't know these people at all—and almost from the first day he began to make these intemperate statements and characterizations of their work," continued the chairman, referring to the fact that Leiserson joined the board as "trouble-shooter" last June.

"I of course asked for evidence for those statements," said Madden, "and I got no response either then or at any time since."

Madden declared the committee investigators had properly used Leiserson's memoranda as clues through which to find evidence of Witt's incompetence. But, challenged the witness, "they are just as much in the dark as I am and as you gentlemen of the committee must be as to why these completely unsupported inferences were cast on the secretary's office and on Mr. Witt."

Not Changed by Testimony

In response to a question of Chairman Smith of the committee, Madden asserted that his opinion of Witt had not been changed by any testimony during the hearings, but he said he had been "considerably disturbed by some of the evidence concerning some members of our staff."

Pointing out that he was not surprised that some faults were bared in the "exhaustive examination of the papers of many hundreds" of persons on the NLRB staff, Madden declared that "I don't mean to minimize the disturbance some of this has caused me."

Leiserson's refusal to participate in certain decisions because preliminary consideration had begun before his appointment "very seriously inconvenienced the board," declared Madden, who termed the situation "outrageous."

A memorandum by Leiserson characterizing as "stupid nonsense" some proposed board rules drawn up by NLRB General Counsel Charles Fahy also aroused Madden's ire. With Fahy sitting across the table from him, the board chairman asserted that "anyone who would say such a thing about data submitted by our general counsel is

U. S. May Fly German Serum Past Blockade for Child Here

Three-year-old Leslie Lee Ross plays with her dolls in Children's Hospital, unaware that she is a victim of dread leukemia and that the Nation's diplomats are trying to get a serum sent from Germany to save her life

By Gerald G. Gross

War took a back seat yesterday while the State Department went into action to try to help save the life of a 3-year-old District girl threatened by leukemia.

Leslie Lee Ross, daughter of Leslie Edward Ross, of 303 LeBlond avenue, Cheverly, Md., has been in Children's Hospital a week suffering from the disease, believed to be of the almost invariably fatal lymphatic type. Yesterday her uncle, Nelson Grant Tayman, an engineer on the Thomas Circle project, remembered reading of a serum to combat the malady developed by a German blood chemist at Frankfort-on-Main.

He went with his plea for help to the German Embassy, where he was told it would be impossible to get a shipment of the serum through the blockade and was advised to consult the State Department. There a cable was dispatched at once to the United States Consul at Frankfort asking that a sufficient dosage be sent by clipper plane. A reply is expected tomorrow.

Leslie Lee, who was "pretty

Senator Byrnes Blocks Hazen Confirmation

Officials Recall Carolina Policeman Was Demoted Here

Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, yesterday blocked confirmation of Melvin C. Hazen in the Senate for a third term as District Commissioner.

Though Byrnes declined to give his reason for the move, it was generally believed in informed circles that it was the result of the recent demotion of a native South Carolinian from detective sergeant to police private. Byrnes said he was awaiting a reply to a letter he had dispatched to Hazen and would decide after receiving it what he would do about withdrawing his objection.

Commissioner Hazen at his office told reporters he had received Senator Byrnes' letter "five minutes" before his confirmation was blocked. He refused to discuss its contents.

Hauptmann's Son Awarded $23,500 For Crash Hurts

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 1.—A supreme court jury today awarded Manfried Hauptmann, 6-year-old son of the Lindbergh baby kidnaper, $23,500 for injuries he received when he was struck by the automobile of Cartoonist Frank Moser, May 5, 1938.

The jury also awarded $2,000 to the boy's mother, Mrs. Bruno Richard Hauptmann. Mrs. Hauptmann had asked $100,000 damages, charging Moser with negligence and contending the boy was rendered epileptic and permanently injured.

House Inquiry On Aged Home Called Today

Crime Breeds

Investigation Begins

Representative D'Alesandro (Democrat), of Maryland, conferred yesterday with Robert E. Bondy, director of public welfare, after calling a meeting of the subcommittee on public health of the House District Committee for 11 a. m. today.

Preparing to conduct an investigation of the Home for the Aged and Infirm at Blue Plains and probably other welfare institutions, D'Alesandro earlier sent Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt an invitation to testify as the first witness.

D'Alesandro said the subcommittee wished to hear Mrs. Roosevelt before launching its own investigation as she had called public attention to conditions at Blue Plains.

First Lady to Be Away

He suggested Saturday evening as a convenient time, but at the White House it was said that Mrs. Roosevelt would be in Hyde Park over the week-end and would not return to Washington until Monday.

While the letter mentioned only Blue Plains, D'Alesandro has indicated that the inquiry will cover also the Children's Receiving Home and the Industrial Home School.

House Storm Rages Over Dies Forgery

Voorhis Discloses David Mayne Was Sent to Hunt Pelley On Committee Funds

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

A torrent of bitter verbiage over the Dies Committee was followed in the House yesterday with the disclosure that David Mayne, who has said he forged letters intended to reflect on Dies, was at one time in the committee's service.

Representative Voorhis (Democrat), of California, chairman of the Dies subcommittee appointed last fall to find the Silver Shirt leader, William Dudley Pelley, stated that Mayne was given expenses for a trip to Asheville, N. C., to try to locate Pelley.

At the same time, Voorhis and other committee members vehemently asserted that they had no knowledge of Mayne's "forgeries" until the letters were first presented to the House by Representative Hook (Democrat), of Michigan, on January 22.

Voorhis' speech terminated a tempestuous debate in which Representative Hook vainly attempted to withdraw from the Congressional Record the "Pelley letters" he had inserted. Admitting that he doubted the authenticity of the letters which Mayne says he forged, Hook asked unanimous consent to strike them from his January 22 address, pending decision by the Department of Justice as to whether they were genuine.

Blocks Withdrawal

But Representative Keefe (Republican), of Wisconsin, objected, thus blocking the withdrawal and paving the way for formal House action expunging the letters next week.

Denouncing Hook's "reservations" regarding the forgeries, Keefe waved one of the original documents before the House and roared that "the simplest individual in the world could look at that instrument and see something phoney about it." The letter in question was written on plain paper, but had a "Silver Legion" letterhead pasted to it.

Keefe's blast at Hook brought Representative Marcantonio (American Labor), of New York, to his feet with a clipping from a New York newspaper alleging that Mayne had been making reports to the Dies Committee at the same time he was arranging to sell the forged documents to Harold Weisberg and Gardner Jackson, who ultimately turned them over to Hook.

Asserting that he "refused to believe" that Dies Committee members would be guilty of the "type of trickery" the newspaper article described, Marcantonio demanded

D. C. Cream Price Raised 3c a Pint

13 Cents a Quart Rate Is Set for Maryland Milk to Meet Higher Costs

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

Cream prices in the District were increased 3 cents a pint yesterday, and suburban consumers in nearby Maryland will pay 13 cents a quart for milk beginning today.

Independent and organized distributors in the Washington milkshed agreed to the increases yesterday to meet increased costs to producers under the new United States marketing order which became effective yesterday.

The new cream prices are general with all local dairies, it was announced, with increases of 1 to 3 cents, depending upon quantities purchased. Gills, formerly 10 cents, will be 11 cents; half-pints jumped from 15 to 17 cents and pints went from 27 to 30 cents.

$50,000 Loss Is Possible

Because the marketing agreement raises the price distributors must pay to producers, independent dairies in suburban Maryland—which charged from 11 to 14 cents a quart for milk—will establish today a 13-cent rate, according to Linwood E. Lagerson, counsel for Holbrook Farms Dairy.

He said his company would stand to lose $50,000 a year under the order because of existing contracts with producers.

"We don't feel we can stand the entire load," said Lagerson, "and yet we don't want to pass the whole burden on to the consumer."

In fixing the 13-cent milk price, he added, the company decided to absorb as much of the differential in producers' prices as possible.

Price Here Not Affected

Although the order establishes a minimum price scale to producers, it will not affect the retail price of fluid milk in Washington. Independent dairies in suburban sections of Maryland have always paid less to producers than the new agreement requires, but now must pay the same as city distributors.

The order does not affect Virginia prices because distribution is governed by the Virginia Milk Commission.

In discussing the new prices for Maryland, Lagerson said his company felt also that suburban consumers should be permitted to take advantage of 5-cent "relief" milk—proposed rate to underprivileged groups—which the marketing agreement now makes possible in Washington.

Relief Sale Plan Drafted

"We are going to try and see to it that our consumers have the benefit of this cheap milk," he said. "Maryland, we feel, should be permitted to share in this project."

Yesterday, Welfare Director Robert E. Bondy prepared tentative plans for the sale of 5-cent milk in the District. Although the new marketing agreement opens the door for this relief program, Bondy said it would be several weeks before details can be ironed out.

It appeared, he said that Congress may have to grant funds for distribution expenses because the Welfare Department has none.

A series of conferences was begun yesterday between the welfare

Reds Launch Offensive Along Entire Front as Finns Repeat Peace Bid

Kallio Asks Soviets End 'This Barbaric, Senseless Attack' in An Honorable Way

By the Associated Press

Helsinki, Feb. 1.—Kyosti Kallio, Finland's white-haired President, voiced tonight another offer from his valiantly struggling nation to conclude "an honorable peace" with Russia and end this "barbaric, senseless, attack."

The President used the final, solemn session of the war Diet as a sounding board for his plea, but it really was addressed to the Soviet government, which does not recognize his government and which does not even admit it is "waging a war against Finland." Russia invaded Finland two months ago.

Firmly and proudly Kallio insisted, despite the second peace offer, that Finland will not cringe before "imperialistic aims." He reiterated in general the previous offer of peaceful negotiations made on December 15 by Foreign Minister Tanner, in a broadcast message to Soviet Premier Molotoff.

"Peaceful and Friendly"

The only reply was an authorized Moscow statement dealing with Russia's expulsion from the League of Nations which said the Soviet-proclaimed "people's government" was the only one Moscow recognized in Finland and that Russia's relations with this co-called regime were "peaceful and friendly." Soviet statements usually refer to the Kallio government and its armies as "Finnish White Guards."

Kallio, expressing Finland's thanks for foreign aid, especially Sweden's, declared:

"We sincerely hope the term 'humanitarian help' may be made to cover civilian air defense and anti-aircraft equipment, and that such help may be given us for protection of the population behind the front from an aggressor who uses the air force in a most inhuman manner against civilians."

Refers to Treaty Violations

"Sweden," he went on, "has shown her identity of fate with us. In addition to bountiful material help, well-equipped volunteer forces have come from there to help us."

The President spoke of the collapse of negotiations preceding the Russian invasion, and said, that despite Finland's readiness to make "heavy sacrifices" to keep the peace she was invaded within two weeks by a government which "unilaterally violated every agreement concluded with Finland."

Now, he said, "we are forced to destroy people innocent of this war, people we have no reason to hate as a nation. For this reason we regard this barbarous attack as senseless and are ready to negotiate an honorable peace."

The President paid warm tribute to the unity of Diet and government—"a more harmonious page," he said, "surely never has been written before in the history of the Finnish Parliament."

Finally, he asserted, the Finnish leadership "have an unshakable inner conviction that the heart of the people in defense of our rights has beaten in time with ours."

Armored Sledges, Planes Batter at Mannerheim Line in Vain, Helsinki Says

By Wade Werner.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Helsinki (Friday), Feb. 2.—The Russian army struck with surprise force at the Mannerheim Line last night, employing a new offensive technique with armored sledges supported by 130 battle planes.

The Red army, which has been playing dead on the Karelian Isthmus since mid-January while fierce battles were waged along the Arctic Circle and north of Lake Ladoga, suddenly came to life with a violent onslaught aimed at Viipuri, Finland's second largest city.

The Red army of the Karelian Isthmus, using swarms of armored sledges propelled by tanks and supported by 130 fighting and bombing planes, smashed suddenly and violently after six hours of artillery preparation.

Riflemen on Sledges

It was an entirely new technique for the Russians.

Instead of letting their tanks go forward by themselves, the Soviet command equipped each with an armored sledge which carried both machine-gunners and riflemen.

The tanks pushed the sledges into battle; the men on the sledges protected the tanks against Finnish hand-grenade throwers.

Finnish artillery scored direct hits on columns of field batteries, tanks, armored cars and infantry units before they could be brought into position, Finnish officers said.

Two Soviet observation balloons and one plane were shot down.

The attack was made at Summa, 20 miles inland from the coastal fortress of Koivisto, which has withstood nine weeks of hammering from land and naval artillery and aerial bombardment.

Finns Hold on Doggedly

Advices from observers with the Finns' Karelian army said the attack continued early today, with the entrenched Finns holding doggedly to their positions 20 miles south of Viipuri.

The Russians began digging in on the Karelian front last month. Wednesday night Gen. Hugo Ostermann, Finnish commander-in-chief, declared the war had been reduced to a "war of position" in that area.

The Karelian attack coincided with a Finnish army communique which indicated the Rusians are attempting to resume the offensive all along the line, from the Arctic to Lake Ladoga.

The communique told of the repulse of Russian attacks in the Arctic Petsamo area, on the Salla front, and on an island off the northeastern shore of Lake Ladoga, in which the Red army suffered "heavy losses."

Air Raids Continue

The Russian land attacks were bolstered by increased bombing attacks on Hanka, Kotka and Turku in southern Finland, and Rovaniemi in the north.

Helsinki's first midnight air raid alarm chased the citizens out of bed into shelters at 12:05 a. m. today. No planes were sighted and the alarm was ended after 20 minutes.

Several buildings were set afire by incendiary bombs at Rovaniemi. Early reports indicated few persons were killed.

Dispatches from Tallinn tended to support reports that Soviet air bases in Estonia had been damaged by bombs from a fleet of 34 Finnish planes. At Baltiski, one Soviet air base, several planes and hangars were reported destroyed. The coastal city of Kuiessar and the air base islands of Oesel and Dajo are

Nazis Deny Intent to Draw Balkans in War

Russia, Germany Seek Stable Peace There, Von Ribbentrop Says

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Feb. 1.—Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop today disclaimed any intention on the part of Germany and Russia to draw the Balkans into the Allied-German war.

In an interview given the correspondent of a Greek newspaper for publication tomorrow, Von Ribbentrop said both nations are making every effort to spare the southeastern European states the horrors of war and are working actively to establish a stable peace there.

It was considered significant that his words were timed for publication simultaneously with the opening tomorrow of the Belgrade conference of Balkan Entente members—Turkey, Yugoslavia, Rumania and Greece.

Meanwhile, an Italian press campaign urging territorial revision in the Balkans is regarded in Germany merely as an effort to keep the revision issue alive.

"Our impression is that Italy is not forcing the issue and has no desire to disturb the Balkan Entente conference at Belgrade," Nazi informants commented.

On the other hand, it was charged that the British hoped the possibilities for the spread of the war

Mr. Groundhog, Tasty Morsel, Will Run the Gantlet Today

Groundhog, groundhog, in the hole, Papa catch him with a pole, Mama cook him in a pan, Baby eat him like a man.

Those may be fighting words to woodchuck worshipers, but, take it from an authority, the rodent in question isn't good for weather prognosticating or anything else—except eatin'.

"Right you are, tomorrow is Groundhog Day," Dr. W. B. Bell, wildlife research chief of Biological Survey, said yesterday. "Well, as a weather forecaster, Mr. Groundhog makes a mighty savory dish, especially stewed."

Dr. Bell went on to dwell at such length upon the gustatory virtues of the headliner of February 2 that at least one person is going to station himself at a groundhog hole this morning and when the tenant emerges to see his shadow—zowie!

"The meat is dark and as tasty as squirrel or rabbit," Dr. Bell declared. "It is very fine eating, indeed. I don't know of its ever being featured on restaurant menus, but that is probably due to an undeserved prejudice." His groundhog rhapsody depicted the creature as a clean living vegetarian which doesn't really become a pest until its numbers become too abundant in a given locality. Then its crop depredations and field burrowing — occasionally a head of livestock steps in a hole and breaks a leg—develop into a wholesale nuisance.

"And the only contributions the woodchuck makes to anyone else's welfare," said Dr. Bell, "are the holes he digs, which are often used by rabbits and squirrels as refuge shelters, and the. succulence of his flesh."

Leaders Honor Supreme Court On Its 150th Anniversary

The United States Supreme Court, passing the half-way mark in its second century, heard yesterday that its wisdom and courage await renewed and "severe" testing.

Attorney General Robert Jackson warned that time sharpens "the tensions and conflicts of our society . . . the disparity between underlying economic and social conditions." The court's task of adjustment grows "more urgent, more extensive and more delicate," he declared.

Jackson's address opened sesquicentennial services in the imposing courtroom. Eight justices of the high court took their places at the Honduras mahogany bench as the crier spoke the closing words of his traditional greeting:

"God save the United States and this honorable court!"

The 150th anniversary of the court's first session drew to the marble palace on Capitol Hill an audience of 400, including a frock-coated delegation from the Senate and House, relatives and friends of the justices, leaders of the national and local bar and two direct descendants of the first Chief Justice, John Jay.

Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, responding to the addresses of Jackson and President Charles A. Beardsley, of the American Bar Association, said the future of the American system of government "does not rest with this court but with the people who have created that system."

He quoted from Chief Justice John Marshall: "The people made the Constitution, and the people can unmake it. It is the creature of their will and lives only by their will."

Hughes leaned well forward in his black leather upholstered chair.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

THE POLITICAL LOWDOWN

JOB UNWANTED: Once again a great corporation has offered Jim Farley a job at $50,000 to $75,000 a year, and he'd be worth it. But the Postmaster General has definitely said No.

Harlan Miller

That means he's concentrating on another $75,000 job. You know which one.

CAMPAIGN CLUES: Steve Early is again thinking of leaving the White House secretariat this spring to take one of three private jobs above $25,000.

His departure would be a hint that FDR isn't third-terming.

RUMORS that Paul McNutt might resign have floated around the Capital for several days.

It isn't so. The shooting has been heavy, "but McNutt isn't ducking," says his FSA general counsel, Fowler Harper, and all's serene around the little courtyard near the Potomac.

Off the record, both Treasury and Justice said yesterday that McNutt isn't even ankle deep in the 2 per cent club probe.

LABOR VOTE: Despite John L. Lewis' plunking for Wheeler, it's doubtful that half of his 4,000,000 would go with him.

Roosevelt always rubs Lewis the wrong way. A chat at the White House between them is like a meeting between Chaliapin and Caruso. But the dislike won't prevent an armistice later.

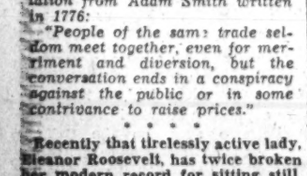
WASHTUB VOTE: The White House arithmetic experts are inclined to revise upward the number of votes needed to win the Presidency this year. Their figure was 17,000,000; it may rise above 20,000,000, or well above their former minumum estimate for the G. O. P. vote.



"—he mixed his drinks"

Their assumption is that even Charlie McCarthy as a G. O. P. nominee would draw at least the usual 17,000,000 votes.

To beat this the President feels the Democrats need a candidate who can magnetize the washtub vote through election day slush to the polls. He still feels no other man has shown enough oomph to do this.

STRONG DRINK: The Swiss Minister, Charles Bruggmann, has an occasional tussle with American idiom, which he is gradually mastering with the aid of the radio.

After a stag dinner recently he told Madame Bruggmann that he had tasted a new beverage.

"They gave us Chipso instead of coffee," he said.

For a moment she was shocked. Then with womanly intuition she realized:

"Oh, you mean Sanka!"

Wallace Puts Heat on House, Woodrum Says

Only $126,000 Restored To Farm Bill in Voting; Final Drive Today

By Robert C. Albright

Post Staff Writer

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace yesterday was accused of threatening and "turning the heat" on Congress as the House economy bloc rallied to the defense of farm bill cuts.

A farm drive backed by Wallace to return at least half of the $154,530,000 agriculture bill slash netted only $126,800 gain in the first day of voting.

While economy and farm bloc members clashed hotly on the floor, a House Appropriations sub-committee struck approximately $2,300,000 from the State, Justice and Commerce bill.

Accused by Woodrum

Fourth appropriation measure with below-budget cuts, the three-department bill will be moved into the House next week. The economy pace continued in the Senate, where the $57,541,300 urgent deficiency bill was passed, some $2,000,000 under the President's estimates.

House farm leaders, meanwhile, mustered strength for a final effort today to salvage farm tenant, sugar benefits and food stamp funds eliminated from the bill by the Appropriations Committee.

The attack on Wallace was delivered by Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, a ranking member of the Appropriations Committee, who termed recent press conference remarks by the Agriculture Secretary "in the most questionable taste."

Wallace charged unnamed members of the House with "attempting to scuttle the farm program" and warned that the farmers would hold them responsible at the polls. He suggested the farmers would vote in November for "those who take care of them."

"Just Wondering"

"I deprecate the statement of a Cabinet officer made if not for the purpose, certainly with the effect of turning the heat on the legislative branch of the Government," said Woodrum.

"I believe the House and the Senate in their ultimate good judgment will just about come as near knowing what is good for the agricultural population of the United States as Mr. Wallace."

The Virginian said he was "just wondering whether someone is getting ready to have an alibi," declaring it is "not because of Congress" or lack of funds if the farm program has failed.

"I deprecate the fact that we are here legislating for ballots in November," said Woodrum. "Unhappily we have done too much of that. Unhappily we have hopped the farmer up with dope just before election every time."

Called "Unfortunate"

He said Wallace is calling on the farmers "to arm themselves and march on Washington and to remember they are balloting in November." Terming it "unfortunate" that Wallace should "inject himself into this situation and do it with a threat," he said farmers eventually would realize that "feeding them so much dope" is not doing them a service.

The Woodrum sally drew a swift retort from Representative Cooley (Democrat), of North Carolina, who charged the Appropriations Committee with "nullifying the acts of the House."

"I do not like the idea of a Cabinet officer intimidating and coercing members of the House," said Cooley. "But neither do I like to see the Appropriations Committee setting itself up as a super-legislative committee and offering up the American farmer as the first sacrifice on the altar of false economy."

Cooley said he had never heard "one word on behalf of the farmers from Woodrum."

Major Attempts Today

Out of 7 proposed amendments to the bill, only one was adopted in the first day's tilt. Offered by Chairman Jones of the Agriculture Committee, it increased from $100,000 to $226,800 the item for dry land agriculture experiment sattions. The vote was close, 106 to 96.

Representative Crowe (Democrat), of Indiana, led another farm bloc effort to increase funds for acquisition of national forests from $1,000,000 to $3,000,000. This was defeated, 84 to 36.

The farm bloc's major attempts for recapture of funds will be made today. A move by Representative Pace (Democrat), of Georgia, to reclaim $72,678,812 for farm surplus disposal and the food stamp plan would collide with a point of order. Other amendments on which farm members are more hopeful include $47,975,000 to continue sugar benefits, $25,000,000 for the farm tenant program, and $500,000 for farm water facilities appropriations.

The Justice Department was said to be hardest hit of the three departments trimmed in the subcommittee vote on the State, Justice and Commerce bill. But anti-trust division funds were reported increased over the Budget figure, and the full Budget figure for J. Edgar Hoover's G-men was granted. State Department estimates reputedly took only slight cuts.

The Gallup Poll

Labor Sentiment for Democrats Drops, But Nearly Three-Fifths Favor 3d Term

By Dr. George Gallup

Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 1.—John L. Lewis's open breach with the Roosevelt Administration and his refusal to indorse the President for a third term raises the vital political question, where do labor union members stand on President Roosevelt today?

DR. GALLUP

Throughout the course of its national surveys of public opinion, the American Institue regularly samples the opinions of labor union members in all States. Its staff of more than 700 interviewers sounds labor sentiment in all the principal labor centers such as Youngstown, Cleveland, Detroit, Toledo, Pittsburgh, Indianapolis, Akron, Gary, New York, San Francisco, Boston and other cities.

The results of these surveys show that among the labor union members included in the sample, sentiment is pro-Roosevelt and pro-Democratic, despite attacks on the New Deal by Lewis and other leaders. Nearly three-fifths of those polled favor a Roosevelt third term, and an even greater majority say they want to see the Democratic Party win the Presidential election.

However, the trend of sentiment among labor union members is less Democratic today than it was at the time of the 1936 election. The majorities which today favor a Roosevelt third term or a Democratic victory are not as large as the majority given President Roosevelt when he ran in 1936. The survey finds that 80 per cent of those labor union members reached in the study voted for Roosevelt in that year.

Labor union sentiment today is reflected in surveys on the following specific issues:

"If President Roosevelt runs for a third term, will you vote for him?"
Would Vote For Roosevelt... 59%
Would Vote Against..... 41

Only a small proportion—10 per cent—expressed no opinion.

Would Like Democrats to Win 66%
Would Like Republicans to Win 34

The above is the vote of those holding opinions on the subject. Approximately two in ten—18 per cent—expressed no opinion.

These results indicate that while there is a far-sized opposition to a Roosevelt third term among labor union members, nevertheless the majority are still pro-Democratic in their leanings though much less so than in 1936. Will Lewis, with his attacks on the President, be able to swing labor sentiment away from the New Dealers? The course of events in the coming months will provide the answer. The full effect of Lewis' recent statements is not reflected in today's study, though the results indicate that the C. I. O. leader may face an uphill fight at the start. New surveys will be conducted in the coming months to chart the trend of sentiment and the reaction to Lewis' activities.

Third-Term Bid Would Wreck Party, Senator Smith Says

By the Associated Press

Senator Ellison D. (Cotton Ed) Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, jumped into the fight against a third term yesterday with a statement that "Roosevelt may be renominated, but if he is—good-by Democratic Party as it has been known all these years."

The 75-year-old dean of the Senate called on his party to nominate a man who would do a drastic job of eliminating or altering New Deal agencies, which, he said, violate "the basic principles of the Constitution."

While Smith was giving his views to reporters, the Alaskan delegate to Congress, Anthony J. Dimond, announced that he had notified President Roosevelt that the first delegates chosen to go to the next Democratic National Convention—six from Alaska—were pledged to the President for a third term.

Farley Their Second Choice

Dimond said that in case the President did not run, the delegation was pledged to Postmaster General Farley as second choice.

Other political developments:

Ed A. Carroll, Democratic national committeeman from Washington State, said the far West favored President Roosevelt running for a third term. He said he believed that, second to Roosevelt, the area favored Vice President Garner or Farley.

Guffey Flays Annenberg

The Senate's attention was called to a bitter political fight in Pennsylvania when Senator Guffey (Democrat), a candidate for renomination, arose to denounce M. L. Annenberg, publisher of the Philadelphia Inquirer.

The newspaper ha referred to Guffey as a "tarnished apostle of Democracy" who was subordinating the interests of his party to get himself renominated and to "serve Boss (John L.) Lewis." The paper warned that a Guffey renomination would "complete the wreckage of the Democratic Party" in the State.

Replying yesterday, Guffey said that Annenberg owns the Republican leadership in Pennsylvania "body and soul" and is now out to wreck the Democratic Party.

Guffey Faces Hostility

By the Associated Press

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 1.—Senator Guffey will have to bridge three streams of discontent to obtain the indorsement of the Democratic State committee for reelection.

Opposition to Guffey's bid was classified by Democratic State Chairman Lawrence today in this way:

The "bitter-anti-Guffey" group which has spoken publicly against the Senator, largely because he led a bolt in the 1938 primary and blaming him for the subsequent defeat by the Republicans.

The "thousands of State employes who lost their jobs" after that defeat.

The "majority of the State committee members who feel Guffey is not the strongest candidate and can't win."

Lawrence expressed himself as frankly puzzled over the course of the committee's slate-indorsing meeting, here Saturday.

Wheeler Files for Senate

Helena, Mont., Jan. 31 (AP).—Senator Burton K. Wheeler today filed for renomination for Senator from Montana on the Democratic ticket. His petition was filed by J. Burke Clements, president of the Montana Wheeler-for-President Club.

On Capitol Hill

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, appealed to the Senate yesterday for an end to "carpetbag" governing of Alaska.

GRUENING

Just before the Senate confirmed the nomination of Ernst Gruening, of New York, to be Governor of the Territory, Vandenberg said:

"I have no objection to Mr. Gruening as a nominee under the prevailing practice of carpetbagging the Governorship of Alaska, but I wish to assert my belief that there is now a sufficiently civilized population in Alaska that they ought to be permitted to have one of their own residents as Governor."

The Senate confirmed the nomination of David J. Lewis, former member of the House from Maryland, to be a member of the National Mediation Board.

The Senate passed and sent to the House a bill permitting the Navy to accept without cost 16.4 acres of land on Floyd Bennett Field, New York, to use as a seaplane base for the neutrality patrol. A bill prohibiting employment of aliens in construction and installation of buildings in the Panama Canal military zone also was passed and sent to the House.

Another Senate bill, giving Government approval to plans of the United States-Mexican Boundary Commission in establishment of the Texas boundary, was passed.

Shuffle Gives Eccles 4 Years More in Office

Davis Resigns, Is Reappointed; Chief Gets Unexpired Term

By Felix Cotten.

Post Staff Writer

Chester C. Davis yesterday resigned from and was immediately reappointed to the Federal Reserve Board to permit President Roosevelt to reappoint Chairman Marriner S. Eccles for four years.

The President forwarded Eccles' nomination to the Senate to fill out Davis' unexpired term, which ends on February 1, 1944. Davis, then, was reappointed for a full term of 14 years.

Eccles is renamed merely as a member of the board. Following Senate confirmation, he will be redesignated as chairman. Since the Federal Reserve Act requires the President to designate the chairman for four-year periods, Eccles could not be reappointed to the board for less than four years.

Senate Speculation Ended

His reappointment, it is understood, ends speculation that he might enter the Democratic senatorial primary in Utah as an opponent of Senator King, chairman of the District Committee. Eccles, it is said, has no intention of running for the Senate.

Administration Democrats in Utah are reported to be looking for a New Dealer to run against King. Chairman Robert H. Hinckley of the Civil Aeronautics Authority and Representative Murdock, Utah, have been mentioned as possibilities. Hinckley, however, is said to have evinced unwillingness.

The President, appointed Claude R. Wickard, an Indiana grain and livestock farmer, as Undersecretary of Agriculture to succeed M. L. Wilson, who resigned, to become director of the department's extension service.

C. W. Warburton, extension director for 17 years, has been shifted to the deputy governorship of the Farm Credit Administration.

Wickard, it is understood, will take over some of the work which has devolved on Secretary Wallace. He will spend considerable time addressing farm gatherings. Wilson, because of poor health, has been able to do little speaking recently.

The President appointed Grosvenor M. Jones, of Ohio, and Bruce Berckmans, of New Jersey, as assistant directors of the Commerce Department's Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

Glass Approves Shuffle

Eccles was said to be desirous of continuing as Reserve Board member and chairman, without reappointment, for the remainder of President Roosevelt's present term. Under the law, he could have done that, since board members continue to serve until their successors are appointed.

The President, in a letter to Eccles, dated January 31 and made public yesterday, said, however, that he had concluded the "preferable" way would be for him to accept a reappointment.

Senator Glass, Virginia Democrat and widely recognized as the father of the Federal Reserve System, explained last night that he had no objection to the shuffling arrangement, which, it is reported, was discussed with Congressional leaders before being agreed upon. Asked whether he would vote for Eccles' confirmation, however, Glass said he had not committed himself on this.

Eccles has said he did not want a full-term appointment. He has been represented as anxious to get back to his banking business. Reports are that he intends to remain only for another year, and would relinquish his post at the end of the President's present term, January 20, 1941, even if the President were elected for a third term.

In that case, he would be barred by law from taking a position with one of his own Federal Reserve member banks for two years after he leaves the board. The Eccles family owns and operates banks in Utah and adjoining States.

The President said he would ask Congress to waive the two-year restriction in his case if he resigned "during my term of office." This would mean a third term as well as the present term, it is pointed out.

Trade Board Is Urged by Vandenberg

Proposal Is Seen As Substitute for Reciprocal Treaties

By the Associated Press

A plan to set up a foreign trade board to deal with "all phases of foreign trade promotion" was offered to Congress yesterday by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, and was immediately interpreted as a proposed substitute for the Hull reciprocal trade program.

The board, which would replace the Tariff Commission, would have power to control imports, to encourage exports through barter agreements and otherwise, to raise or lower tariffs "under explicit Congressional criteria," to take direct action "in connection with the troublesome problem of blocked exchange," to coordinate foreign trade and finance statistics.

"Such an agency is necessary," Vandenberg said, "if we shall realistically meet world trade conditions. It will be doubly necessary in post-war periods of readjustment."

Answer to Critics

While Vandenberg disclaimed any intention of offering his plan as a direct replacement for the Hull program, he said in a statement: "This method of handling the problem suggests an answer to those who insist that there is no middle ground between 'Congressional logrolling' and the 'Hull trade agreements program.'"

Meanwhile, the House Ways and Means Committee heard further testimony on proposals to renew the existing trade act, under which Secretary Hull has been negotiating agreements.

The constitutionality of reaching such agreements without consent of the Senate was defended by Green H. Hackworth, legal adviser of the State Department.

Rail Clerks for Pacts

Support for the program came from two other sources. Julius G. Luhrsen, secretary of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, on behalf of George M. Harrison, brotherhood president.

Harvey H. Pike, chairman of the Cuban committee of the National Trade Council of New York, asserted United States trade with Cuba might have come near vanishing except for a trade agreement.

Tour Confirms View of Home For Children

Superintendent Pleads For Space to Part Poor From Delinquent

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's impression of the Receiving Home for Children as a breeding ground for criminals was confirmed by a Post survey yesterday.

After a surprise visit to the home Wednesday, Mrs. Roosevelt characterized it as a place from which "boys and girls eventually graduate to prison."

Yesterday the children were still agog over the First Lady's tour, and Superintendent Grady H. Leonard was hopeful that Congress would act to provide a new building to take the place of the bare apartment house that has been used for 10 years.

Space Urgently Needed

"Our most pressing need," Leonard said, "is space for segregation and recreation. We must be able to keep unfortunate and destitute children apart from delinquents. We should have space in which to separate diseased children from the rest."

In the third-floor "playroom," the reporter found three young brothers, temporary lodgers, in close contact with offenders as old as 18 years who are charged with a multiplicity of crimes. Their mother is ill at Gallinger Hospital. Their father is dead.

After two weeks of continued association with the confined delinquents, the boys—11, 9 and 6—show distinct signs of change, attendants believe.

"One of the big boys tore up the checkerboard," said one. "The best thing we like to play now is cards."

"But the boys are too tight with them," said another. "They won't let us use them enough."

"We used to like to go to school," the first muttered. "It was the only place we could go to and have fun all day. "We wish we were out of here."

Play Room Is Bare

The play room is bare. There are two wooden tables, badly scarred and cracked, and four benches in similar shaky shape. On one table there are two wooden checkerboards, the paint so badly scraped that the squares can hardly be seen. There are no checkers.

There are a few books scattered round. At one table four colored boys were playing cards. Until recently there were no other pastimes. Now there is one ping pong table squeezed into an adjoining room, formerly used by an attendant.

In these two third-floor rooms 20 or more boys spend most of their waking time. They go to the dining hall on the first floor for meals. On Sunday there are services in the second-floor assembly room. For two weeks a WPA singing teacher has come to lead them in song for an hour every other day.

"I've figured out," Leonard said, "that if we divided the space into a square for each boy to play in, no boy could take more than a step in either direction without hitting another."

The two boys' dormitories are so crowded with beds that the boys must climb over the end of their cots to go to sleep. There is no place for personal belongings except under their pillows.

There is one wash basin for each dormitory. Near the basin is an empty towel-rack, just about ready to fall apart.

"They use paper towels in the morning," Leonard said. "We used to give them cloth towels, but they would use each other's sometimes, and there was the risk that infectious diseases would be passed on."

Disease Frequent

The cramped quarters permit no other precautions against communication of disease. An attendant estimated that 40 per cent of the colored boys have a venereal disease.

There are only two bathtubs, but in the basement there are four showers, and each child takes a shower every other day.

The girls' quarters on the fourth floor match the boys', except for faded curtains on the dormitory windows.

A 17-year-old girl, a charge of the Board of Public Welfare, told how she avoided the delinquents.

"They fight," she said, "and use awful language all the time. They talk about and do horrible things."

There are no facilities for physical exercise in the winter months. In warmer days a tiny playground beside the home serves as an athletic field. Basketball is the favorite game because there is room for nothing else. There are two baskets.

"We do the best we can to occupy their time," Leonard said. Four boys and four girls have been placed in a kitchen crew. They wash dishes, set and wait on tables, scrub the floors. The girls help prepare the food.

Four boys operate two washing machines in the basement. The girls' laundry time is the morning. The boys get their clothes washed in the afternoon.

Other children take turns cleaning the entire building from top to bottom each day. One boy, the most trustworthy, tends the furnace alone in the basement most of the day.

Elaine and John Barrymore Are Reconciled Indefinitely—'if'—as 'Dear Children' Storm

'18 Hours of Bliss' Convince Couple All Should Be Forgiven

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 1.—After 18 hours of their promised "24 hours of bliss" together, John Barrymore and Elaine Barrie decided to extend their reconciliation—indefinitely.

"Indefinite" was the word for it, although they sounded tonight as if all once more was nothing but love and kisses in their hectic romance-marriage. They vowed their reconciliation would be permanent; in the next breath Barrymore would add a "we think" or an "if" and thereby indicate that they weren't too sure about it all.

"Great little girl, Elaine," he said before he left a hotel for the second night's Broadway showing of his new play, "My Dear Children."

"We've had our ups and downs. Hell, everybody has. But she's swell. Permanent reconciliation? I don't know. How can anybody look into the future? But hope springs eternal in the human heart."

Barrymore, yielded with theatrical gallantry, amid protestations of some of his "Dear Children," to his estranged fourth wife's entreaty for "24 hours of bliss."

He was won for the day at least by Elaine Barrie Barrymore, who before their rift was both on-stage daughter and off-stage spouse to the "Great Profile."

Elaine refused to be up-staged by various blood Barymores and in an early morning break-up it was she who carried off her man after he disdained his own daughter's plea to go home with her—"now!"—from a night club.

The reunion was an icily compact little night club scene, replete with acetic repartee, that might well have been cribbed out of "My Dear Children," the well-received vehicle of Barrymore's return to Broadway last night after an absence of some 17 years.

At the theater opening, Elaine was refused admittance to his dressing room.

Barring the door was Diana Barrymore Blythe, Barrymore's daughter by his marriage to Michael Strange, the poetess. Diana was abetted by Doris Dudley, blonde daughter of Critic Bide Dudley, who plays one of Barrymore's "Dear Children" in the somewhat biographical Barrymore play.

The fair Diana, now an actress too, shook her little fists and offered to fight once for her father.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

The Great Profile whispers sweet nothings to Elaine

Then under the shepherding of Diana and others, Barrymore went to Fefe's Monte Carlo after the show, which had been singularly devoid of the asides and ad-libbing that helped it through a long Chicago run.

But the business became ad lib the moment the Barrymore party stepped into the night club.

There was Elaine. After a bit of jockeying, she was sitting at the Barrymore table amid both hostile and loving glances.

"I cannot go on without you," breathed Elaine, wearing her next-to-prettiest.

"I do not want you back for keeps," she said. "All I want is 24 hours of bliss. Look at me, John."

The Great Profile turned to her low-cut gold lame evening gown.

"This is not the gown I first wore this evening, John," she went on. "I had a white one. I looked like an angel. I wanted so much to have you see me in it. But at dinner one of my friends dropped gravy on it, so I went all the way home to change into this one."

"You are like the breath of spring," said John, leaning over and kissing her.

This tete-a-tete was surrounded by icicles.

Diana huffed away dancing. Then she returned and said:

"This is my father. We are Barrymores. You have nothing in common with us. Please go."

"That may be," retorted Elaine, who first won her man by getting into his hospital room as a Hunter College newspaper interviewer. "That may be," she went on sweetly, "but I know him a lot better than any other Barrymore does. I'm staying."

"Father," pleaded Diana, "will you come home with me—now? No? Then I'm going." And she did.

Security Board Soon to Lose R. G. Wagenet

Unemployment Aid Director Accepts Post in California

The Social Security Board soon will lose one, and perhaps both, of its assistant directors of the Bureau of Employment Security, it was reported yesterday.

R. Gordon Wagenet, in charge of the bureau's unemployment compensation work, has agreed to accept an offer recently made public to become State director of unemployment in California.

The other assistant director, William H. Stead, in charge of the employment service, yesterday denied currently circulated reports that he was leaving his job. Though he said he was not considering any offer at the moment, he admitted that "at some future date" he might make a change. He declined to make any further comment.

It had been reported that Stead had been offered a job outside the Government.

Last summer's reorganization orders had the effect of reducing the nominal rank of the officials, both of whom were formerly bureau directors. Stead headed the Employment Service in the Labor Department and Wagenet directed the board's unemployment compensation bureau.

The reorganization order transferred the employment service to the board, and subsequent internal reorganization resulted in merging the two branches into one bureau. Wagenet and Stead continued to head their respective phases of the work, but reported to the board through its executive director, Oscar M. Powell, placed in charge of the consolidated bureau.

Blood Transfusion To Be Broadcast

washed out" when she arrived at the hospital, has been given daily transfusions to build up her strength.

While the particular serum being sought in Germany is not known to them, Children's Hospital authorities are hoping to build up their supplies of serums and rare blood types to meet such emergencies as Leslie presents.

This can be done, it was pointed out through The Post-WJSV campaign for the institution's blood and serum bank.

Meanwhile plans were completed for a novel radio program, the first of its kind ever attempted here—a broadcast of a blood transfusion operation.

With Dr. Joseph S. Wall, chief of staff, and Dr. C. Francis Scalessa, chief resident, participating, the broadcast will originate at Children's Hospital at 3:45 p. m. tomorrow and be carried by Station WJSV.

A public information feature in the program will present the details of an actual transfusion. Questions and answers as the operation proceeds will bring out the functions of such a "bank," how it prevents long and dangerous delays, who its "depositors" are and what must be done to keep it going at Children's Hospital.

For the second consecutive year The Post, WJSV and the American Contract Bridge League—the latter as national sponsor—are inviting organizations, neighborhood groups and individuals to hold Valentine Week card and game parties, the receipts from ticket sales to go intact into the blood bank fund.

Just before she left for Hollywood Wednesday, after participating in the President's birthday celebration, Olivia De Havilland warmly indorsed the campaign. She was reminded that Children's Hospital treats the great majority of juvenile cases of infantile paralysis in Washington and this vicinity, many of whom receive transfusions from the blood bank.

Mrs. Harold C. Anderson announced yesterday that the monthly bridge party at the Wesley Heights Community Club February 13 will be a blood bank benefit.

Mrs. Cora L. Demonet, of the American Women's Legion, reported that her organization will assist the George Washington Post, American Legion, at its benefit party February 14 at 2108 Sixteenth street northwest.

Indorsement of the drive by State Deputy Col. Thomas F. Carlin, of the Washington General Assembly, Fourth Degree, Knights of Columbus, was reported yesterday. He will muster support for the campaign among members of the order's five local councils.

Heart-shaped tickets for benefit parties—bridge, mah jongg, euchre whist, etc.—may be obtained at The Post, either by calling in person or writing the Valentine Party Editor. A check may accompany the order, at the rate of $1 per ticket, or payment may be made after the party has been held and receipts collected.

Will You Give a Benefit Party?

Justice Dept. Exonerates Judge Newman

Police Jurist Accused Of Unpunctuality, Arbitrary Attitude

Police Judge Hobart Newman and attaches of that court were exonerated yesterday with the announcement that four months investigation by the Department of Justice last year uncovered no evidence to warrant removal of anyone.

The investigation was made after Judge Newman was accused of unpunctuality, unreasonable fines, and an arbitrary attitude in imposing sentence.

Assistant Attorney General Gordon Dean said that "an investigation of the Police Court, which was begun last May, was concluded in September, and the Attorney General felt that the evidence did not warrant recommending removal of any member of the Police Court bench."

Reserve Bank Directors Win 'Final' Extension

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board yesterday granted a "final" extension of four months to persons who are directors of more than one Federal Reserve member bank to resign from all but one of their banking connections.

The extension, the third since Congress decreed a prohibition on interlocking bank directorates in 1935, was granted at the request of President Roosevelt and Senators Wagner (Democrat), New York, and Glass (Democrat), Virginia.

The prohibition would have gone into effect last midnight if the board, at a special meeting yesterday, had not acted.

which Mrs. Roosevelt visited Wednesday.

The letter expressed "keen interest" in the findings of Mrs. Roosevelt at local welfare institutions and called attention to D'Alesandro's appointment as acting chairman of the subcommittee charged with conducting the investigation.

Bondy to Cooperate

D'Alesandro said Bondy had assured him of full cooperation.

The Marylander also sent a letter to Surgeon General Thomas Parran, of the Public Health Service, asking that a member of his staff aid in the inquiry. As the subcommittee has no funds, he explained, he decided to call upon an agency of the Federal Government for expert aid.

When hearings start, probably early next week, the subcommittee will make a personal tour of the welfare institutions in question and afterward call upon the District Commissioners, welfare officials and other witnesses to explain why they have been allowed to operate under the conditions cited by Mrs. Roosevelt.

Georgians to Dance

The Georgia State Society will commemorate settlement of the Georgia Colony with a program and dance at 9 p. m. tomorrow in the Shoreham Hotel. Representative Hugh Peterson, the new president, will introduce Georgia newspapermen assigned to Washington.

'Miss Attorney' Candidate Would Use Charms on Jury

A group of Senators, judges in the National University's Yearbook contest to pick "Miss Attorney," yesterday put the three finalists through an intelligence test, flashing such questions as:

"Would you use your charms on a jury in behalf of your client?"

Replied Miss Helen Haynes, Senior Class finalist: "Yes. As an attorney I am duty bound to give my best aid to my client."

And this one to Miss Mabel Stockton, Freshman Class finalist: "If the right man comes along would you give up the practice of law?"

Would Join Law, Marriage

"No," she said flatly. As the questions were being fired before dessert of the luncheon was concluded, Miss Stockton swallowed the mouthful of pie in deliberative emphasis. "No."

The practice of law, she pointed out, "is an honorable one and a woman can be both a wife and an attorney without a conflicting argument."

"Do you feel that America should participate in the second world war?" came to Miss Margaret Lamoreaux, junior finalist.

Beauty to Count, Too

The question, "How would you go about being reelected if you were a Senator" didn't bring out anything the Senators didn't already know, and the remainder were such technical things as "Do you feel in view of your study of statute law that our system of legislative enactments could be improved"— issues hurried through to get the dessert out of the way. Among the Senators were J. Chandler Gurney, of South Dakota; Sherman Minton, of Indiana, and Guy M. Gillette, of Iowa. Mrs. Eva (Chip) Robert was among the questioners.

The winner will be selected at "The Queen's Ball" at 10 p. m. tomorrow in Almas Temple, when the element of pulchritude will be taken up among the finalists. They already have passed through personality tests.

Jackson Tells Justices Severe Testing Lies Ahead of Tribunal

reading in emphatic voice and looking up frequently from a printed text.

Many listeners heard an echo of the 3-year-old battle over President Roosevelt's court enlargment plan in Hughes' declaration that the people have sought "to safeguard their basic interests from impairment by the partiality and the passions of politics" through "the method of selection, the tenure of office and removal from the bias of political ambition" of Supreme Court justices.

The Chief Justice saw as "a token of vitality" in American democracy the appearance of "acute differences of opinion on different questions of constitutional law."

"It is the unique function of this court, not to dictate policy, not to promote or oppose crusades," he said, "but to maintain the balance between State and Nation through the maintenance of the rights and duties of individuals."

Jackson's remarks more than once sent judicial smiles flickering the length of the bench before him. The new Attorney General recalled that when the Supreme Court first met on February 1, 1790, in the Royal Exchange in New York City, "no its one seemed in immediate need of appellate process, and it adjourned —to await the perpetration of errors by lower courts."

Speaking from the same lectern where he argued dozens of cases as Solicitor General—and several times won reversals of previous Supreme Court decisions—Jackson said the first justices may have found some happiness "in sitting upon a court that could not be invited to overrule itself."

Has Great Responsibility

The Attorney General pointed out that the American governmental system "makes legal questions of many matters that other nations treat as policy questions."

This fact, he said, gives bench and bar "an inescapable responsibility for fostering social and cultural attitudes which sustain a free and just government."

"This court is more than an arbiter of cases and controversies," he concluded. "It is the custodian of a culture and is the protector of a philosophy of equal rights, of civil liberty, of tolerance, and of trusteeship of political and economic power, general acceptance of which gives us a basic national unity. Without it our representative system would be impossible."

Beardsley said there are forces at work within the United States "that are inimical to the continued fulfillment by this court for the purpose for which it was created."

The San Francisco attorney cited as an example "a tendency among groups of employers and employes to use physical force as the means of settling differences."

At the close of the 50-minute commemoration, while the Congressmen and other visitors were still filing from the courtroom, the tribunal returned to its customary routine. Chief Justice Hughes inquired, "Are there applications for admission to the bar?"

Miss India Jay and Gertrude Jay Scott, of 420 Seward Square southeast, whose ancestor was the first Chief Justice, John Jay, followed the program with keen interest.

Throughout the country delegations from bench and bar made pilgrimages to the graves where 67 Supreme Court justices are buried.

A committee headed by Justice Miller, of the District Court of Appeals, placed a wreath on the grave of Chief Justice Taft in Arlington Cemetery.

William Morrell, president of the Federal Bar Association, laid a wreath on the grave of Justice Holmes, also in Arlington. Similar tributes were offered in the Washington area at the rest places of seven other Supreme Court justices.

Congressional observance of the anniversary brought from Representative Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, a sharp attack on centralized turn of power to "the people from where it came."

Sees States Losing Rights

The chairman of the House Judiciary Committee discarded a prepared speech on the court's development to charge that the Federal Government is "dissolving the States through grants and loans to cities, towns and counties."

"It is axiomatic," he added, "that whoever controls the purse strings, controls."

Formal addresses on the Supreme Court sesquicentennial were given from the floor by Senators Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, and Austin (Republican), of Vermont, and Representative Guyer (Republican), of Kansas.

an investigation of Mayne's connection with the committee.

Voorhis explained that Mayne, who is allegedly a former member of Pelley's Silver Shirts, had been suggested to the committee in the first instance by "a very prominent individual" in Washington.

Voorhis said that in the hope that Mayne might actually be able to produce Pelley, he agreed to pay his expenses to Asheville.

"I am informed," Voorhis declared, "that Mayne later told Rhea Whitley (committee counsel) that some kind of a plan was afoot to discredit the Dies Committee. But I am certain that there was no reference to these letters."

"So far as I know, no member of the Dies Committee had the slightest knowledge of anything in the Pelley letters until they were presented in the Hook statement," said Voorhis.

In the midst of Voorhis' speech, two members of the committee, Representative Dempsey and Representative Thomas (Republican), of New Jersey, engaged in angry altercation over the propriety of the committee's releasing transcripts of the testimony taken in executive session during the last three days from Mayne, Weisberg, Jackson and others.

When Thomas said the committee had decided to make the testimony public today, Dempsey protested, stating that the names of members of Congress were involved and that he thought they should be heard by the committee before the testimony was released.

It is understood that one of the witnesses gave the committee the names of several members of Congress, including one committee member who attended a dinner early last month at which the "Pelley letters" were discussed with an eye to the effect they might have in preventing renewal of the Dies Committee.

In an executive session yesterday morning, the committee heard Merwin K. Hart, president of the New York State Economic Council, who was charged by Hook with being an active "collaborator" with the Christian Front.

Hart, who has been chairman of meetings at which Representative Dies has spoken, told the committee he had no connection with the Christian Front, Acting Chairman Starnes declared.

According to Starnes, Hart said he thought members of the Christian Front were "a bunch of nuts."

Hull, Russian Envoy Silent On Long Talk

Oumansky Believed To Have Protested About Finnish Aid

Russian complaints against hostile American reaction to the Soviet attack on Finland are understood to have been conveyed to Secretary of State Hull yesterday.

Constantine Oumansky, Russian Ambassador, obtained a 35-minute conference with the Secretary and is said to have voiced objections to the United States' "moral embargo" on planes and gasoline equipment for the Soviets.

Likewise, he is reported to have expressed Russian resentment to a speech delivered by Assistant Secretary of War Johnson in which Russian soldiers were referred to as serfs.

Meanwhile, State Department officials told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that a Government loan to Finland for non-military supplies would not violate the country's neutrality.

Senator Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, introduced a resolution to place Congress on record as sanctioning private flotation here of Finnish bonds, proceeds of which might be used to obtain war materials.

Sweden was reported to have been given a green light for purchase of $7,500,000 of American fighting planes with which to strengthen her own defenses.

William C. Bullitt, former Ambassador to Russia but now Ambassador to France, has been called home for a brief and general discussion, Secretary Hull announced yesterday.

Talk Called General

Neither Secretary Hull nor Ambassador Oumansky would discuss details of their conversation. The Secretary said the two talked more generally than otherwise, although there were occasional references to some detailed matters.

The fact that the Ambassador was kept waiting 15 minutes before being admitted to Hull's office recalled to observers that Laurence A. Steinhardt, American Ambassador to Russia, tried vainly for several days before he gained access to the Moscow foreign office when he sought information on the American crew of the City of Flint when it was detained at Murmansk. However, it was explained yesterday that other callers were in Hull's office ahead of the Ambassador.

The moral embargo discourages American manufacturers from selling airplanes, airplane parts, and plants and plans for making aviation gasoline to nations which bomb civilian populations.

While waves of Soviet planes daily are raining bombs on Finnish cities, it is considered unlikely that the Ambassador received any material satisfaction from Secretary Hull on this phase of his complaint.

Johnson's speech, delivered before the New York State Bankers Association on January 15, said:

"Again, the world beholds the proof of the age-old axiom that a free man is worth at least a dozen serfs."

Johnson added that Finland was fighting against "forces of bigotry and oppression" and that politics and purges had stymied Russian officers while blind submission dominated in the ranks.

Senate Daughters Have a Gay Dance, Cocktail Party

No discussions of foreign policy or the budget were in order last evening when 20 Senate daughters and their escorts gathered at the Shoreham for a gay dinner-dance.

Before going down to the Blue Room for dinner, the group convened for cocktails in an upstairs suite. Hostesses for the cocktail party were Miss Chiyo Thomas, president of the Daughters of the Senate organization, and Miss Cuyler Schwartz, secretary-treasurer.

Escorting Miss Thomas was Victor R. Taylor, while John Boland was with Miss Schwartz. Preston Townsend, son of Senator John G. Townsend, was the escort of Miss Marjorie Nye, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Gerald D. Nye.

Also in the party were Miss Ruth Overton with Donald Kiddston, Miss Agnes Doherty with Frank Krawzel, Mr. and Mrs. Benedict Plotnick, she is the former Miss Katherine Bulow; Miss Mary Lib Overton with Elbert Brazelton; Miss Marilyn Maloney with Robert Maloney; Miss Ann Duffy with John McKenna; Miss Kay Overton with Hal Davis and Bob Dudley; Miss Peliz Bailey with Volt Gilmore; Mr. and Mrs. Fielding Kimbel, she is the former Kathleen King; Mr. and Mrs. Prew Savoy, she is the former Lyla Townsend; Miss Ruth Brown with Cheedle Caviness; Dr. and Mrs. Jack Martin, of Dover, Del., she is the former Caroline Hughes; Miss Marsha Hatch with Dean Zind and Arthur Muggy; Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Chase, she is the former Jane Holt; Miss Doris Gibson with Dr. Charles Concannon and Miss Norine McCarran with Harry J. Robinson.

Nazi Raiders Quiet, but Mines Destroy Two Neutral Ships

By James B. Reston.

Copyright by New York Times

London, Feb. 1.—German planes were quiet along the east coast today, but the Netherlands' steamer Vidar, 2,104 tons, and the Norwegian steamer Fingal, 460 tons, struck mines and sank near British waters. Fifteen members of the crew of the Vidar are missing, eight others were rescued. The crew of 11 of the Fingal were saved.

The Vidar was en route from England to Denmark yesterday when she hit a mine. The crew managed to get to the boats. The Fingal was off Scotland on a voyage from Norway to Eire when blown up.

Further details of German attacks on Allied and neutral shipping around Britain were released today. The Italian steamer Pollenzo brought to port the crew of the British tanker Vaclite, which was sunk in a convoy on Tuesday by a U-boat that was later destroyed. Four members of the crew were injured. The Vaclite was en route to the United States.

Details of the attack by a Nazi bomber on the City of Bath were announced. The bomber was held off by the ship's single gun for a short time but the pilot kept circling and dropped about six bombs, one of which fell within 15 feet of the ship and damaged its side. Royal Air Force fighters chased off the bomber.

The bodies of two German airmen were washed ashore at Ratray head in Aberdeenshire. It is believed they were the flying officer and an airman of a Heinkel bomber which was engaged by Royal Air Force fighters near there on January 19.

Chamberlain Wins Support Of Commons on War Policy

Opposition Proposal for 'Economic Dictator' Is Defeated as House Reviews Question of Waging Conflict as at Present

By Raymond Daniell.

Copyright by New York Times

London, Feb. 1.—The question of whether Great Britain was marshaling the full power of her economic resources for victory was reviewed in the House of Commons today. Liberal and labor opposition urged the government to add a department of war economics to the cabinet.

Prime Minister Chamberlain, holding such a step unnecessary and undesirable, announced that a council to study export problems was being created to stimulate the nation's export trade, thus insuring replenishments of foreign exchange.

In the final division, after Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir John Simon had bolstered the premier's arguments, the House, by a vote of 185 to 90, decided to let the matter rest for a time, but expressions in the lobby and editorials of newspapers friendly to the government left little doubt that in many minds there still remained questions about the efficiency of the present system of fighting the war on an economic front.

In preliminary discussions of the opposition move, it was suggested that the chief opposition plan for coordinating the economic effort came from Simon, who at the moment exercises considerable power over various departments charged with the duties of checkmating Germany in markets still open to her, in controlling this country's exports, and stimulating its production.

Opposes "Super Minister"

When there was talk of making Winston Churchill defense minister with control over war, air and navy, it was suggested in political circles that Chamberlain could not consent to this because it would elevate the present first lord of the admiralty to an eminence almost equal to the prime minister's.

A suggestion of this thought crept into Chamberlain's remarks today when he said that if he created a "super minister" or a "dictator" over economic affairs, such as the opposition seemed to envision, it would leave the prime minister with little to do.

At the same time he opposed placing a minister of war and economics over the head of the chancellor of the exchequer, who was chiefly concerned with the problem of avoiding inflation and maintaining supplies of foreign exchange.

In many respects, as the London Times pointed out editorially, Chamberlain's speech "bore a curious resemblance" to those with which formerly he was accustomed to meet Churchill's demand for the creation of a ministry of supply. Indeed, in the course of today's address he mentioned that very department, which, he said, had been created not when the opposition sought it prematurely, but when a real need existed, after the territorial army had been doubled.

Urges Export Control

The first phase of the war, he said, called for stringent control of exports and resulted in a dislocation of the nation's business life. Now, he declared, the country was entering a second phase of the war which has not called for a new minister.

Denying the opposition assertion that the need of the present was for a "drive for decision of direction," the premier held the need was for consideration of coordination. Wherefore, he explained, a committee or council to study the problems was being established by Sir Andrew Rae Duncan, whom he appointed at the same time as Leslie Hore-Belisha, deposed from the war office, declined the assignment. This, he said, would comprise of representatives of business and spokesmen from appropriate departments. it was said, to increase the value of exports to a total of at least £600,0000,000 yearly. Last year's export total was £438,000,000. If this is to be achieved, it will involve not only a great stimulation industrial output but a drastic curtailment of supplies of many manufacturerd articles for domestic market.

Britain Fears Attack by New Nazi Air Fleet

315-M. P. H. Bombers Reported; Swiss Paper Predicts Offensive Soon

By the United Press

London, Feb. 1.—The air ministry warned tonight of the possibility of a "desperate onslaught" against the British Isles by a fleet of new long-range German bombers, capable of a speed of 315 miles an hour, which the Nazi air force is said to be constructing.

"With this weapon in his hands it seems unlikely that the enemy will capitulate without attempting a desperate onslaught against Britain's vital targets," an air ministry bulletin said.

Is High-Flying Craft

Germany, it was said, is "pressing the construction of fast, long-range bombers designed for use other than close cooperation with military and naval forces."

The air ministry asserted that Britain will be ready to meet the challenge of any such attack, however, with new Boulton Paul Defiant fighting planes which it said have "added a new technique to air defense."

The new German bomber is supposed to be the JU-88, a Junkers two-motor plane which carries a crew of three or four.

The bomber's ceiling is just under 33,000 feet, giving it protection against antiaircraft fire but not against British fighters such as the famous Spitfires which have a much higher ceiling, the air ministry said.

Japan Asked for $671,000,000 For Seven-Year War Program

Soviet Warned 'Illegal Acts' on Manchu Border Are Being Watched; Shortage of Power Darkens Factories 1 Day Out of 3

By Relman Morin

Associated Press Staff Writer

Toyko, Feb. 1.—A seven-year arms program costing $671,000,000 was presented by Japan's military leaders today to a Parliament stirred by the warning that the army is maintaining a close watch on Soviet Russia's borders because of "scores of illegal acts" committed by the Russians.

The warning was sounded by War Minister Gen. Shunroku Hata amid growing demands for stringent regulations to alleviate fuel and food shortages and step up Japan's wartime organization behind the guns.

Hata said the "illegal acts" had occurred on borders other than the disputed frontier between Manchukuo and Outer Mongolia, where five months of sporadic but bitter fighting was ended September 16 by a truce between Moscow and Tokyo. Manchukuo, Japan's protectorate, has a border of more than 1,000 miles with Siberia.

Commission to Renew Talks

The breakdown of negotiations being conducted by a joint commission to settle the border dispute was announced by the foreign office earlier, but spokesmen said today the discussion would be continued by another commission.

Meanwhile Finance Minister Yukio Sakurauchi disclosed that the government would issue $1,358,770,000 in new bonds during the next fiscal year beginning April 1, on top of an issue of $1,392,140,000 in 1939-40, of which only 89 per cent has been assimilated.

The proposed military appropriation, for "replenishment and rehabilitation of arms," would be in addition to expenditures of $1,862,017,680 already approved for this purpose.

$600,000,000 for Army

The seven-year program would begin with the 1940-41 fiscal year, the budget for which already contains items totaling $1,583,478,000 to carry on the war in China and for domestic military purposes. This is now before Parliament.

Of the new funds requested, the army would receive about $600,644,725, of which $263,200,000 would be earmarked for the "national defense replenishment fund."

Industries Shut Down

Usually reliable sources said that the majority of nonmilitary industries in the Tokyo-Yokohama area are now shut down every third day because of insufficient electric power, although government regulations rationing power in this region are not effective until February 10.

Many industries connected with the nation's war effort, such as oil refineries, automobile factories and shipyards, also are affected by the shortage.

Peace League Is Disbanded By Directors

War Changes Methods Needed to Defend Democracy, They Say

New York, Feb. 1.—The American League for Peace and Democracy, described by the Dies Committee as a "front" for the Communist Party, was disbanded today by its national board of directors.

A board resolution said the league was extinguished because "the coming of the war has created a situation in which a different program and type of organization are needed to preserve democratic rights in wartime and thereby help keep the United States out of war."

The action was taken at a meeting honoring the Rev. Dr. Harry F. Ward, head of the league since 1934.

14,000 Members Claimed

The Rev. Thomas Harris, national executive secretary, announced that the league had 14,000 members in 117 cities.

To the board, Dr. Ward defended the league against the Dies Committee charges, asserting the organization "never was controlled by the Communists."

The committee charge, he said, was an attempt to "paint a false picture of the league" in a campaign "by reactionary forces to get America into the war."

"The fact that the National Board of the League for Peace and Democracy has ceased activities and gone out of existence," he continued, "does not mean that our members throughout the country are ceasing their activities in defense of democratic rights and to keep this country out of war."

Names Were Released

Besides calling the league a "Communist Front," the Dies Committee released hundreds of names it said were on the league's mailing list.

The list included many persons in governmental positions in Washington, several of whom stated they were not members of the league and had not asked to be placed on the mailing list.

The board said the league's national committee also adopted the disbanding resolution.

Dr. Ward, who also is president of the American Civil Liberties Union, was asked whether he intended to resign this position. He replied without further comment that he had sent a letter to officers of the union which he understood would be made public next Monday.

Fierce Battle Rages

Copyright by New York Times

With Finnish Army on the Central-Northern Front, Uleaborg, Finland, Feb. 1.—The battle now raging on this front has reached a tense stage and some days may pass before the issue is decided.

Thus far the Finns, though fighting a whole Russian division—the Fifty-fourth—augmented by special ski troops and other auxiliaries, are having the better of it.

The fighting is intense over a wide front of roughly 125 miles

Hand-to-hand fighting occurred at several points. In the Kuhmo region a Siberian ski battalion was virtually destroyed today. Fragmentary reports indicated that 200 of an initial strength of 600 had been killed and perhaps, an equal number wounded with many others captured.

In the Saunajarvi sector the Finns destroyed 4 tanks, captured 4 machine guns, 10 submachine guns, 120 automatic rifles and 1 field gun.

Food Rioting Is Reported

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

The condition of the Soviet wounded who have been moved from Leningrad and distributed in various cities in the neighborhood has been so bad that it resulted in a general strike lasting three days in one factory town 50 miles south of Moscow, it was learned yesterday in diplomatic circles.

Reports reaching diplomats in Washington stated that 4,000 Russian wounded and about 100 wounded Finns had been sent to an industrial town of about 80,000 near Moscow for treatment.

The facilities in the town near Moscow were not adequate to take care of the wounded, and the food shortage was so great that riots broke out among the wounded.

The news of the disturbances within the hospitals spread to the workers in the factories who struck and went into the streets demanding food for the wounded and for themselves.

'Wiggle' in the 'Airacobra' Delays Speed Record Attempt

Balkan Parley Opens Today in War Shadow

Entente Wavering From Pressure by Allies, Reich and Russia

By C. L. Sulzberger, Jr.

Copyright by New York Times

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Feb. 1.—The foreign ministers of Turkey, Greece, Rumania and Yugoslavia will meet here tomorrow for the regular annual conference of the council of the Balkan Entente.

For the first time in the history of the pact, the shadow of war hangs over this part of Europe and there is talk of a possible military alliance between the parties to the accord; of a demand on the part of Rumania for further and more specific guarantees of assistance in case of attack; of Hungarian-Italian pressure for an anti-Russian line.

The Balkans are intent on one problem: How to preserve their independence and keep war away from this section of the world. Rumania and Yugoslavia, which are nearest to the belligerent powers, fear the threat of invasion most.

Rumania appears willing to do almost anything which would stave off Russian voraciousness for Bessarabia or German anger.

Yugoslavia does not know exactly where it stands, but it is indicated that Belgrade hopes to keep out of trouble by following the advice of Premier Mussolini. Rumors of Nazi military activity on the Austrian frontier are creating anxiety.

Germany is placing heavy pressure for further economic concessions in Rumania and Yugoslavia, and German-Yugoslav trade negotiations will start this month. Russia is playing with Pan-Slavs and Communist party supporters in Bulgaria and Yugoslavia.

The Allies, on the other hand, are working to build up a bloc of United countries in southeastern Europe—an idea which is solidly opposed by Berlin, which recognizes a threat in a possible offensive in this sector.

Nazi Governor Says Poles Never Will Rule Land

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Berlin, Feb. 1.—Ever since the Nazis came to power seven years ago they have known that they would have to fight the British Empire, it was revealed today by Dr. Hans Frank, governor general of German-held Poland, in a talk to Germans in the southern policy city of Krakow.

Dr. Frank also made it known that Germany has no intention of preserving even a puppet Polish state governed by Poles friendly toward the Nazis, but will try to rule western Poland directly.

Dr. Frank's words surprised observers, who remarked that until recently Nazi leaders have claimed that their policy has always been to try to reach an understandin with England, but that they were frustrated by the British desire to destroy Germany.

Vatican Told Civilian Poles Had to Dig Their Own Graves

15,000 Leaders Executed by Nazis, Report Says, 300 in One Day At Gdynia; Factories, Papers Seized

By Herbert L. Matthews,

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Feb. 1.—New details of German persecutions in Polish territory were divulged today in the form of a diplomatic report on political, social and economic conditions of the Polish civil population. This was issued by the Polish embassies to the Holy See and the Quirinal and copies were presented to the Vatican and to all members of the diplomatic corps in Rome except the Germans.

It is charged in the report that 15,000 Polish leaders were executed, a general massacre of Polish leaders took place at Gdynia, where each had to dig his own grave before execution and those who were to die later were forced to watch the executions. Fully 300 of 350 hostages were killed that day, the report declared.

The report begins by saying that "what is happening in Poland is worse than what occurred in Belgium 25 years ago." At the end it says, "all these regulations, executions, deportations, confiscations and expulsions prove that the Germans intend as quickly as possible to commit the greatest crime in history against a civilized people—to crush and destroy completely the Polish element in those territories which for more than 1,000 years were the patrimony of the Polish nation, and which was the cradle of that nation and that state."

Auguste Cardinal Hlond's previous report emphasized particularly the religious persecutions. Today's document concentrates on what happened to the civilians, and charges, that properties of Poles who had been expelled is systematically taken over, factories have been taken away from proprietors, although in Poznan 90 per cent of them were run and owned by Poles.

The Kurier Poznanski and Dziennik Poznanski, the two biggest newspapers of the city, were confiscated as was the Polonia of Katowice and many other publications, the report states.

The Polish language, it is reported, was immediately banned from public life and in many places such as streets and public buildings even private conversations cannot be held in Polish.

In many places, the report declares, rules are posted containing among other requirements the following:

All Poles must tip their hats to German officers and civilians with arm bands.

Poles must give Germans the right of way on streets.

In markets Poles cannot be served until all Germans present have bought what they want. The same is true of shops, and certain articles like bacon and ham are reserved for Germans.

would arise and become acute at the conference.

Informed German circles, commenting on Prime Minister Chamberlain's speech yesterday in which he invited neutrals to send their ships through combat zones with British convoys, said it was an effort to draw other states into the war.

They described the British prime minister's invitation as on a par with alleged British efforts to disturb German relations with the Balkan states.

Firemen Rescue Five Trapped by Apartment Blaze

Trapped on the upper floors of an apartment house at North Capitol and R streets by a two-alarm fire, five persons were carried down ladders by firemen. Three other occupants escaped before flames and smoke blocked the stairway.

Earl Watkins, on the third floor, discovered the blaze shortly before 5:15 a. m. He ran through the house shouting an alarm and then ran barefooted to No. 12 Engine Co., a block away.

Watkins' shouts aroused Charles B. Shiner and he led Mrs. Nellie Brown from her room on the third floor. Firemen removed Miss Norma Mason, John Parks, jr., and Fred Martin from the second floor, and Mrs. Haroldene Marshall and John Parks, sr., from the third floor.

Townsend Calls Gold Policies 'Ridiculous'

Answers Morgenthau, Insists Purchases Are Aiding Russia

Reiterating his charge that Treasury gold purchases were aiding the Russian invasion of Finland, Senator Townsend, Delaware Republican, yesterday branded the Treasury gold and silver buying policies as "ridiculous."

He replied in a Senate speech to criticism by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau of an address he made January 27 before the Del-Mar-Va Press Association.

In that speech, Townsend said that "since Russia mines about $175,000,000 of gold a year our policy helps Russia many times as much as we have been able to help Finland."

Epithet Hurled Back

Morgenthau, apparently feeling that Townsend implied the Treasury was buying the entire Russian gold production, characterized as "ridiculous" any such assumption. Townsend yesterday hurled the epithet back at him.

He pointed out that statistics on Russian gold production were published in the annual report of the Director of the Mint, which gave the Russian production in 1938 as 5,235,909 ounces, valued, according to Treasury's $35-an-ounce price, at $183,256,815.

Morgenthau, at the time he criticized Townsend's first speech, said he had been trying for years to obtain accurate figures on Russian gold production and had been unsuccessful.

Treasury officials said yesterday that the Mint's figures, so far as Russian production is concerned, were simply estimates. They are based, it is understood, on information obtained from the State Department.

Townsend ridiculed a Treasury announcement that no gold bearing the Russian stamp was received from Russia in 1939, and that only two shipments bearing the Russian stamp, totaling $10,500,000 in value, were received from other countries during the year.

He pointed to published accounts of huge gold exports from Russia to England, amounting to 40,367,787 pounds sterling in 1937 and 23,326,365 pounds sterling in 1938, and the heavy gold exports from England to the United States.

He recalled a United Press dispatch, dated last October 24, saying that 17½ tons of Soviet gold to be used to buy goods in the United States had been shipped across Germany and was then on deposit in Netherlands banks.

Edison Hints At Negligence In Squalus Loss

Raises Question Of Why Inside Valves Were Not Closed

Secretary Edison last night published the findings of a naval court of inquiry blaming a mechanical failure for the sinking of the submarine Squalus last May 23, but himself raised a question of whether the disaster might not have been avoided but for a personnel lapse.

A three-man board of naval officers found the loss of the Squalus off New England due to "a mechanical failure in the operating gear of the engine induction valve" and absolved its crew's 26 dead and 33 rescued of "all serious blame."

Edison, concurring in a recommendation of the group that no further proceedings be taken against any of the crew, held the disaster was primarily caused by this main valve failure but also due to the "non-closure" of four inside valves.

Calls Findings Incomplete

The Navy Secretary declared that the board's findings of fact "are supported by evidence, but are not complete in all respects." He states that the closing of these inside "hull stop valves" was prescribed as routine procedure but that the evidence showed they were open on the Squalus' last dive and that "it was not always the practice to close these valves."

"Had these hull stop valves been closed prior to the submergence of valve A (the main engine valve), which normally will occur in not less than 35 seconds after the commencement of the dive," Edison declared, "only the pipe lines, and not the compartments would have been flooded."

Failure to close two of the inside valves, those in the flooded compartments, he continued, may have been "the result of special circumstances known only to the personnel who died at their posts of duty." But, the Secretary added, "there is no adequate explanation of the failure to close the two hull stop valves in the after battery compartment."

No Serious Blame Incurred

"This, together with the fact that a substantial doubt remains as to the habitual practice of closing the hull stop valve, indicates that the training, supervision and indoctrination necessary to insure the timely closure of these important hull stop valves, while diving, were lacking in emphasis," he concluded.

The court of inquiry, headed by Rear Admiral William T. Tarrant, in holding the loss of the Squalus due to the mechanical failure of the main valve operating gear, declared that the failure was not discovered in time to correct the mistake, either because of an electrical failure of the valve indicator or a mistake by the crew in reading the indicator.

It also found that:

"No offenses have been committed and no serious blame has been incurred.

"The officers and crew of the U. S. S. Squalus were well trained and efficient.

"Lieut. (O. F.) Naquin (the commanding officer) displayed outstanding leadership during the sinking of the U. S. S. Squalus and rescue of her survivors.

Rescue Praised

"The rescue of the survivors in the U. S. S. Squalus was performed efficiently and expeditiously.

"The salvage of the U. S. S. Squalus, with the equipment available, was an outstanding accomplishment."

It was recommended that the hydraulic gear operating the valves be redesigned and that separate indicator boards should be provided to prevent misreading of signals. Another proposal urged remodeling the decks of submarines to enable the bell rescue chamber which took off the 33 survivors to be fitted to all hatches. Only two of the hatches on the Squalus were so designed.

These recommendations, Edison declared, are still under study.

Refitting of the vessel, at a cost of $1,400,000, is under way at the Portsmouth (N. H.) Navy Yard, it was said, and it was estimated it will be ready for recommissioning by June.

All of the men lost were ruled to have died "in the performance of duty and not as the result of their own misconduct."

From the time of the sinking until the rescue, it was held, the "morale and discipline of the officers and crew was of the highest standard and in accordance with the best traditions of the service."

Poderjay Waits Deportation To 'My Wife'

CAPT. IVAN PODERJAY,

Bigamist Silent on American Bride Who Vanished 7 Years Ago

By the Associated Press

Auburn, N. Y., Feb. 1.—Capt. Ivan Poderjay, bigamous husband of a bride who vanished on her honeymoon seven years ago, awaited with ill-concealed annoyance tonight his deportation to Jugoslavia.

Emerging from Auburn Prison as dapper and well-groomed as when he was imprisoned on the bigamy charge in 1935, he was detained at Cayuga County Jail pending removal from this country.

The captain argued mildly that he was "no longer the property of New York State," made bitter allusions to his handcuffs as insignia of American civilization, and hinted at eventual reunion with "my wife."

Mystery Remains

There was not one word, however, to shed light on the disappearance of Agnes Colonia Tufverson, brilliant New York corporation lawyer, who gave up her career to marry the dashing Austrian-born officer.

Miss Tuferson and Poderjay ostensibly left on their European honeymoon, then she never was heard from again. When her relatives instigated police action, the gay captain was found a year later in Vienna, accompanied by a Mlle. Suzanne Ferrand.

It was brought out Mlle. Ferrand had married Poderjay nine months before he wed Miss Tufverson. The American woman, he told police casually, had gone to India. The bigamy charge was a part of the investigation, and Poderjay pleaded guilty.

Who Is "Wife?"

Today, the captain displayed a scarf "that my wife knit," added "also my sox, she knit them," and referred vaguely to the time "when I'll meet her in Europe."

He remained silent when asked if he meant Mlle. Ferrand. Answering questions of the county jail clerk, he said he was 40 and "not married—now."

"Occupation?" queried the clerk.

"Retired army captain and inventor," Poderjay responded with a proud tilt of his head. He added, after a pause: "Now a degraded captain."

In a few days he will be taken to Binghamton, N. Y., there to board a deportation train.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Katharine Cornell Is Only a Fortnight Away

Her First Comedy for National, February 19; Premiere of 'Olympia,' at Belasco Tonight; This, That and the Other About the Theater

YESTERDAY'S FILLIP to Washington theatergoers came in the form of a reminder that Katharine Cornell will come to the National Theater the week of Monday, February 19, in S. N. Behrman's comedy, paradoxically titled, "No Time for Comedy."

Since its 24-week run on Broadway, this gay piece has toured to the Pacific Coast and back, with Francis Lederer in the principal male role opposite the star, to which he succeeded when other commitments occasioned the withdrawal of Laurence Olivier from the cast.

BELL

The play is presented under the banner of the Playwrights' Company, in association with Miss Cornell, and signalizes the star's first appearance in comedy since her assumption of a place among the foremost actresses of the American stage.

With the opening of the "Invisible Man Returns," at RKO-Keith's today, the theater reverts to its habitual policy of unreserved seats and continuous performances. Regular prices will prevail—10:45 a. m. to 5:30 p. m., 35 cents; 5:30 p. m. to closing, 55 cents, including tax.

Succumbing to the contagion of "gala premieres" that has swept the local picture houses recently, "Olympia" will open with more of the same at the Belasco Theater tonight at 8:30. This pictorial record of the last Olympic games, held in Berlin, will be viewed by a representative audience, including high Government officials, members of both houses of Congress and the Diplomatic Corps. Marked by a superb quality of photography and stripped of every vestige of the propaganda with which it was earlier charged, "Olympia" is reputed to present unadulterated entertainment of an unusually high order.

When Edward G. Robinson, Warner Brothers' star, was in Washington for the President's birthday celebrations, he hunted out the Rev. Gilbert Eartke, of the drama and speech department of Catholic University, and congratulated him upon the production of "Brother Orchid" here some amonths ago. It will be recalled that the rights to the play were purchased by the Warners for screen purposes. Edward G. Robinson will be starred in the title role.

Bing Crosby had the last laugh on a lot of people when his hayburner, Don Mike, won the $10,000 San Pasqual Handicap at Santa Anita recently. Bing told all of his friends that his bangtail looked like a winner, but they merely ran his past record as a tipster over in their minds and passed it up. This desk could have been of vast help to them. It can stop any horse in the world with a $2 bill!

Having just completed "Road to Singapore," the crooning Mr. Crosby not so long ago went under the care of Dr. Arnold Stevens, in St. Vincent's Hospital, New York, for a general checkup. Probably thought the excitement of winning that race had done something to his ticker, but the croaker couldn't find anything wrong with it.

That Crosby barn, by the way, goes under the name of the Binglin Stable. The other half of the name is Lindsay Howard, who is the brother-in-law of Andrea Leeds and son of C. S. Howard, owner of Seabiscuit, also a pretty good bangtail.

A "hillbilly wedding," harking back to the rootin', tootin', shootin' days of the Hatfields and the McCoys, will provide the unique finale of the "Barn Dance" stage revue, opening at Loew's Capitol today. It is understood that they even have a permit for the shootgun! "Red" Skelton and Edna Stillwell carry on a third week as the stage headliners at the Earle.

Those inimitable Dawks of the drama, Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, return to New York next Monday night for that week of benefit performances of Master Will Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew" for the Finnish Relief Fund. The engagement is stated to be limited to the one week in the Alvin Theater, under the joint auspices of the Theater Guild. Broadway odds are heavy that it will run longer than that after its triumphant 33,000-mile transcontinental tour. This Luntian debacle hasn't been seen on the main stem for something like two years. That long ago, it was a riot. It still is.

The widely heralded Julien Duvivier film production of "The End of a Day," will open its first local engagement on the screen of the Little Theater next Wednesday. It stars the eminent French actor, Louis Jouvet, and unreels a backstage story in which the experiences of a group of aging actors are woven into an unforgettable human drama.

The Non-Professional Front

The Pierce Hall Players' production of the comedy, "What a Life," will be presented in Pierce Hall for three nights, beginning Wednesday, February 7. For the final performance on February 9, the house has been taken over en toto by the Beta Sigma Phi Sorority . . . The Agriculture Players, under the direction of John L. Stewart, are up to their eyes in rehearsals of George M. Cohan's "The Tavern," to be acted in the Agriculture Auditorium the evenings of February 8 and 9 . . . Boasting some sort of "marathon drama record" in the Capital, the Security Club of the American Security & Trust Co., is engaged on its eighteenth annual production—Lula Vollmer's powerful play, "Sun Up," scheduled for Roosevelt High School Auditorium, April 17. Tryouts will be held February 14 to fill the nine roles . . . Minnie Frost Rand's historical drama of "The Prince of Peace" will be offered by the Prince of Peace Players Sunday night, February 11, at 8 o'clock, in the Transfiguration Episcopal Church Hall . . . A Swedish language screen comedy, "Kustens Glada Kavaljerer," will be shown by the Foreign Language Cinema League in Pierce Hall, tonight at 8. Ake Soderblum, the Swedish Charlie Chaplin, is the star.

Eternal-Unities Note

The biggest fight connected with "The Fighting 69th," going a second week at the Earle, seems to be among the customers out front trying to battle their way in!

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Feb. 1.

HARRY RICHMAN: Dick Merrill, with whom you flew back and forth across the Atlantic, has had transatlantic phone conversations with Lord Beaverbrook about training British pilots in this country. The price was all set—but then Merrill was refused Government permission to do it . . . Attorney General Jackson: Your aide in the Solicitor General's office, Huddleston, is slated to become Frank Murphy's law secretary.

GEN. MALIN CRAIG: For the Lincoln's Birthday week-end, delegates of the American Youth Congress are making a pilgrimage to Washington to protest against the huge Army and Navy defense appropriations . . . Eleanor Roosevelt has arranged for two of the delegates to be accommodated, during their stay, at the home of Secretary of War Harry Woodring.

GEORGE ABBOTT: Milton Berle, the star of your production, "See My Lawyer," isn't very happy ever since he decided to take a vacation from the play and go to Florida. In the first place, Paul Stewart, who replaced him, is doing too well at it. And then the ailing Berle was so cold while making his broadcast from Miami Beach last Saturday that he had to keep his hat and coat on all through the show.

MACKENZIE KING: Estelle Taylor, whose father once was a cigar worker, is going to Montreal next month to make cigars for one day—for the benefit of the British Army . . . Connie Broun: Clifford Odets' new play, "Night Music," will be dedicated to Heywood Broun.

RAYMOND MASSEY: At the command performance of "Life With Father" in Washington last Sunday the curtain went up four minutes earlier—because the President arrived ahead of schedule . . . There were so many Secret Service men guarding his box and the theater that Wally Fried, the stage manager, was stopped when he tried to get in . . . He managed to get by the first group of guards, but was stopped by a second group. "Who are you?" they finally asked him. "John Wilkes Booth," answered Fried . . . "Very well, Mr. Booth," they told him—and let him pass.

HEDY LAMARR: Greta Garbo is repeating your orange-juice order. She was at the Versailles Monday night and told the waiter: "Bring me orange juice—not strained and no ice—the way God made it" . . . Edgar Rice Burroughs: Joe Bonomo, who used to swing from trees in the Tarzan movie serials now is swinging a Wall Street deal for $100,000 to underwrite his new magazine, Good Healthkeeping.

THORNTON WILDER: Sol Lesser, producer of "Our Town," gave a typical New England dinner party to the Hollywood press to celebrate the start of the picture production. The menu consisted of boiled beef, boiled turkey, boiled potatoes, boiled cabbage. "This," he announced, "is the first party here where the dishes and not the guests were boiled."

KATHARINE HEPBURN: Your Blue Book contemporary, Jane Wyatt, is working very hard in her new assignment in Odets' "Night Music" . . . During Tuesday night's rehearsals Miss Wyatt recited one of her lines, stopped in the middle of it and said: "I don't like the way I said it. I'll try that again" . . . "Leave all that to me," Harold Clurman, the director, reminded. "You're not supposed to listen to yourself."

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Feb. 1 (INS).—Gary Cooper is back from Tucson for added scenes on "The Westerner" and Sam Goldwyn is readying "Seventh Cavalry" for Cooper's next. However, there are many ifs and buts about this opus since Sam must first huddle with his lawyers about his United Artists status. In the meantime Universal would give their right arm to get Gary for "Ski Patrol" —and if there are legal delays with Goldwyn and U. A. there's a very good chance of Sam's lending him.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Let me tell you more about "Ski Patrol." Universal is the first studio to leap first into the Finnish-Russian situation. Not one ounce of propaganda will be stressed; instead, the story which Paul Huston is developing will deal entirely with the adventure side—the bravery and skill of these skiing soldiers who have done so much to stave off the Russian invasion. Hollywood greatly admires these brave Finns and the motion picture division of Finnish relief is staging a benefit February 17, at Grauman's Chinese, with Joan Crawford, Spencer Tracy and Ralph Morgan pledged to help.

I am not supposed to know—much less tell—that there's a good chance that Harry Cohn will buy the film rights to "The Man Who Came to Dinner." George Kaufman and Moss Hart have given him the refusal. They were delighted with the way Columbia handled "You Can't Take It With You" and since $200,000 in cold cash was planked down for the privilege of filming the latter Kaufman-Hart play, there isn't much chance that the price asked for "The Man Who Came to Dinner" will bother the Columbia crowd. Perhaps Harry could get Alexander Woollcott to play his own part. I saw Monty Woolly in New York and he was wonderful. He might even be available.

Blonde Virginia Bruce has felt for some time that she hasn't been getting the breaks at her home studio, M-G-M. There are so many beauties at this studio and so many femme stars to rate the rat roles. So today Virginia, whose contract had six months to go, asked for her release and it was given her without any hard feeling on either side. E. H. Griffith would like to sign her for "the Virginian" and there will probably be a lot of other good pictures coming her way.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Ann Sheridan and George Brent looking for all the out-of-the-way places to dine, far, far from the maddening reporters. They were at Harry's steak house in the valley the other eve; Marlene Dietrich and Orson Welles an unexpected Troc twosome. Sitting near them were Margaret Lindsay and William Lundigan, a new Hollywood combination; Sinclair Lewis in our midst lunching at the Beverly Hills Hotel with his niece, Marcella Powers; Greta Garbo has been on a clothes shopping spree in New York and has looked beautiful in all her appearances with Gaylord Hauser; when Jimmy Stewart was grounded in New Mexico he kept the wires hot trying to telephone Olivia de Havilland, paging her at shops, cafes, friends' homes, etc., where he thought she might be; Fred MacMurray is entertaining tomorrow night in honor of his wife's birthday.

Eddie Mannix joining Clark Gable and Carole Lombard in Mexico for a hunting session; the Little Club, so socially popular a few years ago, is being revived and the first party of the season is Saturday night. The number of guests is limited to 275; Addison Randall and Louise Stanley, looking too, too happy; Vic Orsatti escorting Ruby Keeler and Mrs. Ted Flo Rita to Slapsie Maxie's for a few laughs; Gene Fowler, walking with a cane, apparently recovered from his recent accidents, at the M-G-M studios. To the many people who have asked when "Grapes of Wrath" would be previewed, it will not be previewed in California.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Feb. 1.

When I went over to R. K. O. to get an interview with Irene Dunne, by accident, I found myself in a projection room looking at "Swiss Family Robinson." When it was over, I said:

HOPPER

"What, no more?" That's just the way you'll feel about it. You won't want to leave. You'll get out all the old maps and begin searching for an island that perchance, you can be shipwrecked on. It packs such a wallop and it's loaded with entertainment. And gives you such a longing, escapist feeling, that I didn't even read war news for two days. Eddie Ludwig has put all his tenderest touches into it. To me, the acting plums were carried off by Tommy Mitchell and Freddie Bartholemew. I feel that in Metro's releasing Freddie from contract they've done him as great a service as they did Jackie Cooper, who doubled his salary and hasn't had an idle moment since. Freddie's a fine actor, and you see him grow from a fuss-growing fop to a man, before your eyes. And the occasional change of voice is screamingly funny.

The island is so beautiful with its flora and fauna, it's going to be mighty hard for you to believe that most of it was done on a stage. Yes, "Swiss Family Robinson" will bring Towne and Baker not only a lot of glory, but oodles of cash. Only wish I had a snip of it.

For months I've been begging our producers to do something about the extra situation. Now I see Willie Bioff is trying to take them over. Which would do them a great deal of harm in the long run. (I could make this stronger but it would be cut out.) At a certain studio, I won't mention any names, when a famous director was lining up his men for an important picture, which will have a long run, some of the men he depended on weren't sent for. But they got in anyway for an interview, one dressed as a policeman, two sneaked over the back fence, one as a milkman, another rode in on the back of an executive's car. They lined up with the other boys and were picked.

When they started shooting, this director will wonder where they are. Well, I can tell him—they were thrown out, because they weren't called through the regular channels. Ye. they're members of Central, with dues paid up. This condition can't go on much longer. Why? Because hungry men fight.

Charles Laughton has a gorgeous sense of humor and laughed loudest over my little jibe about his playing George Washington. And while we were giggling over it, I had an idea. "Charles, why don't you play 'Don Quixote?'" "I've a beter idea than that, Hedda. What about Mischa Auer playing Quixote and let me do Sancho Panza?" Well, what about it? It's a marvelous idea. And if some studio doesn't cash in on it, we may produce it ourselves. I'd give anything to see Charles, as the servant, Sancho Panza, taking a big bite out of the leg of that silly horse, Rozinante, while Auer hangs on to a windmill—wouldn't you? . . .

Producer Jimmy Roosevelt has invited Mary Roberts Rhinehardt out to see that he does right by her story, "The Bat." And when the picture's finished, he himself will take it out to small towns, run it, then get up and ask the audience what they think about it, and why? And I'll bet when some of the big boys read this they'll start in taking speech-making lessons!

And William G. Van Schmus, managing director of Radio City Music Hall tells me his employes, numbering 600, look at all their advance pictures, see five a week. They're asked for comments: would it be good for Music Hall? If so, why, if not, what's the matter with it? What interested you most and why? How many stars would you give it? Their opinion is taken in the spirit in which it's given. That's using the old bean. I remember talking to Admiral McNamee, when he was head of the fleet here. He told me each time a picture was run on shipboard opinions and frank comments were collected. When I mentioned this to a prominent producer and asked if it wouldn't be a good idea to get those comments, his reply was: "What do sailors know about making pictures?"

Lewis Hints At Miners' Political Force

Convention to Have 'Profound Influence,' C.I.O. Chief Says

By the Associated Press

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 1.—The United Mine Workers of America adjourned its thirty-sixth constitutional convention today, assuring the Nation that its sole objective was "constructive progress" for all people.

"Let the country be assured," John L. Lewis, president, told the 2,400 delegates, "that in all our plans and thoughts there is no thought to do anything to the detriment of any American citizen.

"Our every thought is to make constructive progress, not alone for ourselves, but for all the people of the country, our Nation and our flag."

Lewis said the convention, representing 600,000 miners, would have "profound influence" on certain public questions.

"Can there be any doubt," he asked, "that the workers are opposed to war and that labor won't support a statesman who will lead the Nation into war to carry out some fancy foreign policy?"

Delegates took the following action today:

Voted to create a national policy and scale committee which will prepare wage scales for submission to coal operators in March, 1941.

Reiterated a demand for a 30-hour work week.

Rejected a proposed constitutional amendment to levy assessments and set up a relief fund for miners affected by shutdowns during wage contract negotiations.

Disapproved of a proposal to accept transfer cards for all C. I. O. international unions, because the question should be decided by the C. I. O.

Officers will be elected in a referendum in December.

guilty of making reckless and intemperate statements. I do not know of a more competent lawyer in the United States than Charles Fahy."

Madden told the committee that the labor board had apparently fared better before the Supreme Court than any other Government agency. He pointed out that of 22 decisions involving the NLRB 18 sustained the board's position completely; 2 modified the board's contention, and 2 overruled the board.

Meanwhile, the House Labor Committee heard R. J. Thomas, president of the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers Union, defend the Wagner Act and criticize both Dr. Leiserson and Representative Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, a member of the Labor Committee.

Reopening the Labor Committee's hearing on revision of the Wagner Act after several months' recess, Thomas said that the only automobile manufacturer who still openly attacks the act is "that incorrigible union-hater, Henry Ford."

He said that all the auto makers but Ford were opposed to any "fishing expedition" at Detroit by the Smith committee.

Thomas said that Leiserson had "considerably weakened the administration of the Wagner Act."

Representative Hoffman, who sat just across the table from Thomas, "could not be elected dog-catcher in any automobile center," the witness commented. Asserting that Hoffman has "a venomous anti-labor slant," Thomas said that "when Mr. Hoffman speaks of auto labor, or any labor, he speaks out of prejudice and ignorance."

At the close of the hearing, Chairman Norton of the committee suggested that Thomas withdraw his remarks about Hoffman, but the Representative declared that anything Thomas said about him was "perfectly all right with me."

director and officials of the Department of Agriculture and WPA.

Bondy said it would be necessary for the Secretary of Agriculture and the Board of Public Welfare to enter into an agreement on persons eligible for 5-cent milk and then dairies would be asked to bid on the costs of bottling, processing and distributing.

Approximately 8,000 needy families would benefit under the relief milk plan, he said. These would include persons receiving direct relief, persons awaiting work assignments in WPA and persons receiving surplus commodities, but who are not getting other forms of relief or employed by WPA.

Dr. Yap Doubts Independent Philippines Would Be Safe

Islands Must Stay American Outpost, He Says in Talk

Conditions abroad "do not warrant carrying on the proffer of independence to the Philippines in 1946," Dr. Diosdado M. Yap, former publicity officer in the office of the Resident Commissioner of the Philippines to the United States, last night advised the Town Hall Associate Group at the Jewish Community Center.

"The Philippines," he said, "must remain an American outpost for the safety and security of the Filipinos and for the maintenance of the American open door policy in China."

Dr. Yap said much alarm is felt in the islands over Japan's success in China and "a strong public sentiment" there favors reexamination of the Philippine question. The Filipinos, he said, "prefer security and safety over and above independence."

"America must remain in the Philippines until such time as the conditions of the world will return to normalcy," he emphasized.

Dr. Yap's address led the group's discussion of "Should We Stay in the Philippines?" in connection with the weekly Town Hall Forum of the Air. Radio speakers were Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt, former high commissioner to the Philippines; Nicholas Roosevelt, former vice commissioner to the Philippines, and Raymond Leslie Beall, author and lecturer.

It was announced in New York that two Washington men won prizes in the Town Hall essay contest on "What Does American Democracy Mean to Me?" They were George N. Leighton, a student, of 2401 Sixth street northwest, who took second prize of $200, and J. Russell Tuft, of 3921 New Hampshire avenue northwest, who was accorded honorable mention.

McNutt contended the United States should "stay in the Philippines," while Roosevelt took the opposite view, contending the islands should be given their independence in 1942 rather than in 1946. The former commissioner argued that they were important to this Nation's "protection" in the Pacific.

Roosevelt recalled that he originally held the Philippines were not ready for independence but that the United States already had surrendered most of its authority and that Congress had set a date for independence. And, he said, "it seems to me we made our initial mistake when we agreed to grant the islands independence, but we have so agreed and we cannot go back on our word . . . The Filipino politicians have made their bed; let them lie in it."

DIOSDADO YAP

Lewis Bestows 'Kiss of Death,' A. F. L. Charges in Convention

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Feb. 1.—A political "kiss of death," the American Federation of Labor declared today, awaits any candidate who "seeks and accepts" the support of the C.I.O. and "places himself in bondage" to John L. Lewis.

"Certain defeat" faces such candidates, the federation predicted in a statement on "political policy and program" which stressed the "great importance of the impending political campaign of 1940 to labor and to the Nation."

The statement, released through the federation's executive council, expressed conviction that "no political party and no Presidential candidate with a record or a program hostile to organized labor can possibly be victorious."

When asked at a press conference to amplify the council's "kiss of death" statement, William Green, federation president, smiled and said "it is merely referring to some historical events that have taken place."

He then mentioned the names of former Representatives Bernard, of Minnesota; Maverick, of Texas, and O'Connell, of Montana, and blamed what he called their pro-C.I.O. leanings for their failure to be re-elected.

The council's statement said the federation in 1940 would "exert all the influence and power at our command to the end that both major parties nominate for the office of President of the United States outstanding men whose outlook is friendly and sympathetic to the problems of the working men and women of the Nation."

Asked if he thought President Roosevelt filled such a role, Green said "I had no particular individual in mind when the council's statement was written."

"We were not dealing with the present Administration in this statement," said Green. "We were looking to the future—to the political conventions of next summer.

"There has ben no expression by either the council or its individual members on any feeling toward a possible third term for the President."

Driver Is Held After Inquest in Fifth Traffic Death

William J. Warner, 49, of 4905 Potomac street northwest, was held under the negligent homicide act for Police Court action yesterday by a coroner's jury after an inquest into the traffic death of William Pinner, 70, of 1048 Jefferson street northwest.

Pinner, the fifth traffic victim this year, died at Emergency Hospital Tuesday of injuries suffered when he was knocked down January 10 at Twenty-fifth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest. According to witnesses, Warner was driving to the left of a street car loading platform when he struck the elderly pedestrian. The street was icy at the time.

but indicated a prompt reply would be sent.

Police officials recalled that a former South Carolina member of the Metropolitan Police Department, Hubert E. (Steve) Brodie, 47, with 22 years service, was demoted from detective sergeant in First Precinct last November 15 and assigned to a beat in Eighth Precinct.

Police officials, then and now, have declined to reveal charges against Brodie, explaining only that he was demoted "for the good of the service." Yesterday's move was understood to be for the purpose of forcing District authorities to bring specific charges against Brodie and enable him to face them openly or to reinstate him in his former position.

Brodie was reported to have prominent family connections in South Carolina. His home, before he came to Washington, was Columbia, S. C.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, last night would not reveal the charge under which Brodie was demoted and said he did not know of Senator Byrnes' letter to Hazen. Brown added that Brodie was appointed from the civil service list, according to law, and as far as he know had no Congressional indorsement.

Brodie, who was granted a one-day emergency leave of absence late yesterday, could not be reached at his home.

Commissioner Hazen's confirmation was held up in the Senate District Committee for about two weeks by request of Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, who later withdrew his objection, permitting the nomination to reach the Senate floor.

Burden On Congress

All the complicated machinery of national legislation must be put into motion to relieve District residents of an unreasonable burden in payment of the new local income tax. There seems to be no opposition to the Commissioners' plan of splitting the tax payment into semiannual installments and deferring the filing date to April 15. But a lot of legislative energy will be required to make this reasonable adjustment effective.

Fortunately, District leaders in both the House and Senate are attempting to rush the amendment through. Apparently Congress never intended to require payment of the tax at a time when it would be particularly burdensome. The real mistake, however, lies in Congress' failure to authorize the Board of Commissioners to adjust the statute to the specific needs of the community.

Washington is plagued by the existence of many old statutes which prevent the local government from functioning efficiently. But here is a new District law less than a year old which can be modified as to details of its application only by the complicated procedure of Congressional amendment.

If the Board of Commissioners cannot be trusted to make simple adjustments in revenue laws to meet the changing needs of the community, they should certainly be replaced by some agency that could act in behalf of Washington. The fact is, of course, that any local government could effect changes of this sort to far better advantage than can Congress. Yet that body clings to purely local responsibilities which cause it no end of trouble.

As legislators struggle to effect this simple change, it is difficult to see how they can avoid reflecting upon the advantages of setting up a genuine local government in Washington competent to handle such details for itself.

A Mask Of Optimism

The survey of Japan's international relations which that nation's foreign minister presented at the reopening of the Diet in Tokyo yesterday was not a particularly happy effort. Mr. Arita was obviously making an attempt to put as bright a face as possible on his country's situation. But the attempt did not quite come off.

Two and a half years of war with China have resulted in a steady deterioration of Japan's international position. There is not an important nation, with the sole possible exception of Italy, which counts for little in the Far East, that the island empire can now regard as friendly.

China fights on; and because she does, the stresses and strains within Japan are steadily increasing. Relations with Great Britain and France are bad as a result of the reckless policies pursued by the Japanese militarists at Tientsin and elsewhere. Relations with the United States have reached a critical stage following expiration of the abrogated commercial treaty. And Germany, erstwhile partner of Japan in the anti-Comintern agreement, is now on the friendliest footing with Japan's mortal enemy, Russia.

From a realistic point of view, therefore, Foreign Minister Arita can find scant comfort in the situation. But he makes the best showing possible. Ignoring the breakdown in the boundary negotiations with Soviet Russia, he emphasizes the negotiations now taking place for a Soviet-Japanese commercial agreement. He rejoices that despite the absence of any regulating treaty, "Japanese-American trade relations have in practice undergone no change." He passes over German-Russian cooperation to declare that "Japan's relations with Germany and Italy have grown increasingly cordial ever since the conclusion of the anti-Comintern agreement." After which he illogically maintains that Japan's "policy of defense against the Comintern remains unaltered."

There was little in Mr. Arita's speech that will be encouraging to those of his hard-pressed countrymen who know the real facts. Certainly that is true of his prediction that "a central Chinese government under the leadership of Wang Ching-wei is to be established in the near future." Everybody knows, and Mr. Arita in this speech goes a long way to admit it, that this regime will be a puppet in Tokyo's hands, and without real power to make peace. Nor is there much in the speech that will disarm the suspicions of the Western powers.

Mr. Arita's pledge that Japan is not seeking monopolies in China, or planning the exclusion of third powers, is all too obviously subject to the desires of the militarists who have shown an almost malicious delight in making liars of Japan's civilian leaders. Yet, insofar as the speech was the expression of a more moderate point of view than spokesmen in Tokyo have expressed recently, it shows the degree to which Japan is worried by the turn of events. When the devil is sick . . . .

Knocks That Boost

On January 22, Representative Hook, of Michigan, attacked the Dies Committee on the floor of the House. The following day that body approved continuation of the committee for another year, expressing its determination by the overwhelming vote of 344 to 21. Obviously Mr. Hook's speech had little or no influence on his colleagues.

It now appears that some of the evidence presented by Mr. Hook in an effort to discredit his colleague, Martin Dies, was faked. A local agent of William Dudley Pelley, of Silver Shirt fame, testifies that he received money for forging Pelley's name to correspondence designed to establish the existence of an "understanding" between Pelley and Dies. The money was paid by a certain Harold Weisberg, formerly an investigator for the La Follette Civil Liberties Committee, acting in behalf of Gardner Jackson, a Washington lobbyist for radical causes. The purchased material was then turned over to Congressman Hook and used by him in his futile attack on Dies.

There is no credit for anybody in these disclosures. Mr. David D. Mayne, the agent for Mr. Pelley, is by his own account revealed as a very unscrupulous person. Mr. Weisberg, who fell headlong into the trap laid for him, must be regarded as a sucker, to say the least. Mr. Jackson, who provided the money paid Mayne by Weisberg, has not improved his reputation as a lobbyist. And the publicity will not be helpful to Congressman Hook, who was apparently content to construct most of his speech against Dies out of stuff turned over to him by Jackson and Weisberg.

It is all another instance of the fact that those who have most vehemently attacked the Dies Committee have throughout proved its best friends. The radicals who have made every effort to discredit the committee have inevitably aroused suspicion that they are very much afraid of what it may be able to disclose. No higher tribute to the work of Mr. Dies has been paid than the almost frantic efforts of the Communists to stop his investigation.

But it would be most unfortunate to assume from the current episode that all criticism of the Dies Committee is unsubstantial, or that those who criticize are necessarily fearful that they may themselves be investigated. And at the moment it is well worth while to recall the wise words of Representative Casey, of Massachusetts, a member of the committee, who, after pointing to certain of its actions as "disgraceful and un-American," nonetheless voted for its continuation.

"I am somewhat alarmed," said Mr. Casey, just prior to the vote on January 23, "at the lack of criticism of the Dies Committee . . . We ought to be able to subject the activities of this committee or any other committee to the searchlight of investigation to find out whether what they are doing is right and just and democratic." And he concluded, amid applause, that the future investigations must be carried on "in a calm, judicial, more honest and more accurate manner."

No revelation of trickery, deceit or hidden motive in attacks on the committee should be allowed to sway its members from that high resolve.

The Uses Of Publicity

As a result of Mrs. Roosevelt's visit to the Home for the Aged and Infirm, Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee has ordered an investigation of conditions there. Very likely the inquiry will now be extended to include the Receiving Home for Children and the Industrial Home School—two more District welfare institutions inspected this week by the First Lady.

The residents of Washington have reason to be extremely grateful to Mrs. Roosevelt for openly denouncing the disgraceful inadequacy of institutions charged with the care of the helpless aged and the equally helpless young. But even more important is the incidental service she has performed in showing up the inertia of Congress which in part accounts for the conditions which have "shocked and depressed" her.

While it is encouraging to hear that the House District Committee has been roused from its lethargy, there is really no need to launch a committee inquiry to determine the needs of the local welfare agencies. These are a matter of public record to which the Board of Public Welfare and various consulting experts have called attention repeatedly. However, necessary reforms could not be effected because funds to finance them were not appropriated.

If Washington had a municipal government run by officials answerable to the people, it would not be necessary for public-spirited individuals like Mrs. Roosevelt to advertise the shameful shortcomings of local institutions. The residents themselves would be quick to demand reforms if they had the power to compel action. And officials would be responsive to the pressure of an aroused public opinion. Public indignation is of little avail, however, in a city where the people have no voice whatsoever in the conduct of local government. For that reason Washingtonians are disposed to close their eyes to defects they cannot remedy.

Mrs. Roosevelt has not only struck an effective blow on behalf of the underprivileged, unfortunate inmates of certain public institutions but she has also increased the resentment of the people of this disfranchised community against the bungling governmental system under which they live. In so doing she has aided the campaign for the establishment of a responsible system of local government run by officials answerable to the people for their conduct of purely local affairs.

Unbalanced Trade

Ever since the World War the United States has been a so-called creditor country, selling more goods abroad than it imports. Repeatedly we have been warned that this preponderance of exports could not be expected to continue indefinitely, since the normal procedure is for debtor countries to sell more goods than they buy, while creditor countries buy more goods than they sell.

During the twenties the day of reckoning was deferred because Americans made large loans abroad which enabled foreigners to buy our goods without shipping an equal amount of goods in payment. When foreign lending came to a virtual standstill at the end of the twenties, large export surpluses were succeeded by greatly reduced merchandise balances and in 1936 our export surplus approached the vanishing point.

There was at the time a quite widespread belief that this narrowing of the gap between exports and imports indicated that the country's foreign trade was being adjusted to the requirements of its creditor status. The assumption proved to be unfounded, for very soon exports again began to outstrip imports, with the result that in 1938 the excess of exports reached $1,134,000,000—a total not exceeded since the post-war year 1921. Figures just released by the Department of Commerce show that 1939 has also produced an export surplus amounting to $859,000,000. Moreover, these great balances have been obtained despite the fact that the total value of our foreign trade is far below the level of the twenties.

The war has resulted in cutting off some exports, but it has stimulated the exportation of other commodities. The net result is that the closing months of the past year witnessed a rise in the value of exports, bringing total figures for the year slightly above those of 1938. While imports have likewise been expanding, the export excess in December was much greater than a year ago, reaching $121,000,000.

Again the maxim that goods have to be paid for with goods appears to be contradicted by the facts. But it is necessary to keep in mind that goods may also be paid for in gold. Since the dollar was devalued it is estimated that well over $2,000,000,000 of goods and services which we have sold to other countries in excess of the amount of our purchases have been offset by receipts of gold. Of course, that is only a small part of our total gold acquisitions since 1934. Last year alone we received $3,575,000,000 of gold, representing in part payment for exported goods and in part a capital inflow.

Our gold policy thus very directly influences the value and volume of our export trade. If we were to refuse to accept gold in unlimited quantities or decided to accept it on less favorable terms, the problem of disposing of export surpluses of the present magnitude would be acute.

As Senator Townsend stated in a recent address, the foreign-owned dollars obtained by shipments into the United States of foreign bullion and our motor trucks, airplanes and cotton and thus make export business. "But it is also true," as he explains, "that those American exports of goods constitute simply a means by which we pay for the foreign gold and silver." And since we have no use for a considerable part of the gold and silver we already possess, this sort of payment for our goods is a very questionable bargain.

Every Little Bit Counts!

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch

Ten nickel-squeezing, chiseling baseball players—some of them members of the Browns and the Kansas City team—have had the crust to apply for unemployment insurance in Missouri. Not only to apply for it, but to get it. One of these players receives between $8,000 and $9,000 a year from the Browns, yet is willing to take $15 a week from the State, and apparently there is no way under the law to prevent him and his fellow-chiselers from doing so. Another good way for these boys to get money would be to put on a fake limp and buy a tin cup.

Workers' Alliance

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The attack by one Phillip Bonosky, who signs himself "President, District Workers Alliance," on The Post's attitude toward WPA, is infinitely more revealing than was The Post's comment on the Harrington report.

Regardless of what one may think of opinions expressed on social, political and economic matters by such newspapers as The Post, one is never in doubt as to the consistency of their position. The Post, for example, openly declares its partiality to the capitalist system, and unreservedly advocates the promulgation of such activities as are in consonance with its underlying principles.

But what about the "Workers Alliance?" Pretending to represent the interests of workers, it proceeds—or rather proceeded—to carry out a policy which hamstrung the workers and destroyed every opportunity of any real gain. Capitalism in general and the present Administration in particular, never had more loyal or devoted representation than was given it by the "Workers Alliance" and its sister organizations.

But those were the days when President Roosevelt was The Great Democrat, and capitalism, as represented by his Administration, was the gallant proletarian hero in quest of the big bad wolf—fascism. In other words, that was the line ordered by Stalin.

Since the Stalin-Hitler marriage, Stalin has ordered a 180 degree turn, and so now Roosevelt has become the "war-monger," his Administration, "reactionary" and things in general are now ripe for the reenacting of the 1924 "third-period" policy of the Communist Party, whose slogans then were "Into the streets!" "Capture the State!" etc.

The Workers Alliance is moving stealthily. It takes time to become accommodated to a "new line." And so, for the nonce, one is spared the agony of observing its actions or hearing its name. But only for the nonce. Unless some independent organization composed of and led by the unemployed themselves steps into the breach, the unemployed will soon be at the mercy of the "Workers Alliance" (spelled STALIN) again.

Japanese Embargo

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Anent the proposed embargo, are we wise to seek a quarrel with Japan at this time? Had America, a year ago, declared her purpose to help punish a would-be aggressor nearer home, i. e. in Europe, it might—nay would—have prevented this tragic war now raging there.

Taking part in a war already begun is another matter. But what assurance have we that our own welfare does not hinge on the results of this war and that we ourselves will not inevitably be drawn in? Should we not, then, husband our resources and likewise avoid making enemies outside of Europe?

In the light of the situation in Europe, are either England or the United States in a position to enforce their rights in the Far East? When we have again put down the mad dog in Europe, the very same that brought such universal woe upon us before, it will be time enough to take on Japan if then found necessary. In this connection we must realize that China, which only yesterday sought to abolish the International Settlement at Shanghai, would be quite as ready as Japan to turn out the "white devil" had she the power to do so.

To place an embargo on basic war material would only lead to some other country acting as an entrepot through which Japan would even get our products.

To embargo oil might readily bring about a Japanese assault on the Netherlands East Indies, an act calculated to bring in England at whatever cost because of the nearness of the English base at Singapore. In that event would we, the cause of it all, be prepared to come to the aid of Holland and of England?

Right To Revolt

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Government employes were this month given a questionnaire to fill out. This questionnaire asked whether or not the employe belonged to any organization which plotted the overthrow of the now existing form of Government in the United States?

Can you imagine anyone admitting that he belonged to such an organization? No one in his right mind would admit such a fact unless he no longer wanted to retain his job. It all seems like a great big joke but underneath it is a very sinister plot to destroy the civil liberties and the good social laws that the people fought for and which they have the right to retain.

It also is the sounding note of the now notorious Industrial Mobilization Plan engineered by the War Department and sanctioned by the White House. This plan takes care of the conscription and regimentation of all labor and civilians.

Lincoln, without a shadow of a doubt one of our most outstanding and understanding Presidents, once stated, "this country and its institutions belong to the people who inhabit it and whenever they grow weary of the existing form of government they have the constitutional right to dismember or overthrow it." Thomas Jefferson, equally as great a man, went a step further and suggested that the people change their form of government at least once every 20 years.

I, for one, question the right of any group to foist upon the people a questionnaire such as mentioned above and do it in the name of democracy. Or is it a democracy that one only reads about in books on phllosophy?

Needs Information

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I need information. All the arguments for and against the third term which I have heard have involved the personality of President Roosevelt. I should like to know something of the problem considered abstractly.

What can be said in favor of allowing a President (of the future) to run a third time? By what arguments have the many bills which were offered to prevent third terms been voted down?

All I read and hear opposes a third term, but this opposition would not have to exist if there were nothing to be said on the other side. Please tell me what it is!

Against Loan To Finland

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to write in complaint of your paper with regard to the proposed Finnish loan. It is indeed a sorry state of affairs when the public is urged to support a loan to help not quite a million people in a foreign country, when here in our own country, we have a conservative estimate of 11,000,000 people jobless and starving. I, for one, believe in "Relief for Americans First."

In addition, everyone interested in peace can easily see that financial aid, in any form, to a country at war, would be a stepping stone to the sending of troops. It would be well for us to make our position clear now: that we do not want to go to war!

Mr. McNutt's Labor Record

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The recent blast of John L. Lewis against former Gov. McNutt of Indiana indicates some anxiety and fever of mind. Does he fear that long overdue fading to a place of relative obscurity to which he should have long ago retreated?

The writer has no ax to grind, does not have the pleasure of the personal acquaintanceship of Mr. McNutt, nor is he affiliated directly or indirectly with his political associates, and has taken no part to enhance Mr. McNutt's ambitions. As a responsible officer, however, of a carpenters' union, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor and solely in the interest of truth and fair play, I want to indorse the substance of what a president of a national labor organization, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor recently said.

The calling out of troops in Indiana was an unfortunate incident, but it may have been required. It may weigh heavily with a prejudiced person who neither knows nor will trouble himself to become acquainted with the real facts. However, anyone familiar with labor legislation and its progress in the United States, or who is unbiased and will honestly view the record, must say that more beneficial labor legislation was passed during the four years of Gov. McNutt's administration as Governor of Indiana than during the administration of any other Governor at any other equal time in any other State in the Union in the entire history of the labor movement.

That record Mr. Lewis cannot destroy. It is incomparable. I have taken pains to acquaint myself with Gov. McNutt's labor record. Where, during four years and prior to a great deal of national legislation, have 44 separate beneficial laws to labor been sponsored and approved in 125 legislative days anywhere else in the country?

These laws are on the statute books in Indiana. Can it be that Mr. Lewis, who owes his place of doubtful prominence in America today by reason of his alleged lifelong assistance to labor, is jealous of what Mr. McNutt was able to accomplish in the short space of four years?

Is he willing to discard these accomplishments because the Governor had the courage to maintain his oath of office and answer the appeals of the State law officers in Indiana with reference to a difficulty for which in no way was he personally responsible, either in its precipitation or continuance? Labor will do well to look to the record, and not be guided by the unjustified conclusion of Mr. Lewis. Labor will do well to weigh Mr. McNutt's accomplishments in its scales of justice in comparison to the baseless criticism of one item in the record.

Man Meets Plane

We were determined to attend the Army's plane show, but most of all we wanted to see the Airacobra. According to the news article, the service had been keeping this thing under wraps. The reporter said it was just about the fastest thing in the air—with a speed, in level flight, "in excess of 400 miles an hour," and a range out of the ordinary for pursuit ships.

Moreover, the Airacobra's pictures made it look so radical in design as to be almost fantastic. The layman's eye discerned therein a little of the racehorse, a little of the duck and a little of the dinosaur.

So it was with an admitted curiosity, as well as the feeling that all good citizens should learn about Uncle Sam's air force, that we set out for new Bolling Field. We had read that the sponsors of the show were well pleased with the public's reaction—that the visitors were said to have demonstrated intelligence in the comments they made and the questions they asked. This statement had the double effect of making us proud of the air force and proud of ourselves as members of an intelligent public. We pictured ourselves, also, asking intelligent questions, and the relationship between us and the Army became, for the first time, a personal one.

There were the planes, as represented—a long line of all types, disappearing into the snow-clouded distance. The sight of their brutish noses gave us a lift, even from afar. Here was the new Douglas medium bomber we had been wanting to see, and here also were kinds of attack planes we had never been shown in the magazines. Here was an overshadowing cargo plane, and here also, at length, were the gargantuan Boeings with which the air force has advertised our might throughout the hemisphere.

The initial thrill wore off. There were the planes, it was true, but Mr. and Mrs. Public mustn't step across the rope, and, after all, mightn't they just as well be looking at pictures? To be sure, under each of the air giants a khaki-clad man stamped around with his neck drawn as far into his collar as possible to keep warm. He was there to answer questions. Well, there were things we had been wishing for a long time to know. "What," we might inquire, "is the speed of this bomber? What is its range?" And these questions would have led nowhere, for, as we knew full well, the matters concerned are secret.

Or we might have propounded the issue uppermost in our minds:

"What about these D-4 bombsight plans a man said he pilfered from the Navy for Japan? Are they the ones we're supposed to have been guarding all these years? Is that why the Japanese can bomb a gunboat and other fliers can't even hit a battleship?"

But we didn't mention this thought either—for we had no desire to be examined with suspicion or rushed out of there.

At last we pointed to the larger Boeing and whispered:

"Is that the biggest one in use?"

"Yeah," said the attendant Army man.

We considered a moment longer.

"That's an awful lot of metal to be flying through the air," we ventured. But the wind carried our voice away. We turned to the pursuit planes. Here were the P's and the XP's, familiar and unfamiliar shapes, but still no Airacobra.

"Is that the one known as the Hawk?" we asked.

"Dunno," said the young man in khaki. "It's the P-36."

"I guess it is the Hawk," we rejoined, because we had been sure it was all the time.

With that we made for the hangars. It was growing dark rapidly and the wind was sweeping the snow in our faces. Once inside, we were confronted with a bulletin headed.

U. S. ESPIONAGE ACT.

Which informed us that for illegally obtaining information relative to the defense of the United States we could be imprisoned not more than two years, and that for illegally divulging such information we could be imprisoned for not more than 30 years. In the light of our experience outside, we did not consider we were in peril of learning anything dangerous, but we resolved to be extra careful.

A staggering number of things lay before us in the first hangar—a Link trainer, a demonstration of the automatic pilot, a complete mobile radio outfit, the aerial photographic process from camera to map, every type of motor, from the 2-cylinder grandad of the radial engine to the 18-cylinder, 1,850-horsepower giant being made for the air force today. You could learn how most of these things worked if you had the time and the talent. It would have taken days. We spent an hour and went to the next hangar with 5 minutes to spare before the show closed. We still had not seen any Airacobra.

When we went through the little door into Hangar No. 2, there it was. It had been camouflaged a pale bedroom pink, but after all it didn't look very different from any other airplane.

"What's that thing sticking up behind the cockpit?" we asked the attendant.

"That's to cool the oil," he said.

"Oh," we replied, wondering if we had stumbled upon a military secret. Then it was closing time. We were grateful for a good show—and if it wasn't exactly what we expected, we were forced to admit we wouldn't have known how to do it any better.

Fair Enough

'Mafia' of America

MOST SPEAKERS and writers on the subject of labor organization invariably modify their amiable criticism of racketeering in the unions of the American Federation of Labor with the proviso that, of course, the organization as a whole and its subsidiaries are governed by able, conscientious men and the dishonest union official is a rare exception to a high standard. This has become a formula, adopted as a means of showing that the speaker or writer is not hostile to labor, with a capital L, and only hopes that, for labor's own sake, steps will be taken to delouse the structure of the vermin which crawls in its walls.

From that opinion I have to dissent to the extreme of saying that, in my opinion, the American Federation of Labor is rotten with extortion and racketeering, much of which is presumed to be legal only because nobody has ever taken the trouble to show that it is illegal, and much of which is just plain criminal.

Declared Infested With Racketeers

I HAVE RECENTLY named two racketeers in control of two big A. F. of L. International Unions, but I could name a hundred thieves and gangsters, embezzlers and terrorists who hold office in unions of the American Federation of Labor. They infest the A. F. of L. to such a degree that the organization has negligently lost its right to public respect as a labor movement and has become the front for a privileged terror obviously comparable to the Mafia of Sicily. The Mafia, too, began with high motives, but as it developed power became a terroristic organization.

The A. F. of L. issues charters to subsidiary unions, which, in turn, issue charters to locals, but the parent organization claims to have no authority over its subsidiaries of any degree, and the Federal Government, for reasons of political tact, refuses to interfere on behalf of the rank and file members or the public interest.

Revenue Bureau Ignores Union Books

THE BUREAU of Internal Revenue, which harries honest individual citizens for a few dollars more of income tax and compels them to produce old checks, stubs, contracts and receipts in worrisome and ill-intended inquiries into private affairs, which are no business of any Government agency, has a fixed policy of ignoring the books of labor rackets, even though they are notoriously crooked merely because they possess union charters.

A union is held to be nontaxable as to its income unless that income inures to the benefit of individuals, but the possession of a charter is deemed to be a sufficient guarantee that the funds are honestly administered. Therefore the accounts are not even questioned, while business firms and individuals are compelled to submit to the most searching and often the most impudent and insincere inspections.

A greasy racketeer up from the pandering and bootlegging trades is protected from inquiry as to his thievings and his extortions by the assumption that the funds of the union of which he is boss have not inured to his benefit, when it is obvious to any observer that he would not be in the union racket if he were not getting his.

Green Still Silent On The Bioff Case

IF HE REPORTS his union salary and allowances and pays the tax on the salary, deducting the allowances from his income, there is no inquiry into the spread between these book figures and the graft which he takes down from a union whose books are inviolate, or from employers.

The rottenness of the American Federation of Labor is demonstrated in one dramatic particular by the case of Willie Bioff, whose history need not be reviewed again just now. Did William Green, the president of the American Federation of Labor, say one word about Bioff when his record was disclosed, when it was shown that this fugitive from a jail sentence in Chicago had become, by appointment and not by any vote of the union rank and file, the boss of the theatrical and movie trades, or when it developed that he had become a rich man on a modest union salary? Mr. Green did not.

But Bioff is only one of many gangster labor leaders in the A. F. of L. not counting the rodent enemies of labor and of the public who have been driven out by Tom Dewey in New York.

So I don't subscribe to the proposition that the leadership of the A. F. of L. unions is, on the whole, either able or honest. If it were able it would kick out the criminals, and if it were honest it could not cooperate with or even associate with them.

The Rights Of The Executive

FROM TIME to time during the past years of the Roosevelt Administration, and most particularly during the debate over the Supreme Court and in the era of the "must" legislation, we have found it fitting to protest against the encroachment of the executive branch of the Government upon the legislative and judicial powers.

It is now, I think, time to point to another and equally serious tendency—the tendency of Congress to encroach upon the executive, in the exercise of its specifically granted constitutional powers, namely, the conduct of foreign affairs.

The conduct of foreign affairs is not, under the Constitution, in the hands of the Congress. The House of Representatives is specifically excluded. The reasons for this exclusion have been set forth with logic and clarity, particularly in the seventy-fifth paper of the Federalist. The treaty-making power, the whole field of relations with foreign countries, is vested in the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate, and of the Senate alone. The initiative is given to the Executive.

Diplomats Report Only To President

THE DIPLOMATIC agents of the United States are appointed by the President. They report to him.

In this field the Executive is intended to be strong. It is intended that he shall follow the advice of the seventy-first Federalist that "we can with no propriety contend" for the complaisance of the Executive "to the humors of the Legislature . . . It is desirable that the Executive should be in a situation to dare to act his own opinion . . ."

And the seventy-fifth paper says that the President should have power, "by and with the advice and consent of the Senate to make treaties . . . is one of the best digested and most unexceptional parts of the plan (the Constitution) . . . The particular nature of the power . . . indicates a peculiar propriety . . . the power . . . relates neither to the execution of the subsisting laws nor to the enactment of new ones . . . Its objects are contracts with foreign nations, which have the force of law, but derive it from the obligations of good faith." "The qualities detailed as indispensable in the management of foreign negotiations point out the Executive as the most fit agent." . . . "Accurate and comprehensive knowledge of foreign politics; a steady and systematic adherence to the same views . . . decision, secrecy and dispatch are incompatible with the genius of the House of Representatives."

Now, far from sticking to the wise and sane constitutional policy of giving the initiative to the President in the conduct of foreign affairs, with the advice and consent of the Senate alone, we are actually having our foreign affairs conducted by Gallup polls and letter-writing campaigns to Congress, while partisan politics intervene to influence our foreign policy all along the line.

Confusion Created By Foreign Agents

THIS CONDITION gives foreign countries, particularly those whose revolutionary governments aim at direct interference in our own domestic affairs through agents and organizations picked from amongst our own people, an unexampled opportunity to spread confusion among us. A cry goes up that "no further discretionary powers" must be granted to the Executive, and the cry is used as an excuse to weaken or remove those constitutional powers which are his.

Actually, we are legislating our foreign policy. The Neutrality Act is a piece of legislation of foreign policy in advance of unpredictable situations, and it is a direct encroachment upon the constitutional powers of the Executive.

Had the President, during the last six years, been more scrupulous not to encroach upon the prerogatives of Congress and of the courts, he would be in a much better position today. But the same column that defended the judiciary and the Congress upon other occasions must today defend the Executive!

The seventy-fifth Federalist realized clearly that if a nation is to maintain its power, prestige, safety, security and rights, in the world at large, it must preserve a "steady and systematic adherence to the same views, decision, secrecy and dispatch."

Open Debate Possible For Domestic Affairs

A DEMOCRATIC nation can and must debate its domestic affairs in the open, and change or modify its program and policy from day to day. Partisanship is not only every citizen's right; it is a valuable way of organizing responsibility and reflecting opinion.

The American people have control over the whole range of their domestic affairs.

But they do not and cannot have control over the whole range of their foreign affairs, for the very simple reason that we do not know what any other nation may do! In our relations with the rest of the world there are innumerable bargainers—ourselves, and all the other countries.

The conduct of foreign affairs demands not only the knowledge of what the American people want, but knowledge of what other peoples intend! This knowledge is available through channels that feed it to the Executive. In every country we have our diplomatic agents, our military and naval attaches, our intelligence services, whose business it is to report to the President what are matters of public knowledge and what are not matters of public knowledge—indeed, to find out what there is that foreign governments do not wish us to know. To the best of his knowledge and wisdom the President must act upon this information; he must act from day to day.

But if the world knows that whatever the diplomatic agents of the President say may be made ridiculous tomorrow by the action of Congress, by and by nations cease to listen at all. Instead they attempt to bring pressure upon the President by appealing to public opinion inside our own country!

Some Suggestions Are Preposterous

THIS FAILURE to comprehend the nature of foreign relations leads entirely well meaning people to make preposterous suggestions. At one of the most critical moments in world history, former Gov. Landon demanded that the President should announce publicly that he would not run for a third term. Quite properly the President did not reply. It would have been supremely impossible for him to do so. If he should announce that under no conditions would he be President in 1941 the United States would lose every scrap of influence that it has in the world from now until then and would become a fishing pond for every sort of foreign intrigue.

It was precisely this sort of thing that Washington was most fearful of when he made the farewell address, in a period of history—during the revolutionary wars in Europe—when conditions were more similar to the present ones than they have been at any time since.

This address is more honored in the breach than in the observance, and seems to have been reduced in the popular mind to a single misquotation, taken out of its entire context.

As a matter of fact, the continual encroachments of the Congress upon the Executive in the matter of foreign policy have made it impossible for the United States really to have a foreign policy at all! That "steady and systematic adherence to the same views" becomes impossible. We denounce aggression and, when it comes to action, aid aggression. We take a diplomatic line and, in a showdown, abandon it utterly.

At this moment the most critical place is in our relations with Japan. If we are to maintain "steady and systematic adherence to the same views" we should not renew the trade treaty with Japan, and we should make it clear that the President has a right to declare an embargo against Japan.

We are in serious danger of becoming the world's greatest bluffer. Solemnly enunciated policies become cynically regarded abroad as just so much hot air. This attitude of other nations will one day be dearly paid for, if not by us, then by our children.

Eureka! The Solution!

By Ernest K. Lindley

Freezing Out The Relief Problem

A NEW PLAN for handling the relief problem has been put before the Administration. It is at once scientific, humane, and economical. Those who have studied it consider it the most promising scheme so far devised for solving a problem which has wracked the best brains of the Nation for almost a decade.

More specifically, here are some of the things that the new plan would accomplish:

1. Abolish all discrimination in the distribution of relief. It would obliterate the unfair dividing line between the patricians on WPA and the unfortunates who must scratch along on such direct relief as is granted by the communities in which they live.

2. Preserve morals and skills of needy unemployed. This was one of the main arguments for the work-relief program established by the Roosevelt Administration. But there has been widespread skepticism as to whether the kind of work provided under WPA has preserved morale and skills. The new plan practically guarantees that there will be no deterioration among the needy unemployed.

3. Greatly reduce suffering. In fact, enthusiasts for the plan think it would come close to eliminating in entirety suffering due to extreme poverty.

4. Check the high birth rate among the needy unemployed. The unfortunate tendency of otherwise unproductive members of society to exploit their idleness, and the taxpayer, by producing more children has caused chronic concern to close students of the problem. All means of combating this tendency heretofore proposed have struck insurmountable obstacles in the expense involved, various State and local statutes, the attitudes of certain religious groups, and natural law. The new plan looks as if it would get around all these difficulties. Its ingenious use of natural law will discourage all but the hardiest offenders.

5. Save hundreds of millions of dollars annually to Federal, State, and local governments. The fiscal features of the plan are really amazing—yet they transgress in no way the well-established principles of sound finance. The plan is quite a bit more economical than any so far presented by Senator Taft, Thomas E. Dewey, or any of the Democratic economizers.

Slightly Fantastic At First Glance

THE POSSIBILITIES inherent in this plan may seem slightly fantastic at first glance. But when the plan is explained, claims made for it do not seem exaggerated. Some experts believe that if it were energetically administered it could actually abolish unemployment.

To appreciate the new plan it is first necessary to get in mind a few of the main facts about the relief problem.

About 2,250,000 persons are now employed by WPA. In addition, 1,000,000 or so more have been certified as eligible for WPA but have not been employed because there is no money to pay them. To stay within its budget for this fiscal year WPA will have to begin cutting its rolls in March and will have to cut them to about 1,500,000 by the end of June.

For the next fiscal year, if the President sticks to the tentative figure in his budget—and Congress doesn't cut it—WPA will be able to employ an average of only 1,325,000 persons.

Apart from WPA about 1,700,000 families are receiving general relief. Others, to an unknown number, probably need it but are unable to get it.

All these, with their dependents—perhaps 16,000,000 persons—are in addition to the indigent old people, the dependent children, and others who get aid of some kind under the Social Security Act.

All these are apart from some 5,000,000 or 6,000,000 unemployed persons who are not yet down to their last dollars of savings and therefore are ineligible for public aid.

Unemployment at present is increasing.

The Novel Proposal Detailed In Letter

Los Angeles, Calif.
Jan. 25, 1940

Col. F. C. Harrington
Commissioner of Work Projects
Washington, D. C.

Sir:

Knowing that you are faced with the terrific problem of placing more relief clients on jobs than you have jobs to be filled, I am offering the real solution to your dilemma.

A short time ago, a Russian scientist came to this country and delivered a number of lectures on scientific matters. In one of his talks he said that it was possible to freeze the human body to such a degree that it resembled a corpse, yet could later be revived without harm to the individual. Why not find out this fellow's system, and use it on the WPA clients to whom you cannot give work. A chain of ice-houses could be built for unemployed relief clients. The clients could be frozen and piled in tiers, like cordwood, in these repositories. All classified according to age, trade, profession, etc. Actors would have a place of their own, as they are all unemployed. Then, when you have an opening for a client, take him out and defrost him and put him on the job. When you wish to reduce the quota, all you will do is to freeze them again and put them back in cold storage.

Hoping that this solves the problem, I am,

Respectfully,

This column regrets that it cannot reveal the name of the author. Administration officials perhaps feel that, if it were made known the Republicans would steal the credit for what might be the crowning achievement of the present phase of the New Deal.

The scheme has one shortcoming. That is the initial capital outlay for ice-houses. It may be possible, however, to cut out even that expense, by taking advantage of the currently favorable weather conditions.

Rossiter Seeks Another Hearing On ABC Permit

A new hearing before the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board has been requested by the attorney for Leo J. Rossiter, 4132 Georgia avenue northwest, whose license renewal yesterday was held up by a split vote of board members.

Isaac Gans, whose vote would have decided the question, is ill in Emergency Hospital.

Thomas E. Lodge, board chairman, said there would be no action on the request, since Gans has until midnight tonight to cast his vote. Gans' retirement becomes effective at that time.

A public hearing was held last Monday on the renewal, which was protested by various Petworth civic, religious and school groups. The day after the hearing Gans became ill.

Tool Makers To Supply U. S. Factories First

By the Associated Press

A high official said yesterday that machine tool manufacturers had agreed voluntarily to supply American engine factories ahead of foreign companies so a sto facilitate a vast expansion of the American airplane industry.

This action, it was said, will enable American plants to fill the millions of dollars of present and potential airplane orders of Great Britain and France as well as the Army, Navy and civil needs of the United States.

Leading tool makers, were called to Washington recently by Treasury Secretary Morgenthau, who heads the President's committee for coordinating airplane procurement in this country.

Hitler Faces The Future

AT THE SPORTSPALAST on Monday, Adolf Hitler found himself in the far from happy role of a magician whose audience knew all the tricks. The result was that those who did not walk out on him listened to the artificial thunder and watched the artificial lightning with an indifference approximating utter boredom.

In introducing Hitler, Dr. Goebbels boasted that the Fuehrer's words would be heard by great multitudes throughout the world. That had been the case with many of Hitler's speeches in the past. It was true only to a limited degree this time.

The speech was heard outside Germany, in neutral lands as well as in countries at war with the Reich. But whatever the response to it at home, the speech did not receive the spellbound attention which previous utterances by Hitler had received.

The Sportspalast address was "old stuff." It fell flat. Not even the threat to wage war in earnest against the Allies stirred up any interest or excitement.

THIS IS VERY revealing. In the first place, it is significant that, after five months of war, Hitler is still going through his old oratorical routine. It was unquestionably successful in the past, not only in Germany but against Germany's rivals. A large number of the Fuehrer's victories in the realm of foreign affairs were, in truth, oratorical victories. His speeches frightened the world into submission, most spectacularly at the time of the crisis leading up to the Munich settlement.

But it is one thing to threaten nations with war when those nations are at peace. It is something else again when such threats are made against nations that have gone to war in full realization of possible consequences. Indeed, the Allies expected Hitler to unleash his most terrible thunderbolts at the very outset of the war. There is no possibility of their intimidation now, five months later, by threats alone. They are certainly better prepared to receive the blow that may be directed against them. And also to retaliate in kind.

IT IS QUITE possible that when the history of this fantastic era is written it will be said that the ease with which Hitler succeeded in having his way over a period of years ultimately proved his undoing.

In less than a year after he assumed office, this week seven years ago, as the leader of a minority party, all other parties in the Reich had been wiped out and practically without opposition on their part. This was not done wholesale but piecemeal. The Communists were first to feel the ax. Then Social Democrats followed. The turn of the Centrists came next. And so on down the line. The executioners of one day became the executed of the next, a process that did not stop with the non-Nazi elements but was extended, on June 30, 1934, to dissident Nazis as well.

It is an interesting fact, also, that in every instance the terror that followed victory was greater than that which had preceded it. The worst atrocities, not merely against the Jews, but also against the political minorities in Germany, occurred after they had been reduced to helplessness. The ghastly developments taking place in Poland today were thus foreshadowed by what happened in Germany itself in the years between 1933 and 1938.

HITLER'S foreign policy followed the domestic pattern. As he had frightened his domestic opponents into submission so he succeeded in frightening Germany's rivals. He made them, as he had made the German Nationalists, the executioners of his will in Spain and Czecho-Slovakia.

It is not surprising, then, that he regarded the Polish war as a gamble on certainty. There was the long Anglo-French record of capitulation to assure him that British and French warnings they would fight could be discounted. There was the trump card of the Russian agreement. Finally, there was the accomplished fact of a lightning victory over Poland.

Well over four months have gone by since then. The Allies have shown no signs of giving in and making a peace with Germany on Hitler's terms. They are preparing themselves, as Premier Chamberlain made clear in his latest speech, for any emergency.

That is why Hitler's latest threat of dire action left them completely cold. They are ready for him. But is he ready for them? In his speech he went out of his way to boast of German preparedness. It sounded somewhat like whistling in the dark. But it would be rash to take the Fuehrer's promise that he will now carry the war to the Allies at its face value.

The only offensive which the Nazi regime has so far carried out in the west is the oratorical offensive that began with Hitler's speech of October 6 and reached a rather lame anti-climax this week. However potent Hitler's oratory may have been in the past, it has lost its magic. Success this time would not be the result of overwhelming odds applied against a weak and relatively helpless opponent but against a combination which is today the equal and may tomorrow be the superior of the Reich. And in such a struggle none of Hitler's past victories provide any sure guide of action. No wonder he hesitates and seeks to pull one more rabbit out of his hat.

The Once Over

American Crisis

The war in Europe's spreading—
Grave problems fill the air;
The arguments arising
Show anger and despair;
Yet through our land one question
Tops all the rest today:
Would Davis have been better
As Scarlett than Miss Leigh?

II

The movements of the Russians
Are worrying us all;
Vast millions now are asking
"Will little Finland fall?"—
But here one mighty question
On every side we find:
Is Vivien the Scarlett
The people had in mind?

III

More British ships are sinking—
There's terror on the seas;
The whole wide world is shaken
By wide atrocities;
But here one battle rages
Wherever two are met:
Is Vivien the Scarlett
To play to Gable's Rhett?

IV

More Nazi blows are threatened;
"Do terrors new impend?"
Ask states intently hoping
The conflict soon may end;
But here one major battle
Goes on by day and night
Concerning whether Scarlett
Is played exactly right.

V

There's carnage in the Baltic,
The Balkans may be next;
Each day sees some new warning
Most impolite in text;
But here there's but one conflict
In office, home and nook:

VI

All Europe's on an abyss,
But here it's also true
A mighty row is sweeping
Vast territories, too:
Is Vivien well chosen?
Did Selznick miss a bet
In not selecting Shearer?
And what of Gable's Rhett?

With Best Wishes to All

When comes the time of no more war
And nymphs are lolling on the floor,
And Russians dare to smile a bit
At their own stupendous wit;
When pilots with unerring eye,
Drop fragile dreams from out the sky,
And moon and stars collaborate
To end the sullen rule of Fate;
When all these things have taken place
May a few of the human race
Good luck to you; I hope you're there!

GEORGE MALHAME.

My island of dreams still waits for me,
Complete in my fancy's mirage;
Besides its Utopian splendor it now
Has a magnetic mine barrage.

Vandenberg Warns Japanese Embargo May Be Step To War In Letter To Lippmann

By the United Press

Japan would err seriously to ignore the possibility of a retaliatory embargo by the United States, Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, said yesterday, but he warned that precipitate American action along that line might be a step toward war.

An advocate of caution in the current post-trade treaty phase of United States-Japanese relations, Vandenberg conceded the time may arrive when an embargo "ultimately becomes indispensable to the adequate protection of legitimate American interests and rights in the Far East."

His remarks were made after Chairman Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, charged that Japanese criticism of impending embargo proposals was in the nature of "threats" designed to interfere with Congress.

Pittman is author of one of the embargo measures which he intends to call up before his committee probably next Wednesday, although there is little prospect of definite action for some time.

His heated outburst contrasted sharply with the views of Vandenberg, who is a member of his committee and who said he still hoped a new treaty of commerce and amity may be negotiated.

The Michigan Senator was prompted to reiterate his views by an article by Walter Lippmann, columnist, who said that Vandenberg's resolution last year to abrogate the 1911 commerce treaty with Japan was designed to force the latter to withdraw from China and to clear the way for imposition of an embargo.

Vandenberg denied both points and recalled that his resolution had been shelved by Pittman's committee and that President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull had taken the initiative in terminating the treaty as of January 26.

His plan, he said in a letter to Lippmann, was designed merely to make it possible to negotiate a new treaty that would take into consideration the "realities" of the present day. He also denied that it contemplated a "policing" of the Far East by this country, and added that he always was and still is opposed to any such proposal.

Policing the Orient, if there ever is any, should be undertaken by all signatories of the Nine-Power Pact which guarantees the territorial integrity of China and to which the United States, Great Britain, Japan and France are signatories.

"Whatever our sympathies may be and whatever our sense of deep outrage over the conquest of China, our official responsibility as a matter of foreign policy is not 'to force Japan to retreat from China.' It it to protect American interests," he wrote.

"If the American people are ever deliberately and consciously ready to take what might thus be the first step toward war itself (imposition of an embargo), we can meet that situation when the issue is unavoidably precipitated."

He added that the United States "may come to an embargo and Japan is ill advised if it ignores this hazard."

Pittman's fire centered on Japanese military authorities in China who, he said, are "not sensitive as to the treaty rights of American citizens but appear supersensitive as to anything Congress may do that is not approved by them."

Join Against Russia, Kaiser Advises Germany and Allies

Writes His American Biographer, Poultney Bigelow, They Should Help Finns 'to Rid World and Civilization of Bolshevism'

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 1.—Former Kaiser Wilhelm has written his American friend and biographer, Poultney Bigelow, that he believes that Germany, England and France should stop fighting each other and join Finland against Russia.

His letter, made public by Bogelow today, was mailed on January 16 from Wilhelm's retreat at Doorn, Holland.

"The magnificent stand of the Finns has smashed the nimbus of bolshevism and set people thinking—with the result that the wish for peace is gaining ground," the World War ruler of Germany wrote.

"The belligerents should stop fighting and join their forces to help the Finns. They should fight in one line to rid the world and civilization of bolshevism."

Wilhelm II celebrated his eighty-first birthday only five days ago but on that occasion, as previously, he refrained from expressing any views on the war or on politics in general. He has been an exile in the Netherlands since November 10, 1918, the day before the World War Armistice, and has been restricted by his hosts from stating opinions on political subjects.

He has maintained a close interest in the new war, however, and follows its progress by sticking flagged pins in war maps. Twenty-two of his grandsons are serving in the German army and one, Prince Oscar, was killed in the Polish campaign.

Bigelow, a native of New York, traveled throughout the world as a youth and gave up the practice of law after passing the bar to lecture at universities on modern history and colonial administration and to write.

A frequent visitor at Doorn, Bigelow plans to see his long-time friend again soon. He is to sail Saturday for Italy, where he expects to see Mussolini, and then hopes to obtain permission to go on later to Doorn.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Musical Artists of America presents Steven Kennedy, barytone, in a song recital Thursday night in Shoreham Hotel ballroom. Accompanist: Reino Luoma.

A resonant barytone voice was disclosed by Steven Kennedy last evening in the course of his recital before an audience which did not correspond in size to the merit of the singer. But those who assembled in the Shoreham Hotel ballroom accorded him a cordial welcome to Washington and left him in no doubt as to their enjoyment of his artistry. Only by artistic control and a fine lyric sense could he have restrained so well to the purposes of recital a voice which in volume and dramatic cogency is primarily suited to operatic exercise.

In his opening songs, Torelli's "Tu lo sai" and Bach's "Good Fellows, Be Merry," it was at once evident that the amplitude of his tone requires discipline in a small auditorium. His musicianship handled well such technical matters as attack and phrasing, and there was skill in the flexibility of a heavily vibrant voice. But the quality of the tone was not uniform, and the transitions in dynamics were too often abrupt. Because of the vibrancy of the tone, it tended to flare instead of remaining sharply in focus. This expansive force was still more noticeable in a group of lieder by Schubert, Brahms, Erich, Wolff and Richard Strauss.

The operatic possibilities of his robust voice were apparent in his effective reading of Massenet's "Vision Fugitive." In the latter half of his program he offered two groups of songs in English, and selected several not overworked by recitalists. Familiar items like Stephen Foster's "I Dream of Jeanie," Rummel's "Ecstasy" and "The Green-Eyed Dragon" by Wolsley Charles were more than balanced by Landon Ronald's "Prelude," Kenneth Smith's "Salt Water," May Brahe's "Listen, Mary," Eric Coates' "Sea Rapture" and Walter Golde's "More Rain, More Rest."

Everett Stevens gives a piano recital Thursday evening in Pierce Hall. Program: Fantasia in D minor (Mozart), Sonata in E major, Op. 109 (Beethoven), Four Pieces, Opus 119 (Brahms), Barcarolle (Chopin), "Bruyeres" and "Les Collines d'Anacapri" (Debussy), Hungarian Rhapsody No. 12 (Liszt).

Whether as a composer or as an interpreter of other men's works, Everett Stevens is a young artist whose consistent progress it has been rewarding to watch during the last few years. His annual recital last evening in Pierce Hall was the occasion for a gathering of his friends and well wishers whose hearty applause was a measure of their esteem. His program was completely conventional, giving no hint of the questing quality of his mind as revealed in his compositions.

The growth of his interpretive insight was unmistakable in his reading of the Beethoven E major sonata. There was keenness of imagination and sensitiveness of perception in his poetic treatment of this difficult work. The last movement, in particular, was played with a combination of clarity and power that evoked one's admiration for his intellectual grasp.

Mr. Stevens is an interesting pianist, because of his very evident absorption in the disclosure of the music. One surmises that his ambition does not extend beyond faithfulness to the composers, and that the vision of being a virtuoso does not tempt him. He plays with a clear and lucid style, and there are no hesitations in his phrasings, while his temperament has the essential poesy to make his readings eloquent.

Activities This Week in Capital Clubs

By Mary Harris.

WHAT A WEEK-END: Three ace dance bands will be bouncing rhythms around at Wardman tonight and tomorrow . . . Benny Goodman and his world-famed sizzlers will play for the Georgetown Junior Prom tonight in the Continental Ballroom. Washington's own Helen Forrest is singing with Goodman now and we'll wager she'll be visiting her former spot, the Madrillon, some time during the evening . . . Will Bradley will play for the Junior Prom of Mount St. Mary's College tomorrow evening . . . Eddy Brandt's orchestra, swing kings of Metronome, are looking forward to the Goodman and Bradley visits since they have pals in both orchestras.

"ONLY A PAPER MOON," wistful little tune of season ago, was the special request of Mrs. Jock Whitney at La Salle Versailles the other eve. Burrus Williams and his band had a time remembering how it went . . . The Whitney party included Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., Mrs. Robert Leon Grosjean and Winston Frost, of Warrenton. They requested Jean Cathon to carol "Without a Song," seemed to get a great kick, too, out of sotto voce baladeering of Leo Colvin.

CALIFORNIA FOR HENRY. Edward Everett Horton, star of "Springtime for Henry," will be an honor guest at California State Society party at the Carlton tomorrow evening. With him will be his mother, Mrs. Isabella Horton, his brother, Winter D. Horton, and the entire "S. f. H." cast including the lushly lovely Marjorie Lord . . . Someting tells us they'll all be dropping into Shar-Zad before the evening's over.

NEW TROIKA DIVA. Dor Bearce, former soprano of the Moscow Art Theater, will join the Troika floor revue on Monday. She's a splendid and finished artist, sings in French, Russian and English, has a dash of mischief.

REMARKABLE NEPTUNES. Diversion in the Neptune Room has swung effortlessly into a new "high" of enjoyability. That all-star and perfectly balanced entertaining group is the answer. There's Bert Granoff, the singer whom everyone likes . . . Evalyn Tyner and her dazzling way with a piano . . . Organist Glen Hardman, whose records are sold all over the country . . . Beautiful Alice O'Connell, who looks like Jean Arthur, sings prettier than any lark.

ROBIN HOOD ART. Those lively murals in the new Robin Hood are the creations of Artist Barry Barretto, the versatile Peruvian artist who also writes a newspaper column. He also did the decors in the Hour Class and King Cole Room.

"SCANDALS" REDIVIVUS. Maurice Kafka has been doing some intensive research into the tunes of 1925 in preparation for the Mayflower's Fifteenth Anniversary Party on February 19. He's decided to feature tunes from George White's "Scandals of 1925," which Maurice vows was the best show White ever produced. The tunes are "Black Bottom," "Birth of the Blues" and "The Girl Is You and the Boy Is Me." Remember?

TSK! TSK! It's lucky that Hi

THOMAS CONNELLY, new manager of the Hamilton Hotel

Hat's new Opalee is such a bright singer. Because Angie Rodante is having voice trouble, has been told by the doctor that she'll have to give her vocal cords a rest.

SKOAL! Scandinavian royalty will star in next week's floor show at the Shoreham. The Prince and Princess Selandia will present Finnish folk dances, also a series of dance impressions of noted folks, including Garbo and Der Adolph. The press release says, "Prince Selandia is really the son of Prince Jorgen Selandia whose family ruled Scandinavia in the fourteenth century." Graceful Norma Gallo will be another Shoreham newcomer.

EX-MAYFAIRITES. A gay little note from Louanna Rudd, who sung at Mayfair last season, tells us that she's at the Blue Mirror in Baltimore, will presently return to New York to the Queen Mary on Fifty-eighth street . . . Leo Lisee, another former Mayfairite, lets us know that he's up in Brooklyn.

DAYS GONE BY. When Bill Chisholm, star drummer of the Lounge Riviera, and violinist Durward Bowersox, of the Rainbow Room, run into each other, they're likely to talk about the days when they used to play for high school dances for the staggering compensation of a dollar or two.

Chef Claude Jarrin of the Raleigh and Maitre d'Hotel Arthur Marchisio used to work together at the London Ritz back in the days when the Russian grand dukes were still in circulation.

Manager Eddy Furedy of the Hour Glass acquired that knack for elegant service and cuisine during the years when he was an exec for Harvey's.

MEDICAL ADVICE. Lotus' Bill Strickland, who has been more or less ailing for the last couple of months, says that his doctor tells him that he should get behind a Missouri mule and do some plowing . . . This is one prescription that won't be taken. "Think I'd trust myself behind a Missouri mule," snorts Bill. "I know them critters!"

EVERYBODY SINGS in the King Cole Room when Tommy Suter strikes into "Bicycle Built for Two." It's a regular clambake . . . But when Lynne Allison warbles "La Paloma," it gets so quiet you could hear a feather drop.

DOUBLE-QUICK MATT. Anchor Room's Matt Windsor took out his U. S. citizenship papers the second day he arrived in this country, landed a job that evening and became an orchestra leader in three months.

CELESTE IN CAPRICE. Eddie Mayhoff is going to add a celeste to his present set-up in the Cafe Caprice. A celeste, in case you don't know, is a bell instrument and pours out some very quaint effects.

SIPPING AND SUPPING. Your best girl will like the delicate sherry flips at Del Rio while you listen to Maxine Patrice's orchestra. They're made with the very best sherry . . . You'll enjoy practicing up for Lent if you go down to Hall's seafood restaurant. The seafood au gratin is especially tasty . . . A nonalcoholic drink that's better than most cocktails is the "Wagon Cooler," compounded by Bartender Leonard Redmond, of the Fat Boy. It's pink, delovely and delish . . . If you're a connoisseur of English kidney stew your first stop should be Dick's Grill. The kidney stew tastes like that in a London tavern . . . The River Bend chicken dinners are something tremendous in size and flavor. Better dance between courses . . . Whether it's a steak dinner or a sandwich, you'll find it toothsome and satisfying at the Nightingale. They also serve a big variety of the salads that the lassies seem to favor after an evening of dancing.

12 Men Named To Police Force

Sour Cream Is No Disaster—Has Alluring Influence on Foods

Many Breads Made Better by Its Use

Biscuit, Griddle Cakes and Muffins Benefit; Meat Dishes, Pies, Cakes With This Ingredient Win Prizes

By The Post Food Editor

SOUR CREAM may seem like a minor disaster if you discover it at a time when you are wanting to use sweet cream, but it is more like a major joy when turned into alluring dishes. The Southerner thinks of sour milk as bonnyclabber and the French think of it as curd and a foodstuff to be used as a delightful dessert. But sour milk or cream has an exceedingly alluring influence on many foods. Quick breads, biscuits, griddle cakes, corn bread, muffins, brown breads, waffles, gingerbread, spice and devil's cake are but a few. And The Post recipe contestants this week respond to the theme of Sour Cream in Cookery in a flourishing and interesting way. Following are the winners in the contest.

Beef and Liver Loaf
First Prize, $3
Miss Helen Richter,
24 Rhode Island avenue northeast,
Washington, D. C.

Sprinkle 1 pound sliced liver with salt and pepper; broil on both sides and remove any tough pieces of vein or skin. Put 1 small onion and liver through the food chopper. Add 1 pound ground beef, 1 slightly beaten egg, 1½ to 2 teaspoons salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, 1 cup soft bread crumbs (fried in 3 tablespoons butter and ¾ cup sour cream). Mix well and pack about 1-3 of this mixture in a buttered loaf pan. Stuff 4 pimientos with ¼ cup cooked rice mixed with 3 tablespoons sour cream and arrange in the center of the meat, end to end, lengthwise of pan. Cover with the remaining mixture and pack down. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, for about 1 hour. Serve hot or cold. Serves 6 to 8.

Paprika Chicken
Second Prize, $2
Mrs. Augusta Prenoszil,
1810 N street northwest,
Washington, D. C.
RECIPE

Select a fresh killed chicken of broiling or small frying size, 1½ to 2 pounds dressed. Wash chicken well in cold water, joint in small pieces as if for frying. Rub salt on each piece. Melt 2 tablespoons lard in deep pan, and when thoroughly hot add 4 to 5 tablespoons of chopped onions and 1 teaspoon Hungarian paprika. Stir for about 3 minutes, add the chicken. Stir. Cover tightly, cook over medium fire adding little water as juice cooks down. Shake pan occasionally to avoid sticking. Cook until tender, about 1 hour. Add 1 gill sour cream, rinse cream bottle with a little water and add. Stir, bring to boiling point, boil for 3 minutes. Serve with rice or noodles, spaghetti or macaroni as hot as possible. Pour sauce over it. Serves 4.

Mrs. Rapp

Dutch Apple Pie
Third Prize, $1
Mrs. George Rapp,
917 Flower avenue,
Takoma Park, Md.
RECIPE

Wash and pare 6 or 7 apples (depending upon size). Combine ¾ cup sour cream, 1 cup brown sugar, 1 teaspoon cinnamon and 1 tablespoon flour. Dip each apple section into cream mixture and place in an unbaked pie shell. After the pie shell is filled pour the remaining mixture over the apple sections. Dot with butter and place in a preheated oven of 400 degrees. After 15 minutes reduce the temperature to 250 degrees and continue baking for 1 hour. May be served either hot or cold, with cheese if hot and whipped cream if cold.

Miss Hoffman

Russian Tea Cakes
Fourth Prize, $1
Mrs. Florence Hoffman,
1303 Allison street northwest
Washington D. C.
RECIPE

Mix 1 cup eggs, about 5, with 1 cup sugar and 1 cup sour cream and enough flour to roll. Toss on board, roll out ¼ inch thick, 3 times as long as wide, spread a thin layer of butter over 2-3 of the dough, fold unbuttered part over ⅓ the buttered part, the remaining 1-3 over this, making 3 layers with butter between. Will require about ¾ pound of butter. Roll and spread again with butter; fold 3 or 4 times. Then place dough in bowl, cover and let stand on ice to harden. Then roll as thin as possible, strew with chopped almonds, sugar and cinnamon and cut into 7-inch strips. Roll each strip separately into a roll, cut in slices, strew with 1 cup chopped almonds, sugar and cinnamon. Bake in a hot oven, 400 degrees until brown.

Mrs. Lane

Sour Cream Biscuits
Fifth Prize, $1
Mrs. Kenneth A. Lane,
U. S. Naval Radio Station,
Annapolis, Md.
RECIPE

To 1 cup buttermilk add ½ cup sour cream. Add 3 tablespoons melted shortening. Mix and sift together 3 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon soda and 1 teaspoon salt and add to the liquid mixture. Mix thoroughly and roll out. Bake in oven at 400 degrees for 20 minutes. Makes 2 dozen biscuits.

Bread Not Fattening

Don't skip that second slice of bread just because you're reducing, or want to "stay thin." Bread contains only 65 calories per slice, and it is not a fattening food as sometimes supposed. In fact bread should be included in every reducing diet, for it actually helps burn up body fat while you are losing weight. When this excess fat is not completely burned up in the system, acidosis-like conditions may result and turn a healthy person into a physical and mental wreck.

When sour cream is used to make a delicious beef and liver loaf as made by Helen Richter (inset), the winner of the first prize in this week's Post recipe contest, a culinary triumph to tempt the most sophisticated palate is sure to result

Mexican Style Buffet Gives Menu Variety

A New Suggestion For Month of Hearts And Cherry Trees

By Martha Ellyn.
The Post Food Editor.

IF YOU are entertaining this month at a time when everybody is satisfied with omnipresent hearts and cherry trees, try a Mexican-style buffet just to be different. Papaya juice cocktail, reminiscent of the tropics, is an appetizing adventure into less known flavor, or peach-nectarine nectar from our own semitropics makes a favorable substitute.

Martha Ellyn

Prepare the Chili ripe olives given in the menu below by pouring the contents of a can of any preferred olive size into a saucepan, and heating the fruit in its own liquor to the boiling point. Add a small piece of garlic and 1 teaspoon chili powder and allow to boil for 5 minutes to permit appetizing penetration of the fruit by the pungent pepper. Allow the fruit to cool in the same liquid. Drain and serve impaled on colored picks or from the usual relish tray. Give Mexican character to the French dressing by introducing cocktail sauce in the proportion customary when adding catsup.

One native method of serving avocados in Mexico is with a sprinkling of sugar and lemon juice. The Americanized version of that service is found in a combination of orange sections and calavo cubes in a fruit cup with a fragrant dressing of lemon juice and honey in half-and-half proportions.

The following menu is one that is representative of old Mexico but with foods that are readily obtainable in any of our markets.

Mexican Style Buffet

Papaya Juice Cocktail
Romaine Salad
with French Dressing
Mexican Chicken
Red Pepper Relish Chili Ripe Olives
Calavo and Orange Fruit Cup
with
Lemon and Honey Dressing
Parched Mexican Corn Coffee

Mexican Chicken

Clean 1 small chicken and cook it with 1 quart water, ½ cup minced raw ham, 3 small onions, and 2 tablespoons minced green pepper until tender, seasoning with 1 tablespoon salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper when partly cooked. Remove the chicken from the liquor and cook 1½ cups rice with ¼ teaspoon powdered saffron in the stock, adding a little more water if necessary to keep the rice from burning; it should, however, absorb practically all the liquor in the pan. Butter a mold and decorate it with strips of green and red sweet peppers (canned pimiento may be used) and stuffed olives. Cut the chicken into dice (there should be 3 cupfuls) mix it with the rice, and pack into the decorated mold. Bake in a moderately hot oven—375 degrees—for 15 minutes, then turn out and serve plain or with egg sauce.

Custard Mince Pie Glorifies Favorite

Mince meat pie is one of the heartiest of all pies. Its value is further glorified when made as a custard mincemeat pie. With the splendid prepared mincemeat available, it is no trick to make this delicious dessert. Here is the recipe:

Mincemeat Custard Pie

Line a 9-inch piepan with pastry. Spread over bottom of pastry a ¼-inch layer of prepared mincemeat. Beat slightly 3 eggs, then add, mixing thoroughly, 2/3 cup sugar. Add gradually 1½ cups milk, stirring until sugar is dissolved. Add 1 teaspoon vanilla. Spoon the custard gently over the mincemeat. Place in a hot oven, 400 degrees, then immediately turn thermostat to moderate oven, 350 degrees. Bake 45 minutes or until custard is set.

Little Things Really Denote Skill at Home

Appliqued Scrolls on Sheets Are Commended To Show Individuality

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

We don't judge a fastidious housewife by whether her home is so clean you could eat off the kitchen floor, or what a fine pan of biscuits she can bake. Those things are important, certainly, but some women can be awfully grim about fulfilling the basic duties of homemaking. We always judge inconsequential extra touches that aren't really necessary and are hardly noticed. Things that betray loving hands:

Crisp rustly percale sheets in soft blue, for instance, with loops and scrolls in white appliqued across the top, for no good reason other than that the lady of the house wanted even her sheets to be touched with her own individuality and enthusiasm.

Or table mats to be used for breakfast—of a typical toile de Jouy type of pattern in blue on white, the design of Chinese ancestry via France, and to be used with the every-day blue willow dishes. Made with plain blind-stitched hems, they are inexpensive and practical and do wonders toward giving the breakfast table a lift and a lift.

Or tea napkins made of fine printed dress linen in a flowered pattern. To use with Dresden-flowered tea cups and an old silver pot.

Or white linen hand towels with fine embroidered monograms in white. With luxurious big white bath towels, also with white initials.

Or sheer batiste sash curtains with all hems whipped by hand and of course run exactly with the thread of the fabric.

Pork Sausage Is Commended for Ground Hog Day

There's more than one way of celebrating Ground Hog Day. Perhaps the best way of all is at breakfast, the Institute of American Meat Packers suggests.

Pork sausage may be served with pineapple slices, or mushrooms, or French toast and apple sauce, or poached or scrambled eggs, or in many other inviting forms.

An old Italian recipe for pork sausage with pineapple slices suggests using a pound of pork sausage meat, six slices of pineapple, three tablespoons olive oil, and one tablespoon of Parmesan or grated sharp cheese. Pat the sausage into cakes, and pan-broil them. Saute the pineapple in olive oil until it is very brown; then sprinkle it with cheese, and serve hot—the sausage on top of the pineapple.

HIGHLIGHTS IN THE HISTORY OF "SHELF AGE"

When Daniel interpreted the HAND-WRITING UPON THE WALL of Belshazzar's Palace he revealed that the handwriting was a warning, given because the king had been "WEIGHED IN THE BALANCE AND FOUND WANTING." Throughout the ages, those things which have not measured up to the very highest standards have not long endured.

Today's Social Notes

From The Truthtown Torch

Mrs. Hooker Spillmaster and Mrs. Elderdown Tripp will leave tomorrow for the winter sports at Lake Placid. Both Mrs. Spillmaster and Mrs. Tripp had hoped to get out of town before the recent cold spell, but remained to attend several benefits. Mrs. Kettledrum Jay, who had intended to go to Palm Beach, has changed her mind on account of the unseasonable weather there and will go to Sun Valley, Idaho instead.

The 'Otic' Crowd

Society notables were out in full force at the after-theater supper given last night by Mr. and Mrs. Montbatten Strange. The lovely and exotic Marcia Van Twist was escorted by Chitterton Beltry whose unconventional and erotic paintings have recently caused such a stir. Miss Joan Beach, aquatic beauty, and swimming champion, was squired by Maj. Medalion, patriotic leader and head of the Sterling Youth Movement. The anecdotic Col. Hamilton Spieler was seen entertaining the quixotic Mrs. Elbridge Smiley. One of the lions of the evening was the esoteric novelist, Austin Mushmore, while the hypnotic and slightly neurotic Mrs. Conway Snuggle seemed to have reduced that dashing bachelor, Whitney Mugwump, to a definitely chaotic state of mind.

A Luscious Party

Among those who dropped in at the James Dickerson Stanton Roquefforts' cocktail party were the J. Alexander Waffles (she was the lovely Marie Duffer Fudge); Count and Countess Pate de Foie Gras; the T. W. R. Compotes III (she looking heavenly in a tomato red toque); the Chett Caviars; Mrs. D. Hazelton Junket (stunning in a Chili sauce colored ensemble) accompanied by her daughter Farina; Princess Pimento (the former Mrs. Zwieback-Mint, bakery heiress); the Mortimer R. W. Muffins, and the ever ravishing Mrs. Theodora Casaba DeMenthe, who was breaking hearts right and left in a cafe au lait outfit with watermelon colored accessories.

Sir Galahad

"Honestly, it was the weirdest bunch of women you ever saw. There was that one from Oklahoma who was working her 'good pal' racket on all the men . . . (Why George it was too a racket! . . . Well, just tell me this—how long did she remain a good pal after the second drink?) . . . Well anyway all the women were the worst drips you ever saw . . . (Why they were too, George! . . . Well, name me just one! . . . You would pick her!) . . . The one he's talking about had a mantilla . . . and a pink taffeta dress! . . . Yes, she thought she was a siren . . . (What, George? . . . Sensible? . . . Honestly, you're the dumbest man about women I ever saw in my life!)

"And then of course that Mrs. Ogleby was there looking around for men's scalps as usual . . . (Oh George you make me sick! You know good and well how long she kept you over there on that sofa . . . About her kiddies? . . . Of course. She's no fool!) . . . Isn't it funny how a Circe always draws her kiddies out of the bag and how a Lothario never mentions his! Well anyway I wish you could have seen that Nittlewit girl! She was positively making a spectacle of herself with all the married men . . . (What George? . . . Just a PLAYFUL KID! . . . Say I give up!")

Window Curtains Reveal Taste

Your curtains are a definite gauge of your taste, and of how much attention you pay to the principles of decorating. Many windows are likely to be overdressed, and so it is important to study your home very carefully before you select new fabrics for any of them.

Simple, informal rooms suit most persons best. Heavy draperies are out of place in them, and have the added serious disadvantage of being expensive. Use interesting but unpretentious fabrics if draperies are called for. Or do not hesitate to eliminate them. In many cases windows can be fully as attractive with just glass curtains, of fine net, sheer ninon, beautiful marquisette, voile, organdy or casement cloth.

"Hole in One" With These

This neatly tailored slacks suit is as right on the golf course this spring as it is now on Florida fairways. This monogrammed costume is of spun rayon, that remarkable fabric that only refuses to wrinkle or muss but flatters the figure through its easy draping quality. The color is aqua in a lively shade and the price is not one to prohibit budget-minded girls with a fondness for getting into pants. Of special interest are the tailored tucks of blouse and trousers, placed where they do the most good

Homey Evening of Music in Washington Square Features Furniture Dealer-Cellist

ONE of the commonest human traits is the desire to make sweet sounds, either with the voice or with one of the instruments designed for that purpose. Musicians, like misery, love company, and as a result there are the musical evenings which play such an important part in every American community. I'm just lucky enough to be welcome at one beautiful old home on Washington Square where every week or so four people make music for their own pleasure and for that of the 20-odd guests asked in to hear them.

The host, Walter Charak, is a noted and prosperous purveyor of furniture, but he is happiest with his cello between his knees. He is the only simon pure amateur of the quartet, the three fiddlers being professionals, and fine ones. The way those four people attack the classics, without rehearsals, and play them through with nary a bobble is a constant wonder to me. It is a heart-warming picture, the high-ceilinged old fashioned room, the four devotees playing away, and a score of listeners enjoying the lovely sounds. The beautiful hostess, Amy Charak, a musician herself, performs her welcoming duties, listens, and about the crack of midnight serves sandwiches and things to the happy little gathering. Henry L. Mencken would love those evenings at the Charaks, except that he would have to be playing too, for music is really the great love of his life, and he has musical evenings of his own in his beloved Baltimore.

The most interesting artist of the four, to me, is a girl named, Elsie Stein, a truly remarkable violinist, and an ardent veteran of chamber music. In her native Vienna she had a string quartet of her own, and when fate and That Man made her a refugee she came to New York and organized another. She also teaches others how to wield the bow and do those tricks with the frets. Musical evenings, in peace. They add to the world's beauty!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The brightest evening coat of the year was unleashed by Sylvia Sidney when she went to watch her husband act the leading role of "Two on an Island." It is a red red, very red indeed—made something like an old-time English cabby's coat, and very handsome it is in a voluble way. Now that Sylvia is an old married lady, and a mamma to boot, it appears that her professional career has gone by the boards. But troupers are like old fire-horses who bolt madly in all directions at the sound of a gong. Perhaps if someone pushed a luscious part at her, Sylvie would turn the infant over to a corps of nurses and rush back to the grease paint.

Another aged New York woman perfect the usual. Everybody in her Brooklyn neighborhood called her "Bundles Mary," because of her habit of carrying parcels of food to feed stray cats and dogs in those parts. In reality she was Mrs. Catherine Powers, 68. The other day she died—of malnutrition, or acute starvation. And when police searched her rooms, they found bank books with deposits totaling $40,000. These strange, sad things happen almost daily here, and I have never been able to figure what goes on in those old minds.

A famous local furrier has just laid out the highest price ever paid for a pelt, a Norwegian platina fox, which set him back $11,000, or about 23 times its weight in gold. This licks chinchilla to a thin frazzle.

INGRID BERGMAN, the lovely Swedish film star who wears virtually practically no make-up, turned up at a Svenska restaurant the other night wearing a pink silk duchess satin gown, off the shoulder, plus a mink coat. A beautiful sight, girls.

Maybe Glands Are Causing Overweight

If This Is the Case, Doctor Can Advise Best Treatment

By Ida Jean Kain

MAYBE it is your glands! While overeating will always be the most popular reason for overweight, a sudden change may be directly due to glandular disturbance. Since women are particularly concerned with the weight changes which often occur at the menopause, I interviewed an endocrinologist at a New Jersey sanitarium who specializes in the weight problems of women. This endocrinologist believes that there are more cases of endocrine obesity than generally recognized—but it is not usually just one gland, it's a combination.

IDA JEAN KAIN

"The glands function like a chain," the specialist said. "One is linked with the other and when something goes wrong, the entire system is effected. During the menopause not only is the physical condition changed but sometimes the mental outlook as well, for behind our emotions we find the glands are the motor.

Some Lose Weight

"At this time, a lessening of the activity of the ovarian glands disturbs all others. As a result the metabolic process is slowed down. Instead of being burned at the usual rate, food in the form of fat and liquid is stored in the tissues. In some instances, however, the reverse occurs. Instead of being retarded, the metabolic process is accelerated and the weight drops."

The ovarian glands are assisted by the pituitary glands and in the treatment of these cases, the administration of both pituitary and thyroid injections have been found highly successful.

But, the endocrinologist goes on to warn: "Women must not expect to get thin by taking injections if they continue to overeat."

The injection will help you to burn calories instead of storing them, but your food intake must be restricted to your energy requirements—and lower if you are to lose weight.

Proteins Recommended

This authority favors a high protein diet for weight reduction. The most important thing is to feed the muscles—the heart, the walls of the vessels and the walls of the intestinal tract all contain muscles. Keeping these muscles in repair calls for a normal amount of protein in the menu. To slightly accelerate the metabolism, a higher than average protein diet is recommended. This is supplied by a liberal serving of lean meat, three glasses of skim milk, one egg, and a serving of cheese as part of the balanced, low-calorie diet. In cases of myxedema—retention of excess fluid in the tissues—restriction of the liquid intake to one quart per day is advised.

Weight loss varies greatly with the individual. Some women lose as much as half a pound a day, others no more than one pound per week. Rate of loss depends on the reason for obesity and the physical condition of the reducer. When there is myxedema or any glandular disturbance, the weight loss is more rapid than when it is simply a case of overeating.

If you begin suddenly to gain weight, see an endocrinologist, have a metabolism test. Find out the cause of your trouble. It is very likely that you will have to count calories, too, but an adjustment in your glandular system will make a vast improvement in your well being, both physical and mental.

Flannel Petticoats Again Fashionable

Hollywood, Calif.—Dame Fashion is showing her petticoat again, this time in bright red flannel. Fancy turns on the ice at the Westwood Tropical Gardens revealed that Ann Sheridan's black wool skating dress covered a flared, red flannel petticoat and trunks matched in the chin strap on her helmet.

An interested spectator on the side lines was ZaSu Pitts, playing with Ann in "It All Came True," and wrapped to the ears in a smart Indian blanket-coat with a hood.

Mary Haworth's Mail

As Man's Love for Her Deepens, Girl's Love Wanes To Friendly Interest; How Convey the Truth?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 20 and about a year ago I met Bill, who is two years my senior. I went with him off and on until a few months ago, when we started going steady. At that time, I thought I was in love with him, but have since realized that I really only greatly admire and respect him. I know that he has not gone out with any other girl since he met me, and I have every reason to believe that he is truly in love with me and expects me to marry him, although we are not formally engaged.

My problem is this: How can I tell him just how I feel without hurting him too deeply? He is of a very serious and sensitive nature and I am concerned as to what his response might be. I plan to go away for the summer months and wonder if it would be wise to keep seeing him until that time? Or would it be better to break off with him at once? I should like your reply within two weeks. E. L.

DEAR E. L.: The superior quality of your whole attitude toward the man should make it possible for you to tell him the truth, quite simply and frankly, without wounding his feelings too cruelly. And when I speak of your whole attitude, I have reference to your sympathetic understanding of his sensitive and serious nature; your great admiration and respect for him; the admirable honesty of your assumption that the alliance should be broken off in fairness to him (since you cannot reciprocate his love); and your generous desire to break things off in the kindliest and most irrevocable way.

Where so much genuinely protective good will exists, why not give it unstudied expression? Why aggravate the situation with an artful or apprehensive approach? Just tell the man gently, as soon as possible, approximately what you have said here—that his single-minded devotion to you has become a source of serious concern, in view of your discovery that your feeling for him is not love, as you first supposed, but a blend of admiration, respect and affection. You may say that this discovery necessitates a revision of the "understanding" on which the relationship has been based.

Tell him you will be going away for the summer, in any event; that you had briefly thought of using that separation as an opening wedge in breaking off, but finally decided the decent thing to do was to make a clean breast of your change of heart and let him condemn you or absolve you on the spot. After such a preliminary, you can better proceed to a discussion of how to help him adjust to the painful prospect of giving you up.

Perhaps the association can be tapered off, ending finally with your departure this summer. Or perhaps he will prefer to end it at once. And I think his wishes, if at all reasonable, should be respected. If you will deal with him as you would want to be dealt with, supposing your positions were reversed, I am sure you will be as generous and yet as inflexible as the situation warrants.

M. H.

Distrust the Person Who Defames Woman

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I've never written you before, but the letter from "W. J. T." and your reply of January 24 provokes me to comment. Once, many years ago, I had an experience comparable to his. I was a college boy, 24 years old. The girl with whom I had been intimate was two years older. The only difference was this—she didn't become pregnant and she didn't demand marriage.

But I, too, learned from "unimpeachable sources" that she was a girl of "easy virtue." Like "W. J. T," I had "little experience" with women. I, too, was eager to do "the right thing." So I didn't marry the girl. The luckiest guy in the world married her. I married someone else. And the "unimpeachable sources" who helped frame my decision were (1) a frustrated lover and (2) a jealous girl friend of mine.

I don't know why, but I feel pretty deeply about the girl's side of the story as "W. J. T." tells it. I'm for her. I think she'll make him twice as good a wife as the girl he finally marries. Maybe I'm jumping to conclusions, but I think I know his ilk. A girl of 22 can't be very bad, and particularly not if she has consistently impressed a fairly cautious fellow of 23 as being "quiet spoken and refined." Sincerely,

F. P. H.

Man Married Mistress; Here's What Happened

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Your article of January 24 struck home to me. I had a son in college several years ago, who cared little for girls until he met, in his senior year, a co-ed who tricked him into marriage. He married her to avoid further trouble. She proved to be a lazy, no-good wife, continually flirting with other men. She never had the baby. And now she is suing for alimony and causing all kinds of trouble.

It is her fault that they can't get along. My son is easy going and generous with money. She took all he had and spent it to suit herself, and now she has left him several hundred dollars in debt. Tell "W. J. T." for me to let his "college widow" take care of herself. She will never be true to him. My former daughter-in-law has three sisters. All of them found husbands at college and all the marriages are turning out badly.

Learn Dancing At Home

A YOUNG man will have trouble getting another girl to be his partner! Dance steps baffle him—so he tries to shove and push his way through the delightful tango.

So foolish to get a name as a poor dancer! If you practice at home with diagrams and instructions, your dancing quickly becomes smooth, graceful, modern—the kind everyone envies.

To dance in real tango style, to be in key with the glamorous music, take your steps with a precise catlike tread, avoid movement above the waist.

The secret of perfection in other smart dances? In the lilting rumba, use your heels, sway hips as you change weight. The Winchester you make a succession of sweeping glides.

Be admired for your dancing. Our 40-page booklet, Social Dancing Self-Taught, has step-by-step diagrams and instructions for all the popular dances—rumba, waltz, fox-trot, Westchester, tango, shag. Gives pointers on posture, leading and following—to make your dancing ace-high in any ballroom.

Today's Health Talk:

Immunity to Colds Increases With Advance of Years

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

The four great winter diseases are respiratory infections: (1) the common cold, (2) influenza, (3) chronic sinus and ear infection, and (4) pneumonia.

The peak incidence of the common cold during the year is February 1. So about this time of year the departments of public health and pharmaceutical houses publish announcements, the burden of which is "Avoid the common cold."

As a corollary to this they usually deplore the vast economic waste entailed by the common cold, the number of working days lost.

Wishful Thinking

This column has always felt that a great deal of what is said on the subject is wishful thinking, and while it very properly tries to give aid and comfort to the defending armies, there is very little advice that is practical because very little of it, if followed out, results in any possible benefit.

It is very much like deploring the necessity of having the hair cut. That always involves a great deal of economic waste. I suppose this very day there are at least 5,000,000 hours of working life lost by the male population of this country because they are having their hair cut. Conservatively, in one year, time is consumed which would represent 10,000,000 entire lifetimes, simply by having our hair cut. As for the dollars and cents involved, I saw a statement recently that the value of all the United States interests in China is only two-thirds of the value of the United States domestic barber business.

Same Way About Cold

I feel exactly the same way about the common cold. To some of my nose and throat colleagues, The common cold is an infection of the mucous membrane of the nose, throat and bronchial tubes, who object to my iconoclastic views about cold vaccines, I have said that I could put everything that is positively known about the common cold in a short paragraph. They have challenged me to do so, and here it is.

It is, to a certain extent, contagious. It is caused not by a germ, but by a virus. Secondary infection with germs is planted on top of the virus inflammation and prolongs the period of convalescence. It is accompanied by a slight fever, slight prostration, headache and muscle aches. It has no serious complications by sequelae. It is definitely associated with cold weather. The incidence is highest in those under 4 years old, and drops to almost nothing after the age of 45, which indicates that in the course of time immunity is established. Cures are invented and believed in largely by people over 45, who do not realize that their immunity is not due to the treatment but to their age. Colds cannot be prevented by any vaccine, dietary measure or exercise. Avoidance of exposure helps to prevent. There is no method of treatment known that gives rapid relief. Bed rest is the best treatment. The only medicine known which gives relief is codeine. Codeine can be prescribed only by a physician.

Distinguished Elbows Are Rubbed As 400 Attend Hull Reception

Mrs. Roosevelt Pays a Brief Call; Representatives of Judiciary, Congress and Diplomatic Corps on Hand

By Hope Ridings Miller.

BIG, BRILLIANT and record-breaking on more than one account was the reception given yesterday by Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull at the Carlton Hotel.

Chiefs of diplomatic missions, members of the Supreme Court, the Cabinet, the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate and the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House, ranking officials of the State Department and a sizable press contingent made up the 400 guests who called between 5 and 7 p. m.

The clock had just struck the opening hour when Mrs. Roosevelt, smartly turned out in a dark green ensemble, appeared at the door to greet the host and hostess. Escorted around the mammoth Carlton room by the Secretary of State, she chatted briefly with the few guests who had arrived early, then returned to the adjoining drawing room to bid Mrs. Hull good-bye. Five minutes later, the First Lady had disappeared, and a steady stream of envoys and their wives had started pouring into the party.

Suffering from an attack of laryngitis for the past few days, Mrs. Hull had made arrangements to turn over her hostessing duties to a friend if receiving proved too strenuous. But at the opening hour, she was in her place in the drawing room; and an hour and a half later, as I was leaving, she was still standing by her husband's side, greeting a continuous line of guests. Becoming was the word for her smart frock, fashioned with a floor-length skirt of dark brown crepe set off with a gold and brown bodice and a corsage of green orchids.

Turned out in the best of Bond street fashions were ranking State Department officials who ran away with sartorial honors of the afternoon. Elegant was the word for H. Charles Spruks, ceremonial officer, who stood at the door. Seeming to be in a dozen places at once was the Chief of Protocol, George T. Summerlin, who didn't miss a trick during the entire party.

British Envoy Arrives Early

While the scarlet-coated Marine Band orchestra played on the balcony, the Carlton room was a moving mass of diplomatic bigwigs and foreign accents for well over two hours. Few indeed were the notables who followed the example of the British Ambassador, Lord Lothian. Having just recovered from influenza, he put in a brief appearance, made the rounds quickly and then departed. For the most part, guests came early and stayed late to enjoy one of the most interesting get-togethers of the season.

Mrs. Stanley Woodward and Mrs. Spruks, both of whom had on black and white ensembles, generally assisted the hostess and spent most of the afternoon seeing that the pouring contingent was in place on schedule. Mrs. Charles Edison and Mrs. Robert H. Jackson were presiding at the tea table when the party started, and among hostesses following them were Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Stanley Reed, Secretary of Labor Perkins, Mrs. William B. Bankhead, and Mrs. Harry McBride.

"Big Names" Seen Everywhere

Pink roses sprouting in profusion from a tall center vase and from two low bowls alternated with clusters of tall white tapers in silver holders. Every tea time dainty you can imagine had a place on the lavishly laden table; over at a side buffet, caviar on paper-thin pancakes was served, and on down the room punch was poured from a sparkling fountain.

SEEN IN PASSING: Senora de Espil, whose black frock was set off with a snappy black hat trimmed in blue feathers, and Senhora de Martins, wearing a silver fox cape over a black frock and a small black hat trimmed with matching bird-of-paradise feathers . . . The Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Hu Shih, chatting briefly with the Soviet Ambassador and Mme. Oumansky . . . The German Charge d'Affaires and Frau Thomsen sipping punch and talking with the former Austrian Minister and Mme. Prochnik . . . The Norwegian Minister and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, working their way over to the "caviar bar" and being stopped by friends every step . . . the Japanese Ambassador and Mme. Horinouchi threading their way through the throng . . . and the Italian Ambassador and Donna Elly Colonna holding court near the door.

Arriving early and staying almost an hour was the dean of the Diplomatic Corps, Peru's Ambassador, Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander. Coming along a bit later were the Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun, the Canadian Minister, Loring Christie; the Dominican Minister and Senora de Pastoriza, the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera, and the Ambassador of Ecuador and Senora de Alfaro.

Dean of Corps Stays an Hour

"Where's the Minister of Finland? Has he come yet?" somebody asked and had the answer a couple of minutes later when the tall figure of handsome Hjalmar Johan Procope appeared at the door. Completely hemmed in from then until he departed an hour later was the popular envoy who had a reception all his own from then on. Also holding a nice slice of the spotlight was the Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki, wha was among those coming early.

Numerous high-ranking United States officials, who as a rule pass up afternoon parties, were very much in the picture yesterday afternoon. The Speaker of the House, arriving with Mrs. Bankhead, stayed on until she had finished pouring coffee and seemed to be having the time of his life. Coming early was Justice James Clarke McReynolds, who was a popular center of attention as long as he lingered. Senator and Mrs. Alben Barkley were seen in the throng; as were Justice and Mrs. Hugo Black and Justice and Mrs. Felix Frankfurter, and Representative Bruce Barton.

Mrs. Wilson Among Guests

Smartly attired in a purple suit and a matching hat was Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, who came alone but was surrounded by friends the minute she entered the room. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss were there, also Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, who arrived with Mrs. Hiram Johnson, and Mrs. Henry F. Grady, who came in with Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck.

Still others there were Mrs. Joseph Davies, Senator Joseph Guffey and his sister, Miss Paulletta Guffey; the Misses Jennie and Margaret Moore, Mrs. Claude Pepper, Senator and Mrs. Guy Gillette, Mrs. Sol Bloom and her daughter, Miss Vera Bloom; Norman Davis, Senator Arthur Capper, Senator Theodore Green, Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, Mrs. Loy Henderson, Mrs. Hamilton Fish with Comtesse Viller de Terrace and Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins.

Miss Belle Gurnee Will Give Dinner

Miss Belle Gurnee will entertain at a small dinner on Sunday evening before Clarence Streit's lecture at the Town Hall on "Union Now," the title of his recent book. The meeting will be held at 8 o'clock at the Shoreham.

Mrs. Wilson Compton will give a buffet supper before the lecture, as she has done before each of the Town Hall gatherings this year.

On the panel will be Felix Morley, editor of The Washington Post, and the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, vice president of Georgetown University and regent of its Foreign Service School.

First Lady Among Guests

Harris & Ewing

The First Lady was one of the first guests to arrive at the diplomatic reception given yesterday by the Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull. Mrs. Roosevelt (above) with the host. Among others in the throng of 400 were the ranking lady of the Diplomatic Corps, Senora de Espil (right) and her husband, the Argentine Ambasador

Army and Navy Fete Winds Up Official Roosevelt Receptions Unless President Is Reelected

Commander in Chief of Both Services Entertains for High Ranking Officers And Members of Congressional Committees

By Elizabeth Henney

IT WAS STRICTLY an all-American party last evening at the White House, when the ranking officers of the Army and Navy, led by the Congressional members of the Military and Naval Affairs committees, were entertained by the Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy, President Franklin D. Roosevelt, and Mrs. Roosevelt.

An unspoken thought in the minds of many guests was the possibility that the reception, the last of the current season, might be the last official reception to be given in the White House by the Roosevelts. Before another social season rolls around, elections will have come—and gone.

Long before the reception hour of 9 o'clock, the throngs had begun to assemble at the east entrance, and a long queue wound through the lower corridors. Up the marble staircase and into the East room they passed, where portraits of the first Commander in Chief and his lady (George and Martha Washington) looked down, no doubt with astonishment, on these representatives of the vast military and naval establishments sprung from the nucleus of their tiny Colonial forces.

As the band struck up "Hail to the Chief" the President and Mrs. Roosevelt arrived. The First Lady's gown was of heavy eggshell satin, simply cut with a long train. Worn over the frock was a cobwebby shawl of exquisite lace.

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull, who rarely miss a state function, were on the absentee list as were the Postmaster General and Mrs. James A. Farley, the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Harold Ickes and the Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins.

The Secretary of the Treasury, Henry A. Morgenthau, jr., who headed the line, came in alone, as Mrs. Morgenthau did not attend. Looking as pretty as a pink was Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, escorted by the Secretary of War. Her pink satin bodice was banded in shell-toned chiffon, which formed the voluminous skirt. The new Attorney General was accompanied by Mrs. Robert A. Jackson. Her heavy green brocaded gown had a cluster of orchids pinned to the bodice. Next in line were the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Charles Edison. Wearing a perky silver and white lame gown made with a pleated bustle back, Mrs. Edison made a striking picture. She had pinned a cluster of orchids to her bag. Bringing the procession to an end were the Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins, escorted by the Secretary of Agriculture, Henry A. Wallace. Miss Perkins, whose gown was grape-toned, was busy showing her house guest, Miss Elizabeth Poole, the "sights." A tall and willowy brunette here from New York City, she wore a smart frock of white starched net.

Several Senators Noted in Crowd

Senator and Mrs. Lister Hill and Senator and Mrs. Ernest Lundeen were other senatorial Military Affairs Committee people noted. Mrs. Hill in a frothy pink net model, off-the-shoulder neckline, very full hoop skirt, corsage of sweetheart roses and old gold locket with two antique gold bracelets to carry out the old-fashioned effect. Mrs. Lundeen wore a changeable brocade with a woven silver and blue figure setting off the material.

The Judge Advocate General of the Army, Maj. Gen. Allen Gullion was accompanied by Mrs. Gullion who wore a striking silver lame gown cut simply and fashioned with a train.

Brig. Gen. Lorenzo D. Gasser, the deputy chief of staff, was noted with Mrs. Gasser who wore a black net and chiffon model, fashioned with a bouffant skirt and a multicolored, glittering sequin bodice.

Chiefs of services noted in a group included Chief of Engineers Maj. Gen. Julian L. Schley, and Mrs. Schley, and the Chief of Infantry, Maj. Gen. George A. Lynch, and Mrs. Lynch. Mrs. Schley set off her dark hair with a white chiffon gown whose full skirt was sprinkled with rhinestones and crystal earrings and necklace. Mrs. Lynch was a brilliant contrast in red Chinese satin and orchid chiffon, fashioned with a pleated yolk.

Being congratulated on all sides were Brig. Gen. Raymond F. Metcalfe and Mrs. Metcalfe, the former of whom recently was appointed head of the Army Medical Center at Walter Reed Hospital. Mrs. Metcalfe was gowned in crimson shot with silver and fashioned with a full skirt topped by a bolero jacket. Accompanying the Quartermaster General of the Army, Maj. Gen. Henry Gibbins, was Mrs. Gibbins, effective in sapphire blue velvet.

In black velvet and taffeta was Mrs. Walter S. Anderson who accompanied her husband, Rear Admiral Anderson, the Director of Naval Intelligence. Topping her full-skirted frock was a jacket of velvet and a strand of gold sequins appliqued all over the skirt and followed out in a similar design on the bodice of the frock which featured an off the shoulder "Gone-With-The Wind" neckline.

Mrs. Sherman Minton, who accompanied Senator Minton was in gray net embroidered in silver, fashioned with a swirling skirt and topped with a bolero jacket of the net. In the Congressional party were Senator and Mrs. Josh Lee, she in black crepe with rhinestone and pearl accessories.

Mrs. Crozier Handsomely Gowned

Without reservation the handsomest gown at the White House last evening was worn by Mrs. William Crozier, escorted by Gen. Crozier. Made of antique Chinese satin in lacquer red it was heavily embroidered. The stately frock ended in a swallow-tailed train. A tiara of diamonds, as well as several necklaces of emeralds and diamonds completed the ensemble. General Crozier incidentally is the one who perfected the disappearing gun.

Shaking hands right and left was Mlle. Eve Curie who is in this country on a lecture tour. Soignee to her fingertips is the black-haired daughter of the famous scientists. She wore an electric-blue crepe gown with a series of tiny bustles in the back.

A lovely gown was that worn by Mrs. George Pettengill, escorted by Admiral Pettengill. Her frock, of shell pink crepe, was embroidered in silver sequins and had trailing scarfs falling from her shoulder to the floor. Others there included Commander and Mrs. Stephen Mills and their daughter, Mary, wearing a turquoise chiffon gown; Mrs. Samuel Halsey, of Orange, N. J., in a gold lame frock, Mrs. David Gray and Miss May Byrne Simpson whose gold snood held her curls in place.

Smart Gowns Accent Gathering

Noted in the Green room, chatting as the receiving line formed were Mrs. George C. Marshall, wife of Gen. Marshall, Chief of Staff of the Army, and Mrs. Harold R. Stark, wife of Admiral Stark, who is the Chief of Naval Operations. Both had been members of the state dinner party preceding the reception. Mrs. Marshall was gowned in silver lame, made on straight lines, with a train extending from a bustle at the waistline, and pearl jewelry. Mrs. Stark wore a black lace model, fashioned with a fitted bodice and a full, flowing skirt of black lace and marquisette.

Miss Molly Pender Brown, daughter of Mrs. Marshall, was seen later in the evening, the center of a gay crowd. She wore a bronze satin model, cut on classic lines, with a narrow band of gold brocade outlining the hem of the skirt and forming the shoulder straps, and a family heirloom brooch of antique gold as a jewel accent to her costume.

The chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics of the Navy, Rear Admiral John H. Towers, and Mrs. Towers, were accompanied by Miss Marjorie Towers. Mrs. Towers was gowned in gray satin, and Miss Towers wore a black net frock with a tight-fitting bodice and very full skirt. Mrs. Emory S. Adams, gowned in a Royce model of gray silk taffeta, fashioned with a shirred top and full flowing skirt, accompanied her husband, Maj. Gen. Adams, the adjutant general of the Army.

"Gone With the Wind" Influence in Gowns

With Rear Admiral Alexander H. Van Keuren, the chief of the Bureau of Construction and repair of the Navy, were his wife and daughter, Miss Frances C. Van Keuren. Mrs. Van Keuren was in black velvet, fashioned with a full skirt to form a train in back and trimmed with family heirloom lace of point Venice. Miss Van Keuren wore a frock of peach brocade, fashioned on princess lines with a fitted waist, V-neckline and short puffed sleeves.

Mrs. Morris Sheppard, wife of Senator Sheppard, chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, was a center of attention in a stunning gown of black net, accented with a flower design of

Army-Navy Chiefs Feted By Roosevelts

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained 22 guests at dinner last evening before the Army-Navy reception at the White House. The company, assembled at 7 p. m., sat at a long table, which was decorated with red carnations, white buddleia and maidenhair fern.

The Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry Woodring were among the guests as were the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Charles Edison. Others in the company included Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Edwin M. Watson, the Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Louis Johnson, the Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. Harold R. Stark, The Army Chief of Staff and Mrs. George C. Marshall and the Commandant of the Marine Corps, Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb.

Still others there were Mlle. Eve Curie, Mrs. J. Couper Lord, Miss Mary Louise Lord, Miss Marguerite LeHand, Capt. Daniel J. Callaghan, Capt. Don. E. Lowry and Lieut. John F. Newman, jr.

Mrs. George Morris Is 'At Home' Hostess

Kalorama Road Home Brought Piece By Pierce From Danvers, Mass., Is Scene of Cheerful Gathering

By Carolyn Bell.

"I always enjoy escaping from our modern world into this serene house," said a guest at Mrs. George Maurice Morris' "at home" yesterday afternoon. Shoals of people flocked gratefully to the informal party after having visited one or another of the more official affairs on tap.

Completely candle-lit, as always, the house which the Morrises brought down piece by piece from Danvers, Mass., and erected on Kalorama road, presented a cozy picture yesterday, once inside. A bright fire blazed on the hearth and guests settled in little groups chatting quietly over punch or tea.

Mrs. Morris received her guests wearing a vibrant burgundy velvet frock, a quaint heart-shaped necklace of sapphire and diamonds completing the ensemble. Mrs. Wilbur Hubbard, mother of the hostess, was nearby. Urging people to try the incredibly tiny stairway downstairs was Miss Eleanor Connolly, who had donned a pretty spring print for the occasion.

"What Is It?" Entertains Guests

Having mastered the stairway one became aware that it was worth the struggle, for the room is quite unique. A long table was stretched across one end of the room and here sandwiches, canapes of every description and punch were served. Playing the amusing game of "What is it?" were Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, Mrs. Stanley Reed and several other ladies with Mr. Morris.

The genial host is at his best when showing his various ancient utensils. And of course the ladies lost the game, for no one would have guessed the "Gone With the Wind" hair-curler, tin nursing bottle or disguised medicine taker. Mrs. McNutt wore a green wool suit trimmed in fur and carried a matching fur muff. Mrs. Reed's all black frock was topped by a turquoise hat.

Many Notables Among Guests

Tea was served in the dining room at the heavily laden table, which was centered with an exquisite spring bouquet of tulips, jonquils and snapdragons. Pouring when I entered was Mrs. McCeney Werlich with a white flower hat atop her gray curls. Not far away was Mrs. William P. MacCracken who wore with her bronze green ensemble a scarf of furs. She chatted with Mrs. Aldace Walker and Lady Chalkley whose pink hat completed her blue ensemble.

Mink-swathed, Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley came in for a short chat as did Louis Montague who later entertained at a dinner party for Mrs. Fred Gould. Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis were there as were Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, sporting a bright red hat; Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry and Mr. and Mrs. Lee Murphy.

Mrs. James Helm dropped in as did Princess Boncompagni, Mrs. Carlton Holdredge, Mrs. Cary T. Grayson, Miss Carolyn Nash, Mrs. Charles Carroll Morgan, and Mrs. Charles de Vere Drayton—several of these being among the assistants.

Mr., Mrs. Sanders Entertain With Cocktail Party

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Sanders were hosts at a cocktail party yesterday at the Mayflower where they make their home. Mr. Sanders, who was secretary to President Coolidge, has lived in Washington for some years, remaining here to practice law. The Pan American Room of the hotel, where the party was held, was beautifully decorated with spring flowers and as usual presented an extremely homelike atmosphere.

Mrs. Charles L. McNary was among the guests. Others in the company were former Senator and Mrs. Thomas P. Gore, Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, Mrs. Davis Elkins, Capt. Eduardo Prieto, formerly Cuban military attache; Mrs. Fred Britten, Chairman Ewin L. Davis, of the Federal Trade Commission, and Mrs. Davis; and from the same commission, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. March, and Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Freer.

Also present were Judge Oscar E. Bland and Judge Joseph R. Jackson, of the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals, with Mrs. Jackson; Judge Oscar R. Luhring, Mr. and Mrs. Camden R. McAtee, Mrs. S. Wallace Dempsey, Mr. and Mrs. G. Bowie Chipman, Mr. Edward F. Howrey and Mr. Douglas Whitlock, law partners of Mr. Sanders, with Mrs. Howrey and Mrs. Whitlock; Mrs. Thomas Ewing Moore and daughter, Miss Rosemary Moore; Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken.

Mrs. Robbins Gives Dinner Party

With half of society flat on its back with influenza, most dinners these nights are being given without the presence of the guest of honor or sometimes even the hostess. Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins' dinner last night was planned for charming Mrs. Diego Suarez, of New York, but the latter was kept in Manhattan by an attack of flu.

However, the dinner went on anyway, and among those present was Mrs. Sumner Warren, of Boston, who is visiting Mrs. Robbins.

The party started out to be a small tea, but ended up as a reception for some 300. The receiving line lasted practically all afternoon, but Mr. Horton was smiling as pleasantly at 6 o'clock as at 4. Sharing honors with him was his mother, Mrs. Isabella Horton, who wore black. Mrs. Van Fossan had chosen a floor length gown of chartreuse crepe with a corsage of orchids.

Therapy Room, Library Are Given to Gallinger

Twentieth Century Club Celebrates Jubilee Day of Anniversary Year With Presentation to the Hospital

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

"The Twentieth Century Club at this meeting celebrates the jubilee day of its jubilee year," Mrs. Edward G. Montgomery, the president, said yesterday as she made formal presentation to Gallinger Hospital of the occupational therapy room and library the club has provided for the children's ward.

The presentation program at the February meeting in Barker Hall of the Y. W. C. A. followed an address by Miss Katharine F. Lenroot, director of the Children's Bureau, on the recent White House conference on children in a democracy. Those who had served as an advisory council, working with Mrs. R. Thomas West, chairman of the Gallinger project, and her committee were on the platform. Mrs. West was ill and unable to be present. Her report was presented by Mrs. Karl Fenning, a past president of the club.

Dr. George Ruhland Is Cheered by Club

Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, who acknowledged the gift in behalf of the Health Department, was the first member of the advisory council introduced. The prolonged applause that greeted him signified more than recognition of his cooperation in the project. It was evidently further expression of the sentiment the club had embodied in a resolution at its business meeting earlier in the morning, opposing a recent proposal that would have eliminated him as health officer.

Another resolution commended the "high type of service" given by Judge Fay Bentley "who has succeeded in building up the standards in the children's court so that it is recognized throughout the country for its excellence" and instructed that a letter be sent to the President indorsing her reappointment.

Following Dr. Ruhland, the next member of the advisory council introduced was Dr. Ella Oppenheimer, who was responsible for the original suggestion of the occupational therapy room as the club's golden jubilee project. She expressed appreciation for it as rounding out the unified service for crippled children at the hospital.

Dr. Bocock Expresses Thanks of Hospital

Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, superintendent of Gallinger Hospital, expressed his appreciation for the new occupational therapy equipment and said it was an adjunct to medicine in which he had been interested since the time of the World War.

Mrs. Montgomery introduced Arthur B. Heaton, the architect who assisted in plans for the rooms, and who is the husband of one of the club members.

Dr. George F. Bowerman, of the Public Library, and Miss Louise Latimer, children's librarian, were the advisers on the library room. Dr. Bowerman commended the club as an organization "with the amiable habit of generosity" which on three previous occasions had been directed toward the library, and now, on a fourth, had made it possible for that institution to realize, in part, one of its ambitions.

Miss Latimer, describing the opening of the library two weeks ago, told the club "in 30 years of observing children reading, I have never observed such stillness and such complete absorption as there was among those who forgot their pain and hardship in another world." There were 30 books borrowed the first day and 43 the second, she said. The library was assembled with special regard to the needs of the children.

Miss Lenroot, in discussing the White House Conference, declared that "if we resolve to do all in our power within the next decade to make democracy safe for children, we shall at the same time be developing citizens who will assure and perfect democracy."

"We need not apologize to anyone or cover up anything in America," she said, "but examine the situation, discover the problems and go forward in solving them."

District P. E. O. Fetes Sorority Organizer

Members of the P. E. O. Sisterhood of the District gathered at the studio of Mrs. Helen Turley, 1826 Massachusetts avenue, yesterday afternoon to greet Mrs. Turley's niece, Mrs. Dorothy Lee Weller, of Glendale, Calif., who is supreme organizer for the sorority. She stopped here for the day on a swing through this section, visiting various chapters and was guest of honor at a tea given by the State board of the District P. E. O.

The members found their supreme organizer an unusually young and attractive person. She was dressed in a gown of brown crepe trimmed with gold braid. Mrs. Turley wore pink lace. Others in the receiving line were the District president, Mrs. Robert M. Ferguson, who wore a black skirt with a rose and gold lame blouse; Mrs. Elizabeth S. Reynolds, first vice president, wearing a moss green crepe gown, trimmed with gold; Mrs. T. A. Hutton, second vice president, in black velvet; Mrs. F. F. Elliott, State organizer, in wine colored velvet; Mrs. H. M. Fohrman, treasurer, who wore a frock of ashes of roses; Mrs. F. E. Weick, corresponding secretary, and Miss Hazel Nielson, recording secretary, both of whom were dressed in black.

Mrs. Turley was assisted by her daughter, Mrs. G. H. Mitchell, of Chapter B, to which she also belongs. In the absence of Mrs. Ethel Fast, who was to have presented a musical program, but was unable to be present, Mrs. Turley, one of the Capital's leading contralto soloists, sang, accompanied by Mrs. Clifford H. Jope.

The studio was decorated with bouquets of yellow roses and marguerites, the P. E. O. flower, as well as Easter lilies. A bright fire crackled in the large fireplace.

Assisting at the refreshments table were the chapter presidents, Mrs. Roy C. Potts, Chapter A; Mrs. Charles Marvin Jones, B; Mrs. Jason Waterman, C; Miss Myrta Reynolds, D; Mrs. A. R. Horn, E; Mrs. F. J. Gillies, F; Mrs. J. A. Smith, G; Mrs. C. A. Cornelson, H; Mrs. L. A. Reynoldson, I; Mrs. K. F. Warner, K; Mrs. W. F. Hall, L; Miss Lois Baker, M; Mrs. W. M. Buckles, N; Miss Hazel Nielson, O.

Mrs. Weller last night left for Hampton, Va., and from there goes to North Carolina and Georgia. She has been in Iowa, Kentucky, West Virginia and New Jersey.

Rossiter, at 4131-3134 Georgia avenue. The women feel that because of the restaurant's proximity to branch library and public schools the license should be denied, and with other civic groups in the Petworth community have opposed its renewal.

Mrs. Frank H. Stuart, the club president, presided at the meeting at which $5 was voted for the blood bank of Children's Hospital and another $5 to provide milk for a needy family.

Several members contributed to the clubhouse fund in order to boost the "thermometer" registering gifts. The art section, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Walter Conway, served the luncheon.

The Visiting Nurse group of the club will meet Monday at 531 Georgia avenue and the Red Cross group, Thursday at the Petworth Branch Library.

House of Mercy Sends Bids to Phantom Dinner

Invitations to the third annual Phantom Dinner given by the officers and board of the House of Mercy, have just been sent out. This novel means of raising money for this institution is found entirely satisfactory since the full amount contributed goes to the home.

The House of Mercy is located at Klingle road and Rosemont avenue and cares for the unmarried mother and her baby, the former for two years and the latter for five years if necessar. This gives both a start toward a better and more worthwhile life. Deaconess Yeo, who came here 37 years ago to take charge, continues to direct the home with the assistance of Miss Alice Burton. Both have watched over the lives of more than 500 girls.

'Paper Army' Needs Listed By Woodring

Secretary Explains Combat Training In Complete Units Should Be Given

America's army must be trained by full divisions, complete in every detail, if they are to be effectively prepared for war, Secretary of War Woodring said last night.

"No single peacetime garrison in the United States has housed a complete—even partially complete—combat division," said Woodring. "On paper we have had an army—the expensive volunteer army inherent to our type of democratic government. But we have not had a real army—an army in being."

The Secretary's plea for thorough combat preparation for Army and National Guard was applauded by nearly 1,100 members and guests of the Fifteenth's Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense, who held their annual banquet in the Mayflower Hotel.

Woodring Reviews Weaknesses

Secretary Woodring said that Americans had failed to utilize their military resources to the best advantage. "We have scattered our small professional establishment far and wide, enervating, so far as really effective preparation for war is concerned, the units of our Regular Army," he declared.

Citing breakdown of supplies as the cause of Russian failures in Finland, Woodring said that if we heed the lessons of past and present wars, "in time of peace we must afford our fighting troops opportunity actually to function with the servicing troops."

"What suffices any army of half a million, of a million, of two million if their force is not coordinated in the training essential for war-time efficiency," he asked.

"By the very nature of our military set-up, it is essential that our Regular Army, our small professional nucleus, be 100 per cent prepared at all times for the performance of field duties."

Proposes Two Courses

Woodring offered two ways to insure this preparation:

A system of widely dispersed posts from which troops must continually be transported to areas adequate for effective training.

The permanent establishment of divisional and similar areas where opportunity for effective training can be given continuously.

The cost for either method will be high, said Woodring, "but one of those two procedures must be followed."

"I, as Secretary of War, want a real army, no gigantic host," he said. "I want an army completely prepared to assume the onerous, the awful responsibilities which will be imposed upon it if that mailed fist of Mars, which now is held so ominously over this whole wide world, should ever crash upon the shores of this, my own country."

Legion Leader Speaks

Commander Raymond J. Kelly, of the American Legion, also appealed for adequate preparation for defense. Mrs. Lowell Fletcher Hobart presided. Miss Hazel Nielson was chairman of the dinner committee. The conference will hold its final session at 9 a. m. today.

Other speakers at yesterday's meetings included Brig. Gen. Russell B. Putnam, U. S. Marine Corps; Col. Oswald W. McNeese, National Guard Bureau; Maj. Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the Air Corps, U. S. Army; Commander Lelafd P. Lovette, U. S. Navy; Neville Miller, president, National Association of Broadcasters; Representative Joseph W. Byrns, jr. (Democrat), of Tennessee; John Cecil, president, National Affairs Conference Board; Maj. L. S. Ostrander, U. S. Army.

Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, paid a surprise visit to the conference yesterday morning and said the Army's prime need is more modern equipment. He emphasized the importance of having adequate materials and a well-trained basic force ready at the outbreak of war.

Citizens Urge Evarts Street Underpass

The Northeast Conference of Citizens Associations went on record last night as favoring an underpass beneath the B. & O. Railroad at Evarts street northeast "to protect children going to school." Nine member associations were represented at the meeting at the Twelfth Precinct Station.

Action against the sale of "salacious" literature in District stores was urged in a resolution addressed to the Commissioners. The group went on record against combining No. 10 and No. 13 Engine companies.

A committee of five was appointed to investigate the possibility of an east-west bus line from the area of Wisconsin avenue in the northwest to the Bladensburg road section in the northeast.

Mlle. Curie, Here, Says Peace Now Would Be 'a Miracle'

Nation Is Confident Of Ultimate Victory, Lecturer Reports

Underwood & Underwood
EVE CURIE

France is fighting for "a little time of quietness," one of her most distinguished daughters said here yesterday.

Mlle. Eve Curie, daughter and biographer of the discoverer of radium, told reporters, "Frenchmen like their own homes better than the Maginot Line. But they don't want to go home just to be mobilized again in a few months."

They will fight "until the Nazi regime collapses," she said. Peace now would be "a miracle," she believes.

Mlle. Curie, attractive and smartly dressed, received reporters in the Monroe room of the White House. She was an overnight guest of Mrs. Roosevelt and tonight will speak in Constitution Hall on "French Women and the War." The lecture, which is sponsored by the National Geographic Society, begins at 8:15 p. m.

The present war is "more reasonable and cold" than the struggle of 1914-18, she explained. France is fundamentally confident of victory, she said, "but realizes there are always good moments and bad moments in wars. We feel from the way we live that we can endure longer than the Germans."

Mlle. Curie since September has been attached to the French information office, in charge of reports on the war-time activities of French women.

She said there has been no mobilization of women for semi-military service or efforts in any other field. On a voluntary basis, however, French women "are serving where they can" to fill the places in agriculture, industry and commerce of the 5,000,000 men under arms.

"Often this is simply a case of the wife taking over part of the husband's job on the farm or in the shop they had been managing together before," she said.

Mlle. Curie handled questions on the French attitude toward the United States with Gallic finesse. "We have no feeling that America always and always has to be friendly to France," she said, "but we do feel now that you have more sympathy for our life and society than for the things on the other side."

Reports from Poland, where her mother was born and several relatives still live, have been "very painful," she said quietly. "Some of my cousins are prisoners of the Russians," she explained, "and others are in the German-occupied territory." Through the Red Cross she has received one "heavily censored" letter from her mother's only living sister, whose home is in Warsaw.

Capital News In Brief

Does Good Deed, Dies

A 55-year-old colored man was a good Samaritan last night. James G. Harris, of 214 Rhode Island avenue northwest, rushed a pedestrian he struck to Freedmen's Hospital for treatment, then he fell dead of a heart attack.

Harris struck the pedestrian, John Drew, 60, colored, of 1311 Third street northwest, at Third and C streets northwest, after Drew had slipped and fallen into the path of Harris' auto, according to police.

While Drew was being treated for injuries to the legs and head, Harris waited outside the emergency room. He learned that Drew was being admitted to the hospital in an undetermined condition. As he started to leave, he died.

Divorce Is Asked

Complaining that among other things her husband tore off her night clothes on the evening of May 30, 1938, and thrust her into the corridor outside their apartment, Mrs. Virginia B. Schaffert, 30, yesterday asked the District Court for a legal separation from John L. Schaffert.

Mrs. Schaffert, a Civil Aeronautics Authority employe, who lives at 3100 Connecticut avenue, did not ask for alimony.

Mrs. Schaffert's complaint also charged her husband was of violent temper, remiss in paying household expenses and given to frequent spells of moody silence.

They were married here October 17, 1936, and have no children.

Budget Cuts Protested

A campaign of protest against the budget cuts in Federal social service agencies will begin today when 100,000 leaflets entitled "Ruinous Economy—Is This Another 1932?" are distributed among Government employes by 78 volunteers of the United Federal Workers of America.

The campaign is sponsored by the Congress of Industrial Organizations. A city-wide rally is planned for the middle of February, at which Allan Haywood, Jacob Baker and Irwin Elber will be principal speakers.

The U. F. W. A. plans to distribute another 100,000 leaflets before the date of the rally.

Suits Sped for Aged

Aged persons whose death would extinguish their damage claims are entitled to have their cases heard ahead of others in the District Court, Justice F. Dickinson Letts declared yesterday.

Justice Letts advanced on the trial calendar the $30,000 suit of 77-year-old Mrs. Belle A. Keeler, 5420 Connecticut avenue northwest, against Thomas J. Fisher Co. Mrs. Keeler contends that she was permanently injured by a broken arm when she fell on some stairs at the Legation Apartments, where she lives.

3 Fires Reported

Fire in the basement of the Columbia Medical Building, 1835 I street northwest, destroyed a storeroom of supplies last night. Firemen fought the blaze for 45 minutes. Cause of the fire was undetermined.

In another fire a room in the home of Ralph E. Brown, of 114 Ninth street southeast, was damaged by flaming curtains.

Cruelty Charge Halts Retiring Of Policeman

Youth Accuses Him Of Blacking Eye and Cutting Face

The retirement of Frank A. Varney from the Metropolitan Police force was held up yesterday—the day it was to begin—because of a charge that the veteran police lieutenant had maltreated a prisoner.

Suffering from a blood clot in his leg, Varney, who is 42, has been on sick leave for almost a month and was at his home, 3017 Channing street northeast, when the charge was served on him. Not a criminal accusation, it will be heard by a police trial board.

The retirement, which had been approved by the police surgeons and the Commissioners, was postponed until the case is disposed of. A police trial board, at its discretion, can recommend the dismissal of a policeman found guilty.

Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal ordered the charge after an investigation of a complaint from Joseph Sansalone, 240 First street southwest, that his 16-year-old son, Michael, suffered a black eye and face cuts while in custody at the Fourth Precinct station.

Specifications against Varney state that Michael was taken into custody November 19 by Lieut. Varney when he failed to get out of the way of a police car while he was playing in Wonders court southeast.

In a statement to his superiors, Varney said he did not strike the boy and that he only talked to him at the Fourth Precinct station for a short time and then released him. He said it was several days later the boy showed up with the black eye.

Central Mission Party Honors Robert Drummond

Robert Drummond, director of men's work at Central Union Mission, was presented with a birthday cake, a New Testament and a box of flowers last night by the Converts' Club of the Mission in celebration of the 24th anniversary of his conversion.

The cake was presented by Mrs. Jean Bennett, superintendent of the mission, in memory of her husband, the late John S. Bennett, whose birthday falls next Monday. Pieces of the cake were distributed.

Raymond Brown is president of the Converts' Club, composed of men rehabilitated by the mission. About 300 were present last night.

D.A.R. Unit Backs Cabin for Boys

Construction of a $300 log cabin at Camp Reeder, Md., for the Boys Club of Washington, in honor of Miss Lillian Chenoweth, State regent of the District D. A. R., was approved last night by the Junior American Citizens Committee of the District D. A. R. at their meeting in the Mayflower.

Three Anacostia High School seniors, Vivian Francis, Ellen Watson and Gladys Reed, read prize-winning essays on Elizabeth Jackson, mother of President Jackson.

Truck Skids, Pushes Two Cars in Canal

25-Foot Drop Fails To Break Ice; Colder Is Forecast Today; Four Hurt in Falls

Washington's gray mantle of snow was trickling away yesterday as the mercury ranged above freezing from noon until after sundown, but the Weather Bureau said that today will be colder.

The mercury was headed toward a low of 26 early today, the Bureau reported. High yesterday was 42.2 at 3 p. m., and the low was 16.3 at 4 a. m.

Down an ice-covered Georgetown hill, a heavy oil truck slipped from its parking place and sent an automobile and light delivery truck crashing into the C. & O. Canal at Thirty-fourth street northwest.

Police said the truck, whose driver was Woodrow W. Burdette, of Hyattsville, Md., was parked on Thirty-fourth street, above M street northwest.

The tank truck crossed busy M street, struck the parked auto of Charles Eaton, 3856 M street northwest, and a truck belonging to Edward L. Van Ry, of 3338 M street northwest.

It veered across Thirty-fourth street, knocked over a telephone pole, and finally struck a car and truck belonging to Henry C. Travis, jr., both parked on a loading platform near the canal's edge. Car and truck were sent skidding across ice, and tumbling 25 feet over the edge. They crashed to the canal ice, but failed to break through, later being removed by a derrick.

Four Hurt on Ice

Four persons were treated in District hospitals yesterday for injuries received in mishaps caused by ice. Three others were treated for injuries sustained in traffic accidents.

Santina Manila, 16, of 10 Q street northwest, crashed into a telephone pole at First and Bryant streets northwest, while sliding. Removed to Sibley Hospital, he was treated for two broken ribs, lacerations to the face and possible fractured skull.

At Fourteenth street and Indiana avenue southwest, Jessie Fadner, 56, of 1327 Kenyon street northwest, fell and was removed to Emergency Hospital with a broken arm. Ethel Rudderford, 42, of 213 Third street northwest, was treated for a possible fracture of the right leg at Casualty Hospital after she fell at Eighth and H streets southwest.

Falling at Fourth and H streets southwest, Inez Carter, 25, colored, of 718 First street southwest, was treated at Emergency Hospital for a fractured right wrist and released.

Driver Is Held

Ruth Sheres, 38, of 711 Otis place northwest, was treated for possible fracture of the left hip and leg and severe lacerations of the face at Casualty Hospital, after she was struck down by a car at Fifth and Decatur streets northwest. The driver, Charles M. McGraw, 27, of 616 Tewkesbury place northwest, was charged with reckless driving.

In the 900 block Pennsylvania avenue northwest, Mabel Hendrix, 50, of 1406 Webster street northwest, was struck by a truck. She was treated for minor lacerations. Operator of the truck was William J. Nugent, 19, of 412 N street northwest, police said.

John O. Varner, 45, of 917 I street northwest, was treated at Providence Hospital for lacerations to the head and face after an accident on the Jefferson highway near Alexandria.

Washington's weather last January, Weather Bureau reports showed yesterday, made it the fourth coldest month here on record.

Average temperature last month was 24.9, 8.5 degrees below normal. Only colder months in the Bureau's records, which run back to 1871, were Janaury, 1883, when the average temperature was 24.6; January, 1918, average temperature, 23.7, and February, 1934, average, 24.6.

GoodwillIndustries Employed 250

A total of 250 persons were employed at the Goodwill Industries in 1939, Col. Edward G. Bliss, trustee, said last night. He spoke in a group discussion of the work of the organization over station WMAL.

Other speakers included W. Harold Snape, director of the Goodwill Industries; Mrs. Miller Hickerson, promotion supervisor of the organization, and Ben McKelway, managing editor of the Evening Star.

Quoting the Goodwill motto of "What is one person's waste is another person's necessity," the speakers urged the public to support the organization.

Extra Police Placed on Bandit Patrol

7 Robberies And Attempts to Rob Reported in 2 Capital Sections

Police and detective patrols in the Mount Pleasant and Columbia Heights areas were increased yesterday after a colored marauder robbed or attempted to rob seven apartments there. Three robberies and one unsuccessful attempt occurred Wednesday night.

Police identified the man as the same who entered the apartment of Representative Mansfield (Democrat), of Texas, at 2101 New Hampshire avenue northwest Tuesday. He escaped with the pocketbook of Mrs. Margaret Dorsey, the Congressman's daughter, after outdistancing her in a block long chase.

Wednesday night the burglar forced his way into the home of Robert Brennan, Minister of Ireland, at 1920 Twenty-third street northwest, threatened Mrs. Brennan with a blackjack and escaped with a suit of clothes. Less than half an hour later a man answering the same description entered the apartment of Mrs. Stella Debar, 1954 Columbia road northwest, took $2 and a watch and received a scratched lip when Mrs. Debar attempted to fight him off.

Five minutes after the Debar robbery, a colored man with his lip bleeding appeared in the home of Miss Beatrice Frankie, 2123 Eighteenth street northwest, and took $1 and a watch.

About 9:30 p. m. a man believed to be the same attempted to force his way into the home of Miss Bernice Tanner, 1821 Sixteenth street northwest. He was frightened off by her screams.

Police said the man answers the description of one who robbed Miss Charlotte Bowman, 1920 Nineteenth street northwest, of $4 January 23 and endeavored to enter the apartment of Mrs. John Guernsey in the same building the same day.

The bandit was described in a police circular as "25 to 30 years old, about 5 feet 6 or 7 inches tall. He has a small mustache and wears a long, dark overcoat and dark felt hat. He may have scratches on his face and acts like he uses dope. He will gain entrance under the pretense of being sent by the manager."

Last night bandits and purse-snatchers collected more than $184 and a quart of whiskey in four robberies on District streets and one holdup of a liquor store.

Samuel Levitt, proprietor of a liquor store at 1208 Eleventh street southeast, reported to police his store was held up by three armed colored men who made off with the quart of whiskey and $90.

Confronted by three colored men, one of whom held a hatchet to his throat, Jesse Derk, colored, 49, of 1008 New Jersey avenue northwest, surrendered $21. He was held up on Sixth street northwest between G and H streets.

Barbara Way, of 2515 K street northwest, lost her pocketbook containing $45 to a colored man in the block near her home. Rose Marie Albanese, of 916 Sixteenth street northwest, said two colored boys snatched her pocketbook, with an unknown amount of money, in the 600 block of K street northwest.

Music Everywhere in Mexico, Says Guest Conductor Chavez

Orquesta Sinfonica Founder to Lead Concert Here Sunday

CARLOS CHAVEZ

Carlos Chavez, founder and conductor of the Orquesta Sinfonica de Mexico, remarked last night that Mexico is a country where "music is in the air."

The dark-haired musician was resting at the Mayflower Hotel after rehearsing with the National Symphony Orchestra, which he is to conduct in Constitutional Hall Sunday at 4 p. m. He was heard once before in Washington, when he conducted a small orchestra in the Coolidge Festival in 1937.

In Mexico everyone loves music, and there is always someone in the street playing a guitar or violin or simply singing, Chavez said. There are "lots of little orchestras," not only in the cities but in small country towns and villages.

When the Orquesta Sinfonica was founded, in 1929, Chavez wanted to reach not only the "paying public" but those others whose love for music is as great but whose pocketbooks are smaller. Backed by a Government subsidy he began giving free concerts in an amusement park in Mexico City at the end of the regular season.

These have become a feature of the Capital's life, and tickets for them are now distributed through trade unions and by business houses to their employes.

"The audiences are fresh and unprejudiced," Chavez said. "They like Stravinsky's Petrouchka better than the Beethoven symphonies and they show it right away in their applause."

Mexican music is influenced by a double tradition, Spanish and Indian, according to Chavez. Church music had a strong influence in the colonial days. The Indian tradition supplies little of the melodic material for modern Mexican composers, but it "feeds their imagination and influences their taste."

Mexican music has had little international fame in the past, but today there are four or five young men in Mexico City who are "very promising," Chavez thinks. A number of his own works are known in this country, particularly the ballet "H. P.," which was first produced by Leopold Stokowski and the Philadelphia Orchestra in 1931. The Mexican artist Diego Rivera designed the scenery on that occasion.

At Sunday's concert Chavez and the National Symphony Orchestra will play a Chaconne for Organ by Buxtehude, which Chavez arranged for orchestra; de Falla's "Three Cornered Hat;" Debussy's "La Mer;" the "Bear" symphony by Haydn and Beethoven's "Coriolanus" overture.

James Reports the Folks Okay; They Taxi While Drivers Dance

Chauffeurs Hold 16th Annual Affair, Hint of Choice Gossip From the Back Seat But Maintain a Very Professional Silence

The boys climbed out from behind their wheels last night to have a little fun at the Hotel Raleigh. The occasion was the sixteenth annual dance of the Private Chauffeurs Benevolent Association attended by nearly 700 persons.

They intimated that they'd heard more gossip and interesting stories from the respectability of the rear seats of the autos they drive than you could put in a book. But it was all "off the record" and they refused to tell anything. Those of the 100-odd members of the association who cared to talk thought the people they drive for are "okay."

Paul V. McNutt's chauffeur, Frank P. Dudley, summed up their attitude when he said, "I don't know anything bad about Mr. McNutt."

Dudley pointed out that he was a Government driver and not a member of the association. Members of the organization, as closelipped as Dudley, were interested by only one thing, that was: Because of the dance most of the officials attending the Army-Navy reception at the White House went by taxi last night.

"Which shows you that folks are okay," said a chauffeur. "They didn't have to let their drivers off tonight, but they did."

Some of the men who have driven prominent people included John Bell, formerly a driver for Mrs. George Vanderbilt; George Donovan, chauffeur for Speaker Bankhead; Charles N. Black, for Representative Frank H. Buck, of California; Thomas Kilduff, for Representative Allen T. Treadway, of Massachusetts; Clarence E. Chamberlain, for Jesse Jones; John F. Simuro, for Duncan Phillips, director of the Phillips Art Gallery; Stanley Rowe, for retired Justice Sutherland.

Tuffy Leemans, G. W. U. alumnus and football star, will conduct the tapping ceremony. Allison Street HealthSchool Closes Today

30 Children Who Suffer From Tuberculosis Lose Special Care

Thirty Washington children who are suffering from a primary tuberculosis infection will be deprived of special rest and food treatment today with the closing of the Allison Street Health School.

The school will be remodeled and opened later for crippled children. The 30 children, who have been undergoing the special treatment from five months to seven years, will be sent to regular classes Monday in the schools nearest their homes.

Miss Margaret R. O'Brien, principal of the school since it opened in 1925, told the Post yesterday "these children will miss the extra nourishment and rest and the special schedule when they go into regular schools next week."

85 Per Cent Relief Cases

Eighty-five per cent of her pupils have always been relief cases, she said.

Since 1936 active cases have been sent to the Glenn Dale Sanitoria, Miss O'Brien said that between 7 and 11 Allison pupils were transferred to Glenn Dale immediately in 1936. Since that time the number of her charges to be sent there has risen to about 20.

"Allison," she said, "has been a sort of feeding school since that time. In most cases our treatment strengthened the child sufficiently for him to go back to regular classes. Others have had to go to the sanitorium."

Ruhland Doubts Need

The move to eliminate Allison School began in 1936, when half of the 120 pupils were released as cured and few additions were sent to take their place. Each succeeding year fewer new pupils were sent. In September, 1939, only two new children were added.

District Health Officer Ruhland said last night that "there is no need for this special school."

"The cases," he said, "that really require institutional care go to Glenn Dale. The Allison school children are not any serious risk."

He said that they represent only a "small segment" of those who show a positive reaction to the tuberculin test. Dr. Joseph A. Murphy, chief medical inspector, said that 30 per cent of the children tested possess tuberculosis in this primary stage.

Both physicians said undernourishment and lack of sufficient rest are important factors in the development of the infection to the active stage.

Children Are Examined

"There are plenty of other children who are undernourished, however," Dr. Ruhland said. "Although an attempt has been made to choose for Allison those children in poorest condition, the selection has necessarily been quite arbitrary."

Dr. Murphy said that the 30 Allison pupils have been examined by the Tuberculosis Clinic. About half, he predicted, will be brought back for further examination. If the disease has progressed to the active stage, they will be sent to Glenn Dale.

Laughter was once a life-saver for Captain White. Traveling among the tribes of Abyssinia, his safety depended on winning their good will. These warriors usually greet strangers with spears rather than cheers. They are among the fiercest-looking people in the world because they consider laughing a sign of weakness. Captain White had with him an old Victrola and a record which was nothing more than a continuous stream of laughter. One day a group of these tribesmen visited Captain White's tent. It looked like trouble. Suddenly the sounds of this record were heard. The Abyssinians tried to discover a little man whom they supposed was inside the Victrola. On their puzzled faces, smiles began to appear and before long they were rolling on the ground with mirth. That day Captain White proved good fellowship swiftly follows good cheer! White Horse has proved this over and over again. When folks gather to enjoy a round of White Horse and soda, good cheer is always near. For the quality and flavor of this famous Scotch keep winning friends forever. Your favorite bar or package store can introduce you to the pleasure and enjoyment of White Horse. St. John's Beats Gonzaga, 28-27, in Overtime

The Washington Post Sports

22 WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1940 X*

Hathaway's Free Throw Breaks Tie

Mulvihill Had Saved Game on Foul Shots; 3,000 Watch Rivals In Brilliant Struggle

By Bill Burnett

A finish rivaling any in the last 20 years of St. John's and Gonzaga's basketball warfare was put on the first 1940 engagement between the Catholic Prep fives last night at Tech gym, as Dick Hathaway, Johnnie guard, successfully converted a foul shot for a 28-27 victory.

Hathaway's critical point, coming three seconds before the end of the first three-minute overtime, wound up a thrilling battle marked by almost every conceivable exciting angle of the cage game. More than 3,000 fans, the second largest of the season, saw the clash which might have been won by either team until the final gun.

St. John's victory was doubly sweet in that it was accomplished without its star scorer, Frank Cody, and with his substitute, little Larry O'Brien, forced out of the game with what was thought to be a fractured hand. O'Brien was taken to Providence for a preliminary examination, and will return today for X-rays.

Cady Expelled

Responsible for Cady's absence when the game-winning point was registered was an act termed by officials as "unsportsmanlike conduct." The husky forward, with 80 seconds of the regular game left and his team enjoying a 27-25 lead, tangled with the Purple's Lane O'Donnell, threw a few punches and was immediately waved out of action. His roughness, however, gave Gonzaga its chance to knot the score.

Freddy Rice, Gonzaga forward, made good on the technical called on Cady and Lane O'Donnell, center, chalked up a point on the personal to make it 27-27.

With 18 seconds still left, Joe Corrado, leader in St. John's scoring attack, missed a foul shot that might have saved the effort of an overtime.

After a brief rest the clubs went at it again. The most disheartening play of the night took place immediately afterward, when Bobby Mulvihill, hurling from center court, saw the ball roll wearily

Proof of the earnestness of players in last night's St. John's-Gonzaga battle at Tech gym is contained in this exciting action shot in the final period. Georgetown Guard Gets 12 Points; Orange Center Dumps in 23

By the Associated Press

Syracuse, N. Y., Feb. 1.—Paul Kartluke's sensational one-man scoring show spelled defeat here tonight for Georgetown as Syracuse took a 38-to-33 verdict.

The 6-foot 3-inch Orange star netted 23 points, 16 in Syracuse's second half rally when the home forces overcame a 16-to-15 deficit at halftime with a sudden pickup in form and speed.

The Hoyas, making their annual appearance in Archbold gym after a gruelling 1-point win over Army yesterday, set a hot pace in the first half, running their advantage to six points at one time before Syracuse cut it down in the final minutes.

Georgetown's tempo appeared slower after the intermission while Syracuse continued its new-found habit of rallying in the stretch. Kartluke, operating from a pivot under the basket, tossed in three quick baskets, with Stan Kruszewski adding another in the first three minutes to give the Orange a 23-to-17 advantage.

Coming back on baskets by Buddy O'Grady, Al Lujack and a pair by George Pajak, Georgetown made what turned out to be its final effort, going in front, 25 to 24. Here the brilliant Kartluke cut loose again for 6 points, and Syracuse was in front to stay.

Syracuse tried stalling tactics in the final minutes with a 28-to-29 lead, which Pajak and Jim Giebel broke up with two long shots, but time ran out on the visitors' final surge.

Pajak was Georgetown's high scorer with 12 points while O'Grady netted 6. Irving Razzi came up with 5 in the first half but went scoreless in the final 20 minutes of play.

Georgetown moves to Albany tomorrow to meet Colgate in the final of its three-game New York State invasion.

This Morning

Without Shirley Povich

While Shirley Povich is on vacation his column will be written by members of the sports staff.

By Anne Hagner.

Once somebody said that at these horse show affairs, it's much more fun to watch the spectators than the horses, for wherever the so-called "horsey set" meets, there is likely to be the oddest collection of humanity ever gathered together in one place. Personally, we don't think they're half as entertaining as the race fans at Marlboro of a summer's afternoon, but we present herewith a description of the various types that might be found hanging on the rail at almost any show.

Anne Hagner.

The weather-beaten veteran: He wears the finest riding clothes that can be made and they have reached just the right degree of shabbiness. Clustered around him are three or four youngsters and another past-master of horse lore, with whom he can swap a few hunting experiences for the edification of anyone who will listen. If you doubt the truth of some of his taller stories, don't say a word; you'll be telling the same tales yourself in twenty years.

The up-and-coming young rider: His clothes are absolutely correct in every detail but they're a little newer than his elderly compatriot's. When he's around experts he does very little talking and a lot of listening, but when his audience is made up of those who know less about horses than himself, he takes advantage of the situation. He reads all the horsey publications and worries considerably about why the chestnut colt stopped with him on the third fence.

The ardent spectator: She rides on an average of once a year but she likes the people who frequent the shows and her picture looks well on the society page. She wouldn't miss rail-hanging for a date with Tyrone Power and her conversation is liberally sprinkled with withers, hocks, way of going, and such, although it is very likely that she wouldn't know a fetlock from a Yale lock.

This One Attends Only the Important Shows

The occasional spectator: He always attends the important shows and he knows a couple of the exhibitors and their horses by name. He doesn't understand about conformation judging but in open jumping classes his program is full of notes about each performance. His girl, who accompanies him once in a while, thinks he is an expert and likes to tell her friends about her brief fling with the horsey set.

The veddy, veddy social young lady: She's plenty disgusted with selling cigarettes for a quarter (for charity, of course!) to all these impossible people and she winds up sitting in the grandstand with her back to the ring, telling a couple of friends how boring the whole thing is. She wouldn't watch those silly horses for anything in the world, but she's glad she wore her tweed suit when a photographer asks her to pose, leaning on the rail with her eyes glued on the first fence.

The man who thought they gave door prizes: He was just driving around with nothing better to do, so when he saw the show he decided to go in and see what was up. Sadly enough, he doesn't see anybody he knows and he doesn't understand what's going on, so in half an hour he's ready to leave, only to find that his car is blocked by the autos of more enthusiastic onlookers. By the time he gets out of that mess he's had his fill of horse shows for the rest of his life.

Walter Haight, with no races to go to: He hears the patter of little hooves so he barges in, thinking that perhaps a couple of horses will chase each other and make him feel at home. He thinks the jumping is good, but not half as good as the steeplechases at Laurel, and he finds a couple of Bowie recruits with whom to trade yarns the rest of the afternoon.

Allergic to Horses, She Sneezes Violently

The sweet young thing: She's allergic to horses and sneezes violently whenever she gets within 50 yards of them, but the rest of the gang wanted to attend so she couldn't be a killjoy. She hasn't the faintest notion about what's going on so she plies her friends with questions about why that pretty little white horse doesn't want to jump the fence with the trees sticking out of the top. Her high heels hurt her feet and she thinks all these odd people in tweeds look terribly silly.

The child exhibitor: He's been riding ponies ever since he can remember and he loves his pony better than all the toys in the world. His family is mighty proud of the kid's winnings and they spoil him more than somewhat, but the older boys around the shows knock it out of him. He takes a lot of kidding and he's invariably a much better sport than the adult exhibitors. He grows so fast that his jodhpurs have a tough time keeping up with him.

The big exhibitor's wife: She knows naught of the sport except that Harold's horses either win a class or are robbed; with her there is no in-between. She wears expensive tweeds and is surrounded by two Dalmatians, a Pekinese, and three admiring friends. She just can't tell one of Harold's horses from the other, they all look so much alike, but she can't stand to see them win anything but blue ribbons. The committee always requests her to present trophies, which she does charmingly.

The stable-boy: The horse he grooms and exercises is always the best horse on the grounds, and if he by some quirk of fate fails to win, there is the most plausible excuse in the world for the loss. The lad refers to his pride and joy by some nickname like "the big bay" or "Half-Pint" or "that little colt," and heaven help any judge that doesn't pin him on top. The stable-boy is always in a good humor, always ready to show off his string of horses, always full of gossip, and always broke, usually as a result of the crap game in back of the stables the night before. He always has much more fun showing than his employer, and the troubles of the world pass him by.

Wilson Five Wins, 36-24, Over Landon

Presidents Cling to Early Lead; Baker Bentley Lead Scorers

Woodrow Wilson High obtained an early lead and managed to hold it throughout the rest of the game to defeat Landon School, 36 to 24, yesterday on the loser's court.

The result of the game was never in doubt after the first few minutes of play as Jordan Bentley and Bart Fugler set the Wilson scoring machine in action to acquire an 11-6 lead at the end of the first quarter and from here on it was merely a question of how large Wilson's margin would be.

Experience, or more specifically, the lack of it, proved Landon's downfall.

Baker Outstanding

Landon produced the outstanding player of the day in Paul Baker, a 6-footer, who divided the cords for 14 points and was the hub of Landon's plays. Baker, tallest man on the floor, used his height to advantage throughout the game by retrieving erratic shots off the background, and generally proving himself a menace to Wilson.

Playing the entire game with only five men, Landon's zone defense proved puzzling to the Presidents only in the early minutes of play, but Wilson's fast-breaking offense forced the hosts to abandon the zone in favor of a more conservative man-to-man defense.

Mainly through the efforts of young Jordan Bentley, Wilson was presented with a 19-14 lead at the end of the first half. Bentley scored nine points in the first half and added two more to his total shortly after the opening of the third period before he was removed by Coach Tony Kupka.

MacDonald Stars

Although he was not included in the day's top scoring honors, little "Mokie" MacDonald played an inspiring floor game for the winners. Besides this he scored eight points, but his main contribution took the form of intercepting alien passes and setting up scoring plays.

Still another of Wilson's satellites was Bart Fugler, a sturdy forward, who scored nine points but was "robbed" of several more.

Baker's 14 points topped the individual scoring column, while Bentley's 11 was high for the losers.

Misses Berg And Jameson In Golf Final

Patty Cards Record 35, Wins 5 and 4 From Marion Miley

By the Associated Press

Coral Gables, Fla., Feb. 1.—Strictly on schedule, Betty Jameson, of San Antonio, and Patty Berg, of Minneapolis, today won their way to the finals of the annual Miami Biltmore Women's Golf championship.

Patty, in the midst of one of her brilliant streaks, shot a record 35 on the outward nine in beating Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., 5 and 4. Though she was playing with a pair of blistered feet, the defending champion was six under women's par when the match ended on the fourteenth.

Miss Jameson, the National Women's champion, was never behind as she defeated Shirley Ann Johnson, of Winnetka, Ill., 3 and 2. She had a 39 going out and only matched women's par for seven holes of the back stretch, but that was sufficient to beat Shirley Ann, who was a surprise semi-finalist.

Tomorrow's 36-hole final will mark the third meeting of the two girls who generally are regarded as the best in the country. Each holds a decision. Betty beat Patty in the finals of the 1937 TransMissippi, 5 and 3, but Miss Berg was the winner, 3 and 2, when they met the next year at St. Augustine.

Miss Miley looked slightly dazed when she finished the first nine of today's match 4 down because she had shot a commendable 40, even women's par. Her score would have been good enough ordinarily, but against Patty it was futile.

Starting with a 4 on the 500-yard first hole, the little redhead burned her shots up to the pins like a male amateur. Where Miley was using woods for her second shots, Patty used her irons, and mostly they rode the flag. Her fine 35, best ever shot by a woman on the out nine, was marred by only one poor shot, a hooked drive into the woods on the 420-yard sixth, where she took a 5.

There was never much doubt of the outcome of the other match. Shirley Ann was a vision in white and as pretty as the sunshine, but her game lacked the stability of the husky girl from San Antonio.

Today's was, incidentally, the twenty-fourth consecutive victory scored by Patty in this tournament since she began winning it in 1936. She was a favorite to make it 25 tomorrow.

Landis' Ruling Threat To Baseball—McPhail

Dodgers' President Tells Boston Baseball Writers Abolitionist John Brown Was 'Bush Leaguer' Compared to Commissioner

By the Associated Press

Boston, Feb. 1.—Larry MacPhail, president of the Brooklyn Dodgers, reviewing Kenesaw Mountain Landis' recent farm system edict, tonight rated John Brown, the great abolitionist, "a bush leaguer" in comparison to the high commissioner of baseball.

Asserting Brown had to raid Harpers Ferry to free a few slaves, MacPhail told the annual Baseball writers' dinner that Judge Landis struck the shackels off 90-odd baseball serfs with a stroke of his pen and followed up with a 7-point manifesto that wiped out 9 farm systems and about 100 working agreements.

"I have telegrams from the presidents of 15 minor leagues that indicate that there is grave doubt whether they can operate unless the commissioner's recent bulletin is modified," MacPhail said in a prepared address.

"Unfortunately, the present situation is one of seemingly hopeless confusion. And if something isn't done about it in a hurry, the minors may be injured and years required to repair the damage."

"If baseball is to be dominated and controlled by any selfish group," MacPhail said, "it won't be long before professional football or some other sport will succeed as the great national game, and that none of us want.

"In the matter of Judge Landis versus the farm system, he sits as prosecutor, judge and jury, and there is no appeal.

"Either he is dealing out justice or he is engaging in 'witch hunts' in which the innocent will burn along with the guilty," MacPhail said.

"The commissioner has submitted a plan to subsidize the minors and preserve fair competition by preventing the control of players at the source of supply.

"In a nutshell, it would abolish all farm systems, working agreements and options, set up a universal draft and prevent all clubs from acquiring players beyond their immediate needs, thereby making the supply as easily available to the Browns as to the Yankees."

Asserting "every operator in baseball from Connie Mack down has been unknowingly guilty at some time or other of violations of baseball rules or interpretations," McPhail added

"But I firmly believe that they and the great majority in baseball have the same respect for the tradition of the game and its preservation as have the executive officials who have safeguarded the sport for many years.

"I am going to continue to believe that executive officials should enforce rules as they are written, that interpretations should not change the intent of the rules passed by the proper legislative bodies. The clubs in baseball cannot operate successfully when the owners do not know what the rules are or what they are going to be."

Bettina's Manager Fearful Of Being 'Robbed' Tonight

Will Demand Legislative Investigation Of Commission If He Finds 'Anything Screwy'

By the United Press

New York, Feb. 1.—Jimmy Grippo, the professional magician who manages Melio Bettina, declared today that he would demand a legislative investigation of the New York Boxing Commission if he discovers "anything screwy" about tomorrow night's return Bettina-Fred Apostoli bout at Madison Square Garden.

After the first clash between Bettina, former light-heavyweight king, and Apostoli, former middleweight champion, at the Garden on January 5, Grippo shouted "we wuz robbed!" so loudly that the commission suspended him for 60 days. The suspension goes into effect tomorrow.

At the weigh-in tomorrow Grippo will ask John J. Phelan, commission chairman, to omit the names of two referees from the list of those eligible to officiate at the fight. Grippo objects to either of them being in the ring tomorrow night. If either officiates, there will be trouble, Jimmy promises.

Boxing writers and ring-siders hope that there will be no trouble. After the first Apostoli-Bettina melee, the decision in Apostoli's favor did not meet with general approval, particularly among those galleryites from Bettina's home town, Beacon, N. Y. Bottles were thrown down at the ring and one ringsider was struck on the head and seriously injured.

The January 5 bout was over the 12-round route. Most boxing writers had Bettina leading in rounds won when the final gong sounded, but the referee had taken a few rounds away from Bettina for holding. Only the referee and the two judges knew of those penalties. Hence the dissatisfaction over the decisions.

Appotoli is the 6-to-5 favorite to win tomorrow night, despite his bad beating in the early sessions of their initial conflict. Frisco Fred was floored three times in the first three rounds, but he improved in the later going and had Bettina on the canvas in the tenth. He seemed fresher than Bettina in the closing heats.

Tomorrow night's engagement is slated for 15 rounds. The longer distance is expected to be to Apostoli's advantage.

The winner will challenge for the light-heavy crown against the February 23 winner at Miami between Champion Billy Conn and Gus Lesnevich.

Arena Bouts Moved Back To Tuesday

The weekly boxing card originally scheduled for Monday night at Turner's Arena has been moved back to Tuesday as Natie Brown, principal in the heavyweight bout with Mickey McAvoy, is on the local committee to discuss Jewish relief in a meeting Monday night at the Mayflower Hotel.

Brown asked Promoter Ahearn to transfer the bout to Tuesday so he could meet the B'nai B'rith members in their drive to aid the Jewish refugees.

A change in one of the three 8-round bouts will be made today as Joey Spangler, of Richmond, was forced to withdraw as an opponent of Eddie Finazzo due to an injured hand suffered in a bout with Bob Wilson. A new opponent for Finazzo will be signed today.

Phil Furr, also on the card where he will meet Irish Davy Devlin, worked out yesterday. Brown, the other member of the comeback duo on the all-star card, also went through his daily grind.

Seabiscuit, Kayak Workout in Rain At Santa Anita

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Feb. 1.—Seabiscuit and Kayak, C. S. Howard's two big threats for the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, worked a flat mile in a torrential downpour today, the 'Biscuit coming home far ahead of his younger stable mate. Kayak is the winter book favorite to win the March 2 handicap.

Seabiscuit was clocked in 1:42, and in covering the oval went around the "dogs," sawhorses spaced along the rail to keep horses in workouts from cutting up the inside racing strip. Kayak's time was 1:42 4-5.

Clockers said the 'Biscuit, had he kept to the rail, could have done 1:40 or better. This despite the belief the former handicap champion disliked heavy going.

At Ashland, Va., basketball between American University and Randolph-Macon.

At Charlottesville, basketball between Virginia and George Washington.

At New York City, basketball between Catholic University and Fordham, and Millrose games in which Georgetown and Maryland have entered relay teams.

At Elizabethtown, Pa., basketball between Gallaudet College and Elizabethtown Teachers College.

Two Varsity Games Today

Today's program lists a pair of varsity basketball games, both on foreign courts. Georgetown concludes its three-day trip in upper New York State by meeting Colgate, while Gallaudet opens a two-day trip into Pennsylvania by tackling Susquehanna University. Meanwhile, the G. U. Frosh play host to St. Basil's High School of Stamford, Conn., in a 2 o'clock game.

Charley Reynolds, veteran local referee, was yesterday appointed to work the C. U.-Columbus boxing. Reynolds was the mutual choice of Coaches Eddie LaFond, of C. U., and Jim McNamara, of Columbus.

The Cardinal ringmen, heavy favorites to deal the Explorers their second straight defeat, took things easy yesterday as Coach LaFond gave four of his scrappers a day of complete rest. Joe Bunsa, Fred Stant, Jay Turner and Gerry Strang received the welcome vacation because all appeared in the pink of condition and LaFond was taking no chances of them becoming stale.

Although the Maryland mittenpushers will be underdogs to Virginia's powerful squad, which has allowed its opposition only 2½ points in two matches, the Terps have high hopes of recording a clean sweep of the double-header. The basketball team, though beaten in three of four games on their recent invasion of the South, will be a decided favorite over Johns Hopkins.

Colonials Favorites

George Washington's five, with the strain of studies lifted by the completion of midterm exams yesterday, expect to meet stiff competition in Virginia, but the Colonials will be favored to rebound sharply from their upset by Army. The Cavaliers, to date, have whipped Navy, V. M. I., V. P. I., and William and Mary in compiling one of their best half-season records in recent years.

Probable lineups for the sixth annual boxing meet between Maryland and Virginia, with Terp mentioned first: 120 pounds, Johnny Harn vs. Joe Black; 127 pounds, Bob Bradley vs. Arthur Lipkint; 135 pounds, Nathan Askin vs. Peter Coy; 145 pounds, Izzy Alperstein vs. Dick Williams; 155 pounds, Norman Hathaway vs. Truman Southall; 165 pounds, Newton Cox vs. Fenton Somerville; 175 pounds, Josh Hughes vs. Kenneth Rathbun; heavyweight, Izzy Leites vs. Ed Burgess.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Feb. 1.—One of the things Jock Sutherland wants to work out, to his own satisfaction, before he begins the actual coaching of the Brooklyn Dodgers' football team, is the little matter of spirit. He's not sure that man's incorrigible love of dough can quite take the place of the zeal engendered in the breasts of collegians.

CONSIDINE

"There's something miraculous about the thing called college spirit," he mused after the luncheon which celebrated his entry into the professional field. "And comparatively little of it comes from the coach. It's something that comes from living on a campus, being a part of a tight little community, sensing that if he fails he is letting down his friends, his classmates, his fraternity."

He likes Steve Owens' idea of keeping the pro players together as much as possible. Most of Steve's Giants live in an uptown hotel, have their meals together, observe the same curfew and fuse their interests. He wants to look thoroughly, too, into Ray Flaherty's system of bonuses-through-fines. Flaherty has a series of small fines, for being late for practice, for fumbling and other misdemeanors. The money goes into a pot, and after each game a committee of players, and Flaherty, votes it to the player who played the hardest or did his team the most good during the game.

Pro Players Nowadays Put More Into Game

Sutherland hasn't seen much professional football. He didn't see the Dodgers play last year, but saw them the year before. But what games he did see this past season—the Redskin-Giants game and the Giants-Green Bay playoff—convinced him professional players can develop a fervid fury that may not be college spirit but will more than do until it comes along.

"To my mind the great change in professional football is in the sincerity of the players." Sutherland said. "I was a pro player, played two games at the end of 1919 for the Massillon Tigers. Thorpe beat us in one of the games with a 63-yard field goal—terrific wind behind him—but, I just don't know how to express it. All I know is that many more pro players today are playing all the football that is in them, all the time, than were in those days! There's no comparison about the organization of the pro game now, and then. It's simply bigger and better from the bottom up."

Sutherland thinks that one of his major reliefs in pro ball will be a surcease from future worry over the scholastic grades of his important players. He isn't worrying about a "system." He plans to coach them in the rugged fundamentals in which he is a master, then build plays around the individual talents of his backs and ends. During his long period of leisure he had serious offers from five colleges, and came as close to going to yale as to any of them.

Joe Louis Offered Old Job Back

Here's a Joe Louis story I hadn't heard before. Julian Black, one of his managers, told us. Just about the time when Louis fought Bob Pastor in Detroit last fall the Ford Motor Co., where Joe used to be a $25-a-week laborer, began rehiring men. The company gives preference to those who at one time worked for it. During rehiring waves, and in a routine way it sent notice to Joe Louis Barrow that he could come back at his old wage.

The notice bounced around several of his old addresses and Louis got it the day he was paid $127,888.17 for 31 minutes of boxing with Bob Pastor.

Incidentally, Louis has bought a 487-acre farm near Utica, Mich., and plans to become a farmer when they tell him that it will be all right to stop fighting. He'll raise cattle and outfit the place with a skeet layout, a swimming pool and a riding academy. He thinks that it will make money for him.

That was nice of Bucky Walters the other night to take the blame for Ernie Lombardi's so-called "boner" in the last World Series. Walters explained that on the play in question he, Bucky, tried to protect third base when he should have been backing up the stunned Lombardi at home plate. As we say, that was nice. But it's a heluva time to be admitting it, after Lombardi has absorbed four months of reasonless abuse, has become a kind of overstuffed composite of Snodgrass, Merkle, Zimmerman and Riegels, and has been threatened with a $6,000 pay cut.

Cox Disqualified in Match As Bortnick Awards Casey Bout

Referee Thrown Out of Ring by Joe Cox in Wild Melee at Turner's Arena Last Night

Joe Cox, a rassling man, got mad at Referee Bennie Bortnick in the feature bout with Steve "Crusher" Casey at Turner's Arena last night. Bortnick lost his shirt, was thrown hither and thither and finally out of the ring by Bro. Cox. But valiant Bortnick climbed back in again and disqualified his tormentor after 19 minutes of the alleged bout.

During the hectic business Bro. Casey also met with some trouble when Bro. Cox tossed him into the lap of a ringside customer who decided that then was a good time to start rasslin' too. The unidentified fan put a neat waist-hold on poor Bro. Cox and it took the usual flock of cops and onlooking rasslers to pacify the crowd of 1,300.

Bro. Casey put an arm lock on his tax-paying adversary and finally climbed back into the ring to resume the more prosaic tussling with Bro. Cox which finally ended in the above-mentioned disqualification. Casey, although the winner, was limping badly after the match.

In the semifinal bout Tommy O'Toole defeated Jim Austerix with a stiff right to the jaw and a half-cradle hold. Don Evans won over Lou Plummer after the latter was disqualified for disobeying the referee's orders. Lou protested bitterly but Casey Berger, the referee, refused to change his decision. Alan Eustace, using his famous arm lock, defeated Jack Russell in 17½ minutes. In the opening bout Don McIntyre defeated Angelo Leone in 12 minutes.

Feeding Saved Thousands of Wild Birds

Silver Spring Chapter Hears Report; More Funds Raised at Meeting

Losses to wild bird life in this section was believed to have been comparatively low, it was reported at last night's meeting of the Silver Spring Chapter of the Izaak Walton League held in the Montgomery-Blair High School gymnasium. The U. S. Bureau of Biological Survey, aided by the Izaak Walton League, supplied tons of feed for ducks, swan, geese and other species of birds during the freezing period which has been broken.

More than 500 persons attended the session presided over by George B. Kissinger, president of the chapter. Senator George L. Radcliffe, Congressman William D. Byron, Dr. Lewis Radcliffe, vice president of the Izaak Walton League of America; and William B. Holton, national director of the wild life group, were speakers. Movies were shown.

A report on the weather as well as the Wild Life Feeding Campaign was given.

"While the coming of warmer weather has relieved the situation somewhat," said President Kissinger, "a new freeze will make for another emergency."

Additional funds to feed wild life were raised. It was brought out that more than 10,000 birds were being fed at three of the many stations scattered throughout the tidewater section. Upland birds were believed to have weathered the cold in good style.

Confucius Say: 'Man Starts Out to Have Fun In Horse Game Sometimes Find Grief, Too'

Time, Sense of Humor In Mr. Mott's Favor as He Tells of 'James A.'

By Walter Haight

"Are you having any fun?" asks the popular song. "Yes, and then again, no," answers Thomas T. Mott. It is "to have a little fun" that Mott owns, rides and makes pets of horses. However, he has discovered, in the last year and a half, that a person who sets out "to have a little fun" may, through causes beyond his control, also gather a little grief.

If you had asked Mott, prior to August, 1938, the definition of a "ringer," his answer probably would have been that it was either a horseshoe-pitching term or something used in the laundry. Just mention "ringer" today and Mott knows, very definitely, that you are referring to a horse that has been raced in the name of another horse. In fact, if "ringer" is said loud enough within Mott's hearing range he is apt to look around to see if he is followed.

However, it is not as bad as it once was. After 18 months, and thanks to a good sense of humor, Mott is getting so that he can laugh it off. But there was a time when he jumped every time he heard church bells or the phone. I understand that the Mott household was so jittery once that there was a move on hand to try to get the telephone company to eliminate the bell and substitute a loud speaker or something that would say, "Mr. Mott, there's someone on your phone."

While Mott's business is autos, he is of the opinion that the horse is here to stay. Despite his recent experiences, he is still as horsey as ever and bemoans the fact that fox hunting has been erased by snow for the past three weeks.

Mott's horse troubles began when he acquired a horse he thought was named James A in part payment for a debt. Now James A was not an ordinary horse. He had surprised by whipping a $5,000 field at Delaware Park. Mott was surprised, too, when the horse was offered to him. In fact, he did not accept the horse until Jervis Spencer, head of the Maryland racing commission, had o. k.'d the deal.

In the meanwhile, racing biggies, after an investigation, came to the conclusion that the horse wasn't James A. at all, but Pretty Pal. Now the horse James A. had won an important stake and had left up the race track some of the best horses in this section.

The Plot Thickens

So when Mott shipped James A. or Pretty Pal to Havre de Grace, the track superintendent said, "You will have to take this horse off the grounds."

This was the first of a series of "rewards" that came Mott's way for wanting "to have a little fun."

"I was going over to the stable one day and two men walked behind me. I didn't pay a whole lot of attention to them until they stopped as I did right in front of our stalls," said Mott. "I thought they had come to buy a horse and I told them that none of mine were for sale. They turned out to be stewards who had come to examine James A."

From that time on, Mott often had the feeling that men were following him. In fact, he says that men, whom he had reason to believe were detectives, began snooping around his home. "At one stage, it got so bad," said Mott, "that whenever a stranger came up and asked the direction to a certain street or house number, I just led him out to the stable beside the house, opened the half door to James A.'s stall and said, 'There he is, friend. He's either James A. or Pretty Pal. Take your choice.'"

"I ran into about the same thing around the race tracks. Remember the 9-year-old show horse I had named The Hour? Well, he won a race one day and darned if some of the officials didn't come around to the stable to make sure it wasn't James A.," continued Mott.

"It was getting late in 1938 and I had planned to make a jumper out of the horse, so I went back to Mr.

St. Benedict's Coach Swaps Jobs With Assistant

Atchison, Kans., Feb. 1 (AP).—The head coach and assistant coach at St. Benedict's College swapped jobs today.

Don Elser, assistant coach the past three years, became head coach and athletic director, the position held by Marty Peters since 1937. Peters became assistant coach.

School officials said both men had signed new one-year contracts.

The Rev. Florian Demmer, chairman of the athletic council, said the change was made "to bring about a closer tieup between the intercollegiate and the intradmural athletics."

The Thrush, Laurel-Owned, Drives to Half-Length Victory

5-Year-Old Wins Third Race of Year

Floragina Is Second, Flying Up Third in Seven-Furlong Test; Flinchum Gets Double

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 1.—Today's program lacked a feature contest, but most of the interest centered in the running of the Sanford Purse, a 7-furlong event for platers of the $4,000 top and $3,000 bottom variety, which occupied sixth place on the card. A rousing finish saw The Thrush, representing W. J. Susini, of Laurel, Md., driving to a half-length victory over E. C. Roth's Floragina, favorite in the field of 10. Townsend B. Martin's Flying Up was third, three lengths behind.

The Thrush completed his journey in 1:23 4-5 under the veteran Wayne Wright. His backers collected $12.50 for $2. The 5-year-old gelding has started six times this year, all at this track, and has scored on three occasions. He has a winning streak started with two straight.

Floragina, Roar and Doubt Not set out to make the pace, the trio racing closely aligned in the order named for a half mile. Doubt Not was the first to crack. The Thrush, which Wright had kept well up, spurted after the two leaders in the final quarter mile. He collared Floragina in the last few strides to win going away. Floragina easily staved off Flying Up. Roar stopped to fifth place.

Apprentice Jack Flinchum, who previously had scored with Dodger, earned a double and drew up to within two winners of the pace-making older rider, Eddie Arcaro—who at present is one of the numerous "flu" victims here—in the seventh race of a mile and a furlong.

HIGH ARCH moved up boldly on the inside leaving the backstretch, took command at the furlong pole and held his position safe. STEEP, forward contender throughout, finished gamely to punishment and outlasted PARI-LEROY. The latter came through on the inside and would have been second in another stride. PARI-ERNEST had no excuses.

BOSS HOSS broke fast, but stumbled first few strides and dropped back, was sent around the field after leaving the backstretch and won going away after a mild stretch drive. WOODVALE LASS, racing greenly, moved into contention rapidly while saving ground rounding the turn, but faltered slightly through the stretch. ATHELHILDA showed the most speed and outgamed OFFICE HOUR. The latter, prominent throughout and had no excuses.

FLORAGINA, used up in the drive, was no match for the winner when challenged. FLYING UP went into contention with a rush rounding the turn, but could not keep pace with the leaders. BOOTLESS closed a big gap.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start poor. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:04½. Off at once. Winner, Lewin Stable's ch. m. NARISE swung to the outside entering the stretch, responded courageously to strong pressure to wear the leader down, then outlasted GEN. L. when the real test came. GEN. L. gradually bettered his position, was forced wide turning into the stretch, closed gamely when straightened out and was wearing the winner down. BAILIWICK took command on the stretch turn, but faltered in the final drive.

BLACK DEMON, running in his best form, opened up a winning lead rounding the lower turn and held away the remainder of the trip. CAVE HILL, under light restraint, closed gamely when called upon, but never threatened the leader. SUN APOLLO, permitted to drop back first 5 furlongs, made up a world of ground in the final half mile. GRAND MARIE stopped in the final furlong.

Horses Turn on the Heat in Hialeah Stretch Run

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Boss Hoss (No. 5) was the winner of the fourth race yesterday. Woodvale Lass (against rail) came in second while Athelhilda (No. 8) was third. Office Hour (No. 6) was fourth. Jockey F. H. Smith put up a good job of handling the winner

Dear Al:

Some jockeys have outstanding success with 2-year-old mounts. Then again there are star riders who are poison when they try to ride juveniles. Racing in Florida this year has brought out the fact that Earl Steffen is tops in piloting the young horses. He won with another yesterday, bringing Blue Lily home ahead of the pack. Lou Schaeffer, now trainer of Challedon and others owned by W. L. Brann, was a cracker-jack when it came to booting the youngsters home. Every time I think of Lou as a jockey, I can picture him coming out of No. 1 position at Bowie in the spring and pushing one home. Despite his ability otherwise, Don Meade is regarded only a fair rider of 2-year-olds. Sonny Workman is good. Alfred Robertson is better than average, but does his best work on youngsters while starting from an outside post position. The daddy of them all, in my book, was J. McTaggard. If you are a veteran race follower you will remember him booting home thase J. P. Jones juveniles, particularly at Havre de Grace. Willie Obert, Father Time of the active jockeys, is another "boy" who has a way with 2-year-olds. Eddie Ambrose was good in his day despite the fact that he once tossed off one for me, missing a $237 mutuel by a head. I had named a batch of 2-year-olds for E. B. McLean and thus was almost forced to bet $2 on each of them the first time out. I believe Dry Girl (remember her?) was the only one to win at the first asking. Incidentally, Blue Lily, yesterday's juvenile winner, was claimed out of her previous race by Byrum & Croan who placed $3,500 in the box to take her from B. F. Whitaker. She is a bay daughter of Blue Larkspur out of Ship Ablaze and is being touted as a filly who will go far in the turf trade. Confucius say: "One not get in jam playing Jeewell."

BILL.

First race—Chance Cut breaks from the outside for this and thus will avoid possible trouble. Carries top weight of 119 pounds but I'm going to string along. Remote Control is said to be a good one and gets in light. Mental Giant can improve on that last.

Second race—I may be taking a stab at the moon and then again this may turn up to be a good thing. However, I have reason to believe that Cherovan will do some running. Gets in with light weight and will have Flinchum in the saddle. La Joya has worked well. Mordecai will draw plenty of play and is dangerous.

Third race—Travel Agent could be the right one in this field. Looks as if I'm trying to make it "Flinchum Day" because the crack apprentice is slated to do the urging. Naughty has good races in the books and is a threat. Cycle could beat these once.

Fourth race—Little Bolo gets an assignment of 101 pounds for this 7-furlong affair and could get home at fair odds. I'm going to string along. Cantata and Casino Pete to account for the place and show awards.

Fifth race—Domkin has plenty of speed and the clockers have given their O. K. Probably will carry that 120-pound impost to victory. Black Time is stepping up and could surprise. Royal Man for the show.

Sixth race—Pretty Pet seldom runs two alike but will appreciate this route and I'm going to be there if there is a payoff. Memory Book and Latepass are the one-two horses on the cold dope but I'm going to stick with the top one.

Seventh race—Stable appears nicely placed in this field. The 107 pounds appears about right and MikeCaffarella will do the booting. Witheraway and Highminded for the place and show.

Eighth race—Old Maid stepped out and grabbed a purse in a recent outing and could add another in this field with good handling. Myponne should be in the thick of contention. For a shot at the moon, try Royal Cross.

Best bet—Stable.

Eagles Meet Port Colborne Tonight

Washington Choice; Rink Now Heated

Visiting Canadians Have Lost 2 in Row To Eastern Amateur Teams; Match at 8:30

The Washington Eagles will be favored to deal Port Colborne, of Ontario, Canada, its third straight defeat by Eastern Amateur League sextets when they meet at Riverside Stadium tonight at 8:30 o'clock.

The Canadians have had little luck on their Eastern trip, losing to the last-place River Vale Golfers, 4 to 2, and to Baltimore, 3 to 2, in overtime. This victory for the Orioles sent them 2 points ahead of the Eagles in their race for second place, and Washington needs a triumph to again deadlock the runner-up spot to the pacesetting New York Rovers.

With the rink heated for the first time by two giant hot-air blowers, Riverside Stadium officials are predicting one of the largest crowds of the season for tonight's match.

Port Colborne, a member of the fast Senior Ontario Hockey Association, is coached and managed by former New York American star, Bill Holmes, and includes in its roster several of the outstanding amateur players of Canada. Among these are Prince Upper, smart and colorful defense; Earl Laroche, the team's ace scorer; Doug Runions, center, and Bob Morrison, who plays wing or defense.

The Eagles yesterday welcomed the news that Alan Kuntz, star wingman, will be able to rejoin the team late this month when the race will have reached the homestretch stage. Kuntz has been sidelined for several weeks with a broken wrist.

Dewey Has Chance For Scoring Mark

Washington's Hal Dewey, who emerged from a recent slump to supply the shot that gained the Washington Eagles a 6 to 5 victory over the Atlantic City Sea Gulls, is one of five Eastern Amateur Hockey League players who has a good chance to break the Eastern League's all-time scoring record of 75 points.

Dewey, third among the scorers with 57 points, is trailing Ab Collings, of the New York Rovers, who has 73 points, and Murdoy McKay, also of the Rovers, who has 61.

Herbie Foster established the mark of 75 while representing Atlantic City. Collings, with 28 goals and 45 assists is only two points behind that mark with almost two months of competition remaining.

3,000 Watch Johnnies Top Gonzaga, 28-27

Hathaway's Point In Final 3 Seconds Wins Furious Game

around the rim and drop out. It was the 2-pointer that would have won. Franny Counselman, of Gonzaga, a moment later missed a charity toss that would have sent the game into another 3-minute session. Then came Hathaway's point, only his thirty-second, incidentally, in the ten games he's played to date.

When Mulvihill's final point effort went astray the game's most appropriate ending was lost. If anyone deserved to win for either team it was the tow-headed guard, who, besides contributing a pair of points, limited Cady to a mere 6 throughout.

Mulvihill's defensive work where Cady was concerned was the standout of the evening. Cady, who has averaged 14 points a game so far, was throwing wildly and hopelessly at the basket under Mulvihill's eagle-sharp shepherding.

Rice, Corrado High

Though he won scoring honors with 14 points, Freddy Rice was almost the "goat" of the game, for the Purple forward allowed St. John's Joe Corrado a total of 11 points, most of which came at embarrassing moments.

St. John's, after the first 8 minutes, was ahead, 8-4, but Gonzaga bounced back for a 4-point lead of its own in the second period. At halftime the count was even again, 15-15, but the Johnnies had again gone ahead by the end of the third session, 23-19.

Wings Upset Rangers, 2-0, Amid Fights

Leaders Lose Fifth Game of Season; Detroit Goalie Stars

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Feb. 1.—The leading New York Rangers suffered their fifth loss of the National Hockey League season tonight, bowing to the Detroit Red Wings, 2 to 0, in a wild and woolly battle in which tempers boiled over into fisticuffs on frequent occasions.

Before the game the Rangers had won 15 of their last 16 starts but tonight they were checked by the almost miraculous goal tending of Cecil (Tiny) Thompson and by the fast skating of the Detroiters. The win left Detroit in fifth place in the standings.

Americans Rally To Beat Hawks, 5-2

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 1.—The New York Americans went on a four-goal scoring splurge in the third period tonight, with Eddie Shore the spearhead of their attack and defense, to beat the Chicago Black Hawks, 5-2, and consolidate their sixth-place position in the National Hockey League.

The Americans came out for the third period leading 1-0 on Johnny Gagnon's early counter and with Jack Portland finishing a late second period penalty. Before Portland returned, the great Shore, playing his second game for the Americans after 13 seasons with Boston, engineered plays for two rapid-fire goals.

Fun, Grief Found By Mott in Horses

Spencer, of the racing commission. He cleared the horse. But when I attempted to enter him in races, I was refused, so I returned to Mr. Spencer, who said that while the commission could tell tracks what horses they could not run, it could not tell the tracks which horses to run.

"I was assured that if I trained the horse as a steeplechase horse during the winter that the following year I would be able to enter him in Maryland. But during the winter both the Jockey Club and the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association passed a rule to the effect that 'any horse raced under other than his own name is ineligible for life' and so I was unable to race my horse.

"You know that my chief interest always has been in hunting and steeplechasing. However, since I became entangled in this thing I have obtained all the rules on racing and have studied them like a college boy cramming. In fact, I could forget about jumping horses except that my son likes to ride," said Mott.

He disclosed that a friend asked the California commission whether it would o. k. the horse for racing at Santa Anita. The answer was to point at the "racing in other than his own name" rule. However, this has further puzzled Mott because, the horse, Ualino, which everybody knows ran as a "ringer" under the name of Bye Bye Will at Pimlico in 1938, won the eighth race at Santa Anita a few weeks ago.

Despite his experiences with the Maryland Racing Commission, Mott has given his word that he will not sell or give away James A. or Pretty Pal without the O. K. of that body.

"Ever since this thing began, I have waited for someone to bring James A. to light. They say the horse I have is Pretty Pal, but I'm not convinced. You know I wouldn't go through this thing again for a lot of money. However, I wouldn't have missed it for a pretty penny, either," said Mott yesterday. "The horse is hunting now, when we have hunting weather. He likes it, too, and isn't a bad one."

Around the Mott home, the horse is not referred to as either James A. or Pretty Pal. He is called "Sexton." Why? Well, isn't he the "ringer" of the church bells.

Haas Signed as White Sox Coach

Chicago, Feb. 1 (AP).—George (Mule) Haas was signed today as a coach with the Chicago White Sox. Haas was a teammate of Jimmy Dykes, manager of the White Sox, when they played with the Philadelphia Athletics.

Norris, Kelley and Bob Barrett, the last named of the hosts, tied for scoring honors with ten points each.

The Blair Jayvees defeated the Prep Jayvees, 17-13, in a preliminary.

Kann's Takes Big Lead in Pin League

Blanks Credit Bureau To Pull Four Games Ahead of Next Team

The Department Store Bowling League race last night found a team taking a four-game lead for the first time this season as Kann's drew that far ahead of Woodward and Lothrop with a triple triumph over Credit Bureau's last-place team. In other matches at Recreation Cliff Borneman's 357 led The Hecht Co. to a 2-to-1 triumph over Woodward and Lothrop, despite Howard Walker's 362.

Stanley Beall's 152-387 was high for the night as Guy Curran whitewashed Garfinckel's, while Goldenberg's blanked Lansburgh's and Raleigh Haberdasher won two out of three from Jelleff's.

ARCADIA

Peggy Miller took care of the Veteran's Administration League honors at Arcadia, with a 119 game and 336 set. Team honors were divided with Dependent Claims shooting high game of 488 and Construction a set of 1,399.

Beth Minson and Annetta Mathew tied for high game honors with 136 each in the Ladies Federal League, while the former had high set of 374. Labor's 531 game and a 1,531 set count by FBI topped the teams.

Individual and team totals were split four ways in the War Department League, Gus Mangine, of Castles, with a 154 game and Frank Warman, Lithos, a 388 set. Hydrographics 631 game and Washington Aqueduct's 1,708 set were best for the teams.

QUEEN PIN

Time for the all-star doubles match tonight at Queen Pin has been moved up to 10 o'clock, when Ollie Pacini and Reds Megaw, of Shaffer Flower Shop, meet the Connecticut duo of Jack White and Ben Kosky, holders of the six-game doubles mark, in a challenge event.

Brinkley's took first place in the Southeast League at Queen Pin with a shutout over Stephanson's Bakery. Square Deal Liquor had team counts of 671 and 1,883 to win three over Maryland Market, with Bub Guether's 409 and George Honey's 398 showing the way. Vince Polvinale had 395. Guether's total was worth a free entry in the Reds Megaw Sweepstakes next week. Ernie Hauser's 386 and Ollie Pacini's 368 were other top sets in other matches.

MOUNT RAINIER

John's Restaurant increased its lead in the Mount Rainier League last night by taking a pair of games from Klein's Tavern with high game of 645 and a set of 1816.

LUCKY STRIKE

Lindsey Stott turned in a 158 game and a 411 set to top in the National Capital League, but his team, the Red Circle Food Shop, dropped two to the Lucky Strike Taproom. Reds King had 143 and 379 as he led Shaffer's Flower Shop to a shutout over the Ben Macks.

Busy Week-End Card Awaits D. C. Bowlers

Men and Women to Roll In Events Here and In Norfolk, Baltimore

The biggest sweepstakes week-end of the season confronts bowlers of both sexes with action in Norfolk, Baltimore and Washington on Saturday and Sunday.

The usual brigade of national stars will be active on foreign fronts in the United States classic for women tomorrow in Norfolk and the Julian Easterday Sweepstakes for men Sunday in Baltimore. Locally the Hap Burner Sweeps at Convention Hall, formerly the Charles Bell, will occupy the handicaped bowlers on Sunday.

Lorraine Gulli, two-time winner of the United States event, will lead the District pinwomen, a dozen or more, after the $100 top prize at Norfolk's Boush Street alleys. Ida Simmons is also a two-time winner, while Katherine Vick is defending champion.

In addition to the prize list trophies will be awarded to the bowler making the longest trip for the tourney and the first finisher among pinwomen competing in their first tournament.

The Easterday was a 25-game elimination event last year but it has been reduced to 10 games with a total of $500 in prize money, with $150 to the winner. Ed Blakeney won in 1939 and will lead the D. C. contingent that includes the leading sweepstakes winner, Hokie Smith, the leading money winner, Tony Santini, and the No. 1 bowler, Astor Clarke.

Hap Burtner, who succeeded Charley Bell as Convention Hall manager, will be honored in the "Hap Burtner" Sweepstakes with $150 top prize. Wootton Young, president of Convention Hall, will personally contribute $100 to the prize money.

The scratch figure for the handicap bowlers will be a 128 average. Two G. P. O. bowlers, Charles Barnard and Milton Walker, have won the event in previous years. The ten-game event will be rolled in afternoon and evening blocks.

Player Pinch Won't Hit Detroit For Several Years, Dykes Says

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 1.—Baseball's little round man with the big cigar, Jimmy Dykes, thinks Detroit is certain to feel the pinch of Commissioner K. M. Landis' free agency rulings within three or four years—but he also believes the Tigers may cut loose with a real pennant threat before the rookie famine sets in.

Dykes, manager of the Chicago White Sox, breezed into town today for a short confab with White Sox officials before continuing to California and a pre-training season vacation. He didn't have much to say about his own club, but made it clear he does not agree with those who believe Detroit will need years to recover from the Landis edict which recently cut loose 91 players from the Bengal farm system.

DYKES

"Detroit will be handicapped by loosing some of those kids," Dykes said, "but don't forget they've a number of good young players with the club now and that the management will be taking steps to find replacements for rookies lost.

"If the Tigers get the right breaks in two departments—in pitching and at shortstop—they may come up with a fine club next season. It might be good enough to hold together two or three more years.

"Should a couple of young pitchers come through to help Tommy Bridges and Buck Newsom, they'd have a troublesome mound staff. And I wouldn't be surprised to see Dick Bartell have a great season at shortstop. "I've always liked his hustle. Charley Gehringer has slipped a lot, but he still can play plenty of second base and is always dangerous at the plate. I wouldn't venture a guess whether Rudy York will develop into a good firstsacker or Hank Greenberg into an outfielder—but both can lace that ball the way I like to see it belted. And Catcher George Tebbetts and Outfielder Barney McCosky are good young players."

The pudgy Dykes, at 42, still is on the active playing list, but to all questions whether he'll do any playing he has this stock answer: "The spirit is willing but the old legs are weak—here's hoping I'll be in there all season—in the dugout, I mean."

Sphas to Invade Heurich Sunday

Philadelphia Sphas, the team which nearly caused the disbanding of the Washington Heurich Brewers early in the season, returns to Heurich gymnasium Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

The American League-leading Sphas, who have defeated the Brewers in ten consecutive games since Heurich's entrance into the American League a year ago, turned back the Brewers here in December, 35 to 26. Sponsor Chris Heurich, jr., angered over the showing of his team in that game, set December 26 as a deadline for dismantling his club.

The Brewers, aroused at this challenge, proceeded to settle down and play outstanding basketball and Heurich, pleased with their spirit, recently acquired Phil Rabin, one of the outstanding American League scorers, from the Sphas.

Cotton Rises 5 to 75 Cents Per Bale

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 1—Cotton futures rose 1 to 15 points in a thin market today. After waving back and forth without much stamina most of the session, the price list rallied at the close when buying orders from mills and spot houses hit the ring.

Traders said frankly that they were a good deal more interested in the outcome of agricultural legislation pending in Washington than today's trading. The market also drew a blank from textile centers as far as trading influences were concerned.

Cotton goods business was virtually at a standstill as selling agents waited for converters and printers to place orders. Slack demand for finished goods at retail centers also checked activity. Mills resisted attempts to cut prices.

Excess Reserves Drop $30,000,000

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board said last night that lendable excess reserves of banks declined $30,000,000 to $5,560,000,000 in the week ended January 31.

The decline from the previous week's record high total was due to a combination of technical factors such an increase in money in circulation and an increase in Treasury deposits in the Federal reserve banks.

Newspaper Advertising Best, Air Line Says

Atlanta, Feb. 1.—Newspaper advertising, at regular intervals, is the most productive medium of placing air service before the public, a Delta Air Lines official says.

Declaring at least 75 per cent of Delta's advertising funds are allocated to newspapers, Vice President Laigh C. Parker told the Atlanta Advertising Club that "through no other medium do we believe we can as effectively place our service before the actual traveling public." Haphazard advertising frequently is a poor investment, he said, adding that consistency and regularity of insertions are the secret of any protracted advertising campaign.

Du Pont Wages $97,600,000 Last Year

Wilmington, Del., Feb. 1.—Wages and salaries paid by E. I. duPont de Nemours & Co., and its controlled companies were $97,600,000 in 1939, an increase of 8 per cent over the 1938 total, and upward adjustments in wage rates were made at all operating points, it is said by Lammot duPont, president, in an advance statement today from his forthcoming annual report to the stockholders. He also said that total expenditures in 1939, exclusive of wages and salaries, for the benefit of employes were $21,000,000, or 23 per cent of the combined wage and salary rolls. The average number of employes for the entire year was 49,200, a 4 per cent increase over the 1938 average.

"At the end of the year," Mr. duPont said, "54,800 employes, including about 3,100 engaged in construction of plant additions and new plants, were on the rolls of the company and its controlled companies, an increase of about 17 per cent since 1938."

Pointing out that the company for many years has made substantial expenditures for the benefit of its employes in addition to wages and salaries for time actually worked, Mr. duPont said:

"In 1939 the parent company expended $17,000,000 for employes' disability benefits, life insurance, pensions, vacations, measures for industrial health and safety, bonuses, etc."

This amount, he said, "is in addition to social security taxes payable by the company, aggregating $805,000 for old age benefits and $2,868,000 for unemployment insurance benefits, under Federal and various State statutes; and to statutory compensation, aggregating $321,000, for occupational disabilities." These, he pointed out, brought the total to approximately $21,000,000.

Heavy Building Records Big Gain In Past Week

New York, Feb. 1 (AP).—Heavy engineering construction awards increased during the week ended Tuesday to $62,942,000, a gain of 92 per cent from the previous week and 6 per cent greater than the corresponding week last year, Engineering News-Record reported today.

A renewed flurry of industrial construction caused a substantial rise in private engineering awards which accounted 34 per cent of the total volume, the first time private work has exceeded public building since last October.

Total private awards were almost four times as large as the previous week and nearly double the corresponding week of 1939. Public contracts were 23 per cent larger than the previous week but 29 per cent smaller than a year ago.

Copper Cut Again; Now 11⅝ Cents

New York, Feb. 1 (AP).—The price of copper was reduced ⅜ cent a pound to 11⅝ cents, delivered Connecticut Valley, by a leading producer today.

The price, which corresponds to the quotation at which the metal has been selling in custom fields, is the lowest since last September 5 when 11 cents a pound was quoted. On October 5, the price reached a high of 12½ cents.

The 1939 earnings represented $1.42 on each of $5,833,065 common shares outstanding and were 4.6 per cent on total investment, Republic said.

"Republic's 1939 showing came largely as the result of stimulated domestic business," commented Chairman Tom Girdler. "There has been some increase in export business but very little of it is attributable to the war in Europe.

Money Markets

Foreign Exchange

New York, Feb. 1 (AP).—The British pound abruptly dropped 2½ cents in relation to the dollar today. The decline was one of the severest in weeks and was preceded by small losses earlier this week. Prior to that sterling had maintained a steadily advancing trend. Foreign exchange dealers said that on the surface there was little to explain the sudden change in form. Several suggested an absence of supporting bids in the market, rather than selling pressure, might have caused the drop. The French franc dipped .01½ of a cent and the belga .01 of a cent. Unchanged were the Swiss franc and guilder.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 1.—The stock market took profit-realizing in its stride today and closed on a firm footing. Kaffirs, recently under pressure, recovered sharply. Domestic rails improved and oils came to life with several small gains. British government bonds advanced at the start but later moved unevenly. Electrical, tobacco and textile stocks were bid up in a spotty industrial group.

Paris—Firm bids appeared in the bourse today after a hesitant opening. Domestic equities attracted support, but foreign stocks posted mixed changes. Rentes closed 30 centimes higher to 30 lower.

Amsterdam—American stocks steadied in the bourse after a lower opening. Domestic stocks drifted aimlessly.

Liverpool—Cotton futures came out on top after an erratic session today. Early gains were soon canceled, but prices headed upward again when strength at Alexandria and New York encouraged new support. Final prices were 8 to 9 points higher.

Stocks Dull in Slow Trading; Sterling and French Francs Lower; Bond Market Narrow and Irregular

New York, Feb. 1.—Shares straggled along without leadership today in the dullest session since January 22. Changes in quotations were even narrower than in preceding markets and at the close the 100 key issues were altered only one-twentieth of a point, on the down side. Low-priced stocks attracted a little attention here and here, 9 of the 15 most active shares selling around $10 or lower. Stores lost a little more than other groups while oils, coppers and rails were steadiest.

A new outbreak of weakness in sterling with an attendant loss in francs featured foreign exchange transactions. In commodity sections wheat dropped ¾ to ⅞ cents a bushel, while cotton rose 1 to 11 points on near month covering and a switch by Bombay to the buying side.

The character of trading accurately reflected uncertainties in the business picture, chief of which are a recession in steel output in excess of recent estimates; the fact that the domestic political situation, including third-term possibilities, cannot be considered apart from war influences; the attitude of some professional traders in holding aloof until more definite information is available on foreign selling, and the depressing effect of adverse publicity on business management which, inferentially at least, is coming from certain hearings in progress at Washington.

Moody's Index

Following announcement that Moody's business index for the week was at 105.4 per cent of the 1938 average, a new low since September 18, one well-known forecasting service issued an opinion that the present recession will be mild and short-lived and that it may terminate as soon as mid-March; that as far as domestic business is concerned, the war will either be a neutral factor or, if it is intensified, will become a bullish factor in spring and summer; and that the most uncertain item is the domestic political situation.

Case gained a point in the farm implement division while Caterpillar Tractor was off as much and International Harvester preferred lost about 4. U. S. Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, Consolidated Edison and other pivotals recorded minor losses. Eastern Air Line was up nearly a point in a generally firm aviation section. Continental Can rose fractionally, while American Can eased. Losses ranging to nearly a point occurred in Allied Chemical, duPont and Union Carbide.

Contintential Motors featured in activity at slightly higher levels following announcement of unfilled orders at an all-time high and Studebaker, which has shared in important French orders recently, was the second most active stock, unchanged on the day, however.

Transit Bonds in Demand

Apart from a small buying spurt in local traction bonds, the listed market continued on its dull way today. Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit bonds and Interborough issues were in demand on the further extension of time for deposits under the unification plan, as it applies to B. M. T. issues. Gains to 3 points were recorded. Other departments of the market were neglected, and total turnover was only $5,060,000.

The general corporate list showed small gains and losses in equal numbers. The cheaper rails were mildly uncertain, while better priced interest-payers tended to advance. Holding company groups were not much changed, but some share privilege issues drifted lower.

Scandinavian bonds were in modest demand. The appeal of President Kallio for peace sent Finland 6s up up a fraction. Canadian and Australian loans were quiet, and German issues hardly appeared on the bond tape. Colombian bonds came into renewed demand in the Latin-American group, but few others attracted any attention.

Long term United States Treasury securities advanced ponderously in dull trading, with the gains ranging to ¼ point.

Wheat Prices Continue to Lower Levels

December Contracts Fall Below 96 Cents a Bushel

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 1.—The price slump which has taken about 11 cents from the value of a bushel of wheat so far in 1940 continued today. Wheat lost a cent as May contracts fell below 98 for the first time since December 12. Although rallying slightly in late dealings, the market closed ¼@⅞ lower than yesterday with May at 96@96⅛, and July 93¼@93⅝. These prices were 13 to 14 cents below the season's highs established in December.

Forecast of rain or snow in parts of the Southwestern hard winter wheat belt and liquidation of grain that has been held under Government loans for almost a year induced most of the selling.

Corn and rye were weaker than wheat. Corn closed ⅛@1¼ lower, May 54¾@54⅞, July 54½@54⅝, rye was 1⅜@1⅝ lower, oats ½@⅝ down, soy beans 1⅛@1¼ off and lard unchanged.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Whist players handle the cards better than contract players; they have to, for there is no exposed dummy to help them along. Double-dummy problems are by far the hardest to solve. Here is one composed by H. W. Wilson:

NORTH: ♠ A Q 6 ♡ None ♢ A 8 4 ♣ 3
WEST: ♠ K 2 ♡ K ♢ J 7 6 ♣ K
EAST: ♠ 7 4 3 ♡ Q ♢ 5 3 2 ♣ None
SOUTH: ♠ J ♡ A J 2 ♢ Q 10 ♣ A

Spades are trumps. South leads. North and South must win seven tricks against any defense.

Trick one. South leads the diamond ten, West covers and North wins with the ace. If West ducks, Souths ten wins; North plays the four. South leads the diamond queen. North plays the eight, and the queen wins. South continues with trick three.

Trick two: North leads the diamond four, and South's queen wins. Trick three: South leads a heart and North trumps with the six. Trick four: North leads his high diamond, and South discards the club ace. Trick five: North leads a club; South's jack overruffs East. Trick six: South leads a heart, West trumps with the deuce, and North's trump queen wins. If West trumps with the king, North wins with the ace. Trick seven: North leads high trump.

"We the People's" house dick, Ross Worthington, is in town, fresh from a siege in Baltimore with the City of Flint and ready for a bit of sleuthing in the interests of one of the most popular radio ideas on the air.

Worthington is the chief of the research division maintained by "We the People" to check the authenticity of every participant on the program. Fully 95 per cent of "We the People" guests are brought to the attention of Gabriel Heatter via the mail. In many instances these people will apply themselves, although Worthington says it is more common to have friends or neighbors send in letters suggesting a participant.

Gabriel Heatter, who conducts the interesting interviews with unusual people on "We the People" is an ex-newspaperman, and while he cannot spare the time for personal investigation he insists that his subjects on the program be authentic to the smallest detail. That's where Worthington comes in.

Worthington lives out of a suitcase and is personally acquainted with every porter on every railroad in the country. He explored the bayou region of Louisiana to dig up one Olivia, a direct descendent of Evangeline, the heroine of Longfellow's famous epic. A friend had tipped off "We the People" that Longfellow had missed a couple of fairly important facts in his great work, and Olivia could prove it. Worthington found Olivia, heard his story, checked it to the last detail possible, and one night the radio audience heard Olivia tell the story of Evangeline, differing from Longfellow's tale in only one feature—the poem has a happy ending, but Olivia said Evangeline's lover married while they were separated and would have no truck with his Arcadia sweetheart.

Worthington traveled to Fort Huachua, Ariz., to interview the last of the Indian scouts, a Sergt. Riley. He once traveled 9,780 miles by auto in 38 days, interviewing 302 people—and didn't use one on his program. Everybody he talks to, of course, has some unusual trait. He, of all things, chases fire engines.

THE DRAGON'S TEETH
By ELLERY QUEEN

Chapter 29

"MY JOB is to get the facts. It's the D.A.'s job to put them together." The old man eyed Beau. "By the way, don't you think it's time you hired a good criminal lawyer?"

Beau began to race around the room.

"It's as strong a circumstantial case as I've ever seen, Beau," said the Inspector soberly.

"You've got it all wrong, I tell you. When you hear Kerrie's story, you'll see!"

"It will have to be more than a story, I'm afraid." The Inspector rose. "Beau, you know how friendly your father and I were. And I've always looked on you as a sort of second son. Why don't you tell me what you know, so I can help you?"

"I don't know anything about it," snapped Beau. "Nor does Kerrie!"

"There's something else behind this. Where did you go a while back? What were you looking for? Who'd you see? Beau, you can trust me—"

Beau was silent.

"You're putting me in a rotten spot," said the Inspector gently. "You registered here in Ellery's name and, even granting it was with El's permission, that drags in a lot of personal considerations. I may even have to step out of the case because you did that. I've suppressed facts myself tonight. I've taken possession of the registration card and threatened all sorts of extra-legal punishments to those in the hotel who know the name you registered under. The newspaper boys are still in the dark about that. But they won't be for long. At least tell me why you used my son's name, so I'll be prepared with an explanation."

"Pop, I can't," said Beau hoarsely. "Pop . . . did you tell Kerrie?"

"Your wife?" the Inspector's eyes narrowed. "Do you mean to stand there and tell me your own wife doesn't know who you are?"

"She thinks I'm Ellery Queen," confessed Beau. "Ellery knows about it. In fact, it was his idea."

KERRIE lay on one of the twin beds holding on to Violet Day's hand. A nurse and a doctor stood by. There was a pungent odor of ammonium carbonate in the air. Leaning against the wall was Sergt. Velie.

Kerrie was the first to move. Her head swiveled, froze. But a moment later she sat up eagerly.

"Darling, you were so long." She sounded tired.

Beau started for the bed, but the inspector touched his arm. "No."

"Doc, would you mind waiting in the next room?" said the inspector. "You, too, Nurse."

"Well, I'm waiting," said Inspector Queen.

Kerrie moistened her dry lips.

"It's all right, Kerrie," said Beau in a low voice. "It's all right to talk now. Tell just what happened."

Her glance was grateful. Vi took her hand again. Inspector Queen nodded to the sergeant, who took a notebook and pencil out and prepared to write.

Kerrie told simply of the attempts to murder her, her suspicions of Margo, her purchase of the revolver, her discovery in the garage when she was trapped that the revolver had been stolen from the pocket of her roadster. She told of Beau's proposal and of their elopement.

"One moment." The inspector glanced at Beau. "You thought the Cole woman was behind these attacks, too?"

"I know she was."

"How do you know?"

"She told me so."

"What!" The inspector was incredulous.

"I made love to her," said Beau flatly. "I pretended to be on her side . . . for a price. I told her I was going to marry Kerrie, so that Kerrie's share of the estate would be lost and would revert to Margo. We made a deal in which Margo was to kick back a certain part of Kerrie's share to me."

"Why?" demanded the old man. Why'd you do this?"

Because my chief concern was to save Kerrie's life. Margo hated her, because of me and because of the money. If I could put the dough in her hands and convince her I loved her, not Kerrie, Kerrie's life would be safe."

"The only thing I didn't know," continued Beau, "was that Margo was working with someone else. Go on, Kerrie."

Kerrie went on. She told about their arrival at the Villanoy, how Beau left her, and how Margo came.

"I was sitting in the armchair by the window and she came over and stood behind me, still gloating over the trick she said she and Ellery"—the inspector winced—"had played on me. Somehow she got round to talking about the attacks on my life—"

"Yes? What did she say, exactly?"

"As far as I remember, she said Ellery saved my life by marrying me. 'If you hadn't been lucky,' she said, 'you'd have been dead long before now.' And she went on to say that the visit to my room that night, the accident to my horse, my being locked in the garage and nearly gassed, were not accidents at all. When I said I suspected all along she was responsible, she laughed and said: 'But it wasn't only I who planned those attacks. It was I—and somebody else.' And just as she was about to tell me who the other one was—the shots . . ."

She stopped, her chin quivering.

"Ah, the shots," said the Inspector politely. "But I thought you two were along in the sitting room."

"We were," she said in a faint voice. "The shots came across the court, through my window, over my head, striking Margo, who was standing behind my chair. That other window, my window, I, Margo, were all in one straight line."

The Inspector glanced pityingly at Beau. But Beau was lighting a cigarette with shaking hands.

"Suppose you show me just how it happened," the old man sighed.

Beau jumped forward to help Kerrie off the bed. Her fingers coiled tightly in his. The Inspector looked away, and Sergt. Velie opened the door for them. They all went into the sitting room.

Inspector Queen spent some time over Kerrie's story. He had her sit in the armchair as she claimed to have sat at the moment of the shooting. He checked the position of the body. He made Kerrie retell her story four times.

"A hand threw the gun in through my window, I tell you!" moaned Kerrie. "Why won't you believe me?"

"But you don't seem to know whether the hand was a man's or a woman's."

"I was in the light, and the court and that room there were in darkness. I could hardly see. But I made out the flash of a hand. How could I tell whether it was a man's or a woman's?"

The Inspector grunted. The doctor gave him a warning look and insisted on Kerrie's returning to the bedroom to lie down again. The old man nodded and, glancing at Sergt. Velie, who winked, went outside without explanation.

But Beau knew he had gone to examine Room 1726. He went back into the bedroom with Kerrie and sat down on the bed, and she curled up in his arms and closed her eyes. Neither said anything.

LLOYD GOOSSENS arrived shortly after the Inspector went out, and considerably later, Edmund De Carlos marched in.

Goossens was smoking his pipe with nervous embarrassment, rubbing his unshaven cheeks; he had apparently been roused from his bed by the Inspector's summons. De Carlos's skin was leaden, his beard gaunt. But there was a queer sparkle in the wide eyes behind his spectacles.

The Sergeant kept them in the sitting room, where they occupied themselves chiefly in endeavoring to avoid the blood-stained spot on the rug as they paced in aimless circles.

Beau came out of the bedroom and the two men bombarded him with questions. He told them what had happened and then took Goossens aside, to De Carlos's annoyance. "What do you think?"

Goossens shook his head. "It looks bad, Mr. Queen. A hard story to believe. Especially without evidence to confirm it. If I were you, I'd engage the best lawyer in New York. In fact, if you'd like me to suggest counsel for Mrs. Queen—"

"Thanks. Don't you think it's a bit premature?" said Beau curtly.

When the Inspector returned, he conferred with De Carlos and the lawyer for some time in the sitting room. Finally they all went into the bedroom.

It was a bad moment. De Carlos and Goossens hanging back, avoiding Kerrie's staring eyes. But the Inspector was brisk.

"I'll be frank with you," he said to Kerrie and Beau. "There's no evidence of 1726 having been occupied tonight except a cigaret butt, a burnt match-stick, and some ashes. The maid on duty says she prepared the room late this evening, and there's a record of a wired reservation. But the maid isn't sure she mightn't have overlooked the cigaret, and there's a clear record that no one showed up tonight to occupy the room. Beau."

"Well?"

"There was a light in 1726 this evening. Is that where you went? Is that your cigaret butt in there?"

Beau said: "Who, me?"

The inspector shrugged. "Anyway, the evidence doesn't begin to bolster the story."

"But it's true," said Kerrie slowly. "I tell you—"

Beau shook his head at her.

The inspector stroked his mustache with an agitated forefinger. "I'll have to hold you," he said.

WHEN the inspector had left, hurriedly and with a murderous glance at Beau, Goossens coughed and said: "Mrs. Queen, as—as co-executor of the Cole estate it's my duty to inform you that your marriage today eliminates you from further participation in the income from your uncle's estate. There are certain matters, papers . . . If there's anything I can do in the way of legal advice, of course . . . Dreadfully sorry . . ."

He left, like the inspector, in a sort of flight.

"What are you hanging around for, pop-eyed?" demanded Beau, eying De Carlos with angry dislike.

De Carlos smiled nervously. "I'd like—I'd like to speak to you alone, Mr. Queen."

"Scram."

"I must. It's a private matter—"

"It'll have to wait. Beat it, will you?"

Beau glared at him. The man made a weird picture, with his brushlike hair, his beard, his glittering teeth and spectacles, a certain air of mingled intentness, triumph, and anxiety.

"Meet you in my office in Times Square in half an hour," said Beau on impulse. "I'll leave word with the night man to let you in."

"Thank you." De Carlos bowed to Kerrie, smiling or seeming to smile in his beard, and scurried out.

"Ellery. Don't go," said Kerrie tiredly. Her arms were dead weights about his neck.

"I've got to, funny-face." Beau signalled to Vi over Kerrie's head. "Vi won't leave you. Will you, Vi?"

"What do you think I am? Of course not!" said Vi with an attempt at cheerfulness. "I don't like the dump I'm in, anyway."

"You get the doc to give you a shot of something," Beau told Kerrie gently. "You need a pocketful of sleep."

She hung on to him, whimpering.

"Kerrie. You know I love you, don't you?" She hugged him. "You don't believe a single word of what—she told you tonight, do you?" Kerrie shook her head violently. "You know I'm in there batting for you a thousand per cent, don't you?" She nodded, empty of words. "Then leave everything to me and don't worry."

He kissed her and rose. Kerrie twisted her body on the bed and buried her face in the pillow. Beau cracked his knuckles in a sort of baffled agony. Then he kissed her again and ran out.

BEAU STOPPED on the sidewalk outside the hotel to cup his hands around a cigarette.

He glanced swiftly about. The street was deserted. An occasional cab cruised by. By his wristwatch it was almost four o'clock. He tossed the match away and began to walk briskly towards Broadway. The night air had a chilly touch; he turned the collar of his jacket up.

He slipped into an all-night drug store, went into a phone booth, shut the door tightly, and called Mr. Ellery Queen's home telephone number.

Ellery answered almost at once. "It's Beau. Weren't you in bed?"

"I've been thinking. What's up?"

"Plenty. Listen, El, De Carlos showed up at the Villanoy and says he's got to have a private chin with me. I played a hunch and told him to meet me at the office right away. You want to sit in?"

"Oh, yes, indeed," said Mr. Queen with a certain grimness. "Any idea what's stirring?"

"No. Grab a cab and get down here as fast as you can."

"I'll be there in time. How's Kerrie?"

Beau hung up.

He strode to Times Square, crossed the street, pounded on the door of his office building.

A yawning watchman admitted him. "Hey, Joe. I expect a man by the name of De Carlos to blow in soon. Let him in. He'll ask for Mr. Queen. Take him up to our office."

"Sure thing, Mr. Rummel. Say, don't you ever sleep?"

"Don't answer any questions. Get me?"

Bandit Slugs Banker, Flees With $8,000

Cashier Stooping to Open Vault Attacked In Suothwestern Va.

By the Associated Press

Meadowview, Va., Feb. 1.—The Meadowview branch of the Bank of Damascus was robbed of between $8,000 and $10,000 after Charles W. Arnold, assistant cashier in charge of the branch, had been slugged on the head as he opened the vault this morning.

Officers of the bank, a State institution, said the exact amount stolen could be immediately determined, but that it was insured.

Sheriff Trigg Woodward, of Washington County, who came here from Abingdon to investigate, said fingerprints found on a grilled door were being checked. F. B. I. agents were notified.

Arnold was treated at a hospital at Abingdon, where it was said his injuries were not serious, barring a possible concussion. The banker, who lives at Abingdon, had come to Meadowview early to bring his daughter to work.

Lee K. Haynes, a director, said he went to the bank on a personal errand about 8:15 a. m. and while in another room heard a faint cry for help. He found Arnold dazed and holding on to the grilled door. Arnold told him he had just finished manipulating the combination to the inner vault door and while in a stooping position was struck with a blunt instrument. He said he saw no one but noted a faint reflection of a figure just before he was struck.

Transfer of Children's Bureau to McNutt In Reorganization Is Believed to Be Unlikely

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

The President's third reorganization order, expected to be sent to Congress this session, will disappoint the avowed hope of Federal Security Administrator McNutt to obtain control of the Children's Bureau of the Labor Department, it was predicted yesterday by informed sources.

At the same time, current reports were discounted that the order would return the U. S. Employment Service, now consolidated with the Social Security Board Unemployment Compensation Bureau, to the Labor Department, where it operated prior to last summer's reorganization program.

Even FSA officials, who have not hesitated to express their desire to see the Children's Bureau transferred to the new agency, admitted the much-discussed move was highly doubtful.

They said, however, that the FSA might gain from another projected transfer—the consolidation into a single organization under McNutt of the various Governmental units concerned with consumer problems.

Such a merger, it was indicated, might be the first step toward creation of a specific agency to serve consumers as a separate group. Establishment of such an organization has been urged for many years by interested groups inside and outside the Government.

The proposed consolidation would affect the consumer's council division of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, the consumer's council of the Interior Department and a scattering of units in other establishments.

Another rumored interdepartmental shift which officials consider doubful is the transfer of the Immigration and Naturalization Service from the Labor to the Justice Department. Former Attorney General Murphy was reported opposed to the idea and other Justice Department executives are believed unwilling to assume direction of the agency. The Labor Department is anxious to retain the service.

Also discounted were reports that the Commerce Department would regain control of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, formerly in the department as the Aeronautics Branch and later as the Bureau of Air Commerce, and that the same department's Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation would be transferred to the Maritime Commission.

Concensus of many informed officials was that the transfer of the Forest Service from the Agriculture to the Interior Department was almost a certainty.

The President's order affecting intradepartmental changes may include a reshuffling of the functions of three Interior Department agencies—the Bureau of Mines, the Geological Survey and the Oil Administration—and the abolition of the Treasury Alcohol Administration by dividing its functions between the Federal Trade Commission and the Internal Revenue Bureau.

During Washington's cold spell, Ernest Gruening, Governor of Alaska now visiting here, was asked if he didn't want to return to the warmth of his northern possession.

Commenting on the purpose of the National Christian Mission, which will be held in 20 principal cities from this September until March, 1941, Dr. Raphael H. Miller, pastor of the National City Christian Church and chairman of the local committee, said yesterday:

"This is the voice of the evangelical churches bound together in a great crusade to express the mind and purpose of American Christians for the reorganization of a truly Christian civilization.

Murphy, Mrs. Morgenthau Receive Refunds On U. S. Taxes; Tobacco Firm Gets $900,000

By the Associated Press

Supreme Court Justice Murphy and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., were listed yesterday among thousands of taxpayers who gave Uncle Sam too much money and got some of it back.

Murphy was awarded a $1,788 refund on his income tax and Mrs. Morgenthau, wife of the Treasury Secretary, $536 in gift taxes.

Snite Gets Refund

The many smaller ones went to such people as Alfred E. Smith, $789; Frederick B. Snite, jr., the Chicagoan who lives in an "iron lung," $1,840; Ambassador Joseph E. Grew, Tokyo, $12,880, and Marlene Dietrich, the movie star, $37,902.

The refunds were due chiefly to such things as bad addition and failure to take various kinds of legal deductions.

Gov. and Mrs. Herbert Lehman of New York were awarded a total of $2,473. Former Senator Jesse H. Metcalfe, of Rhode Island, was returned $3,465. Cyrus S. Eaton, of Cleveland, the steel magnate, was repaid $5,612.

Names associated with the country's wealth appeared on the list, which the Treasury reported to Congress. The estate of William K. Vanderbilt was returned $88,522. Irenee duPont was repaid $30,896, and Pierre S. duPont $1,501.

Corporation Gets $948,000

Among the larger refunds was $948,114 to the Brown-Williamson Tobacco Corporation, Louisville, Ky. This represented overpayment of tobacco taxes and was returned through three collection districts, Kentucky, Virginia and North Carolina.

The estate of George D. Pratt at Brooklyn was repaid $428,833. The American Securities Investing Corporation, New York, won back $385,283, and the Anglo-Canadian Copper Mining & Refining Co., of Copper Cliff, Ontario, Canada, $289,831.

The Lackawanna Steel Co., of Lackawanna, N. Y., was returned $291,454, and the American Sugar Refining Co., New York, $555,384. The latter refund, as you might guess, was for sugar taxes.

The largest Federal tax refund in the District during the fiscal year 1939 went to the Welfare and Recreational Association, which operates cafeterias and other concessions for Government employes. It was $107,700.
